Durocher Receives Warm Welcome From Actress Laraine Day

Hollywood, Nov. 27 — (AP) — Leo Durocher arrived today for a two months' stay, to a warm welcome from Laraine Day.

Fresh from signing a new contract to manage Brooklyn's National League baseball Dodgers, Leo was greeted most effusively as he stepped from the plane in the after-midnight darkness. He and the actress hugged and kissed but declined comment on any romance.

Durocher's wife, Grace, won a divorce in St. Louis Oct. 1, 1943. Among her charges was one that he was "constantly of a nagging disposition" — a claim major league umpires have had frequent occasion to echo.

English System of Pooled Milk Has Place in Canada Says Cheese Producers' Head

W. O. Coon Addresses Annual Meeting of Producers at Stirling

The English system of pooled milk whereby the producer receives the same price for his milk regardless of the branch of the industry to which it goes, has a place in Ontario despite the fact that Canada is an exporting nation.

This was the thought expressed to members of the Hastings County Cheese Producers' Association who were addressed at their annual meeting in Stirling Tuesday afternoon by W. O. Coon, president of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association. The meeting was well attended by county producers.

The speaker had high praise for the system of milk pooling in England which he said had brought order out of chaos in that country. He went on to describe the operation of the English system which is conducted by two milk boards, one in England and Wales and the other in Scotland. With the British Ministry of Food setting the price, these two boards carry out the entire operation of milk purchases and distribution.

Reduces Transport Costs

"It makes no difference to the English farmer to what particular branch of the industry his milk goes," stated Mr. Coon. "One truck picks up all milk from one particular area and as a result transportation costs are cut. All milk possible is put through the bottle trade and if there is a surplus the milk is processed."

Decision of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association to enter into the export cheese business and into the domestic cheese trade in Canada was defended by Mr. Coon, who also told of the association efforts to secure a higher price for their cheese product.

During the past season the association had exported 42,000 boxes of cheese, according to Mr. Coon. Returns from this would not be too high as the margin was only 7-16 cent per pound, but it was held the association would make some money.

Reference was also made by the speaker to the "talked-of" purchase of the Belleville Cheddar Cheese by the Cheese Producers' Association as a wholesale outlet for domestic cheese. Under present controls, however, it was felt by the Association executive that this was not the proper time to tie up Association funds and following controversy over price the deal had been called off.

Secretary-treasurer of the Association, Mr. S. L. Joss, had been the object of criticism when it was learned that he was a shareholder in the Belleville Cheddar Cheese and as a result had expressed his intention of resigning from his position as secretary. Mr. Joss had asked for and received a two-third confidence vote of the executive.

"This Association is neither supporting nor criticizing Mr. Joss," Mr. Coon stated. "He has a perfect right to invest his money wherever he wishes."

Inquiry Good Publicity

The speaker felt that the cheese industry would receive some good publicity as result of the Royal Commission which had been appointed to inquire into costs in all branches of milk production. All facts would be brought out but it was stated this would cost the cheese industry money as a lawyer must be present to look after the industry's interests.

Turning again to export cheese the speaker held that Canadian cheese in England was poorly marketed, there being no distinction between Canadian and New Zealand cheese, but all being referred to as Empire Cheese. Under present procedure English retailers have no choice in the cheese they receive but must take whatever is forthcoming from their suppliers. Mr. Coon believed that Canadian cheese producers should have a representative in England to look after their product, to see that it is received in good shape and to guarantee a constant supply. This also held true for poultry and egg products.

Bottle Trade Opposed.

Phil Carr, Rawdon township, stated that he was interested in the milk pooling scheme and asked if anything could be worked out in Ontario.

In reply Mr. Coon stated the matter had been broached at a joint meeting of the three branches of the milk industry. The cheese and concentrated milk branches had voted unanimously for the pooling of milk, while with one or two exceptions the bottle trade men had been opposed. A committee had been formed to go into the matter, but these men had not yet reported.

Speaking briefly at the meeting Roscoe Robson, M.L.A. for East Hastings, stated that the provincial government was not anxious to continue its present two cents per pound subsidy on all grades of cheese. "In all probability the subsidy will be given in a different way next year, possibly on a graded milk scale," stated Mr. Robson.

Subsidy Proposal Shelved.

The matter of paying a subsidy on graded milk instead of on cheese had been considered by the provincial government last year, but was laid over owing to inability of farmers securing the proper equipment, it was stated.

In reply Mr. Coon assured that cheese producers had been grateful for the two-cent subsidy but maintained that subsidy payment on graded milk would have one weakness. To successfully operate such a scheme large factories were needed to allow the different grades of milk to be processed separately.

Asked by Mr. Robson if producers felt the subsidy should be paid on a quality basis or if they were satisfied as is, Mr. Coon replied that this was a difficult question to answer. "The producers are anxious to raise the quality of milk wherever possible," he said.

Cheese Output Lower

H. Lynn Fair, agricultural representative, quoted cheese production figures for the county and stated that at the present time Hastings was approximately one and one-half millions of pounds behind the corresponding date last year. The butter make was also down approximately 150,000 pounds, the two resulting in a considerable financial loss for the farmer.

During the winter considerable efforts would be made by his department to encourage calfhoood vaccination, he said. This would be done through schools and factories with efforts to be made to visit each factory on the day of their annual meeting.

Honorary president of the Association Mr. Ed. Pyear commented on the splendid attendance of farmers at the meeting stating that this indicated producers were taking an interest in their own affairs. He believed that the provincial association was making an honest effort to get more money for cheese but felt the only way was to gain control over the sale of their product.

Wants Controls Eliminated

"Farmers are getting discouraged," he said. "It is high time controls were done away with. The farmer has to sell on a closed market, while many of his requirements have to be purchased on an open market."

Clem Ketcheson, Sidney township, was re-elected president of the county association, while W. E. Bateman, Tweed, was named vice president and Bert Finkle, secretary treasurer.

Directors appointed were as follows: Sidney, Ernest Kells; Thurlow, Cecil Ketcheson; Tyendinaga, Ed. Lazier; Rawdon, Phil Carr; Huntingdon, Morley Haggerty; Hungerford, Harry Coulter; Marmora, John A. Bell; Madoc, James Nickle; Elzevir, James Moore. Ed. Pyear was named as representative on the county agricultural committee, while George McCullough and Berson Mitts were re-named as auditors.

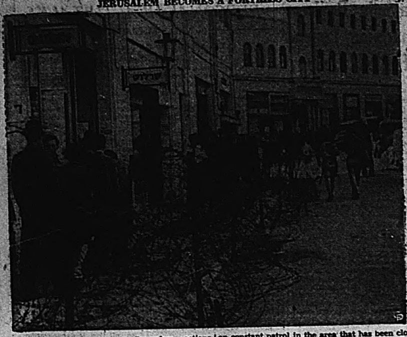
JERUSALEM BECOMES A FORTRESS CITY



As disturbances continue in Jerusalem, sections of the city where the post office and other important buildings are located have been protected with barricades of barbed wire. The small street behind the general post office on the edge of the "fortress area" is so narrow that there is hardly room to walk in double line. Armored cars and police are on constant patrol in the area that has been closed to traffic and pedestrians. Meanwhile, outbursts of violence continue. A British army officer was reported, shot and seriously wounded near Beith Dajan while travelling in a jeep from Sarofand to Haifa. Automatic weapons' fire was also directed against an army truck in the same area but no casualties were reported.

Free Enterprise, Competition Best for Furniture Industry

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 27 — (CP) — A "working party" of labor, management and consumer representatives set up by the labor government to investigate the furniture industry has reported that free enterprise and competition are needed to keep the industry running at its best.

With certain safeguards to protect the public interest, competition should be given free play, it told Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade.

"This industry, serving an intensely individual want, and dependent on the vagaries of public taste, cannot function effectively unless enterprise can earn a suitable remard."

Utility furniture — standardized models of small size and moderate cost — and price control should stay until supplies come up to demand. The working party recommended. After everyone has had a chance to buy, however, the controls should be dropped.

Find Shocking Conditions

Best way to ensure long-term efficiency in the industry is "to stimulate imaginative enterprise and raise the general ability of management and labor, rather than to hedge it round with negative restrictions and controls."

The working party found "shocking conditions" in many of the small firms which are a significant section of the industry. In 1938 more than 3,000 firms employed fewer than 10 men each.

"There is a tendency in some quarters to sentimentalize about small firms and to represent them all as being craftsmen producing the finest furniture.

"In fact, a relatively small proportion are in this category and far too many are producing shoddy furniture under shocking conditions."

The view was current in the trade that small firms are "a main source of black market supplies" and that their present high wage levels are "fed by the black market."

NAZI PLOT TO

Walker said in the Call-Bulletin story that an F.B.I. memorandum detailing German and Japanese espionage activities in the United States prior to the Pearl Harbor attack was highlighted by information on the plot against the King and Queen.

There was no immediate word from London to indicate whether the King and Queen ever knew of the plot. Last night, when the story first broke, they were attending a dance at Buckingham Palace.

Entirely New

London, Nov. 27 (CP Cable)—An official at Buckingham Palace today chuckled over San Francisco and Washington reports that two Germans had plotted to assassinate the King and Queen during their Royal tour to Canada and the United States in 1939.

"We have not heard anything about this," the official said. "It is entirely new."

And Scotland Yard said that nothing was known of any attempt "as far as we know."

The news of the purported plot by the Germans, identified in United States stories as Fritz Wiedemann, then German Consul-General at San Francisco, and Herman Schwinn, was first announced by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and published in a copyrighted story by the San Francisco Call-Bulletin.

The story of the plot, which the F.B.I. stressed the Germans made no attempt to carry out, broke as the King and Queen attended a dance in Buckingham Palace.

London's morning papers, with the exception of The Daily Express and The Daily Graphic "ignored" the story.

The Express carried a brief story on page 1 headlined: "Nazi plot to kill King." The evening Standard front-paged it briefly and The Evening Star used the story on page three. The Evening News did not carry the report.

WAR LABOR BOARD

The Algoma and Dosco plants were involved in the 1943 strike which was settled by the establishment of a rate of 59 cents at both plants. The Algoma base rate later increased to 64 1-2 cents as the result of a five-cent award by the Ontario War Labor Board and an increase in the cost of living bonus. The Nova Scotia Board turned down the union's application for a similar increase to the Sydney workers.

In today's decision the National Board took the positon that the principle of uniformity had been recognized in the Order-in-Council passed to end the 1943 strike and had been further endorsed by action of the National Board on wages for maintenance workers in the two plants.

"In our view ,and with much respect, the evidence and the weight of evidence supports the union's contention that a gross inequality existed in the wage rates of the production workers at Sydney," the board said in today's finding.

The schedule of increases directed is: less than 61 cents, 5 cents; 61 to 64 1-2, 4; 65 to 67, 3 1-2; 67 1-2 to 69 1-2, 3; up to 72, 2 1-2; 72 1-2 to 74 1-2, 2; 75 to 77, 1 1-2; 77 1-2 to 79 1-2, 1; 80 to 89 1-2, 1-2; 90 or more, none.

Laymen's Association Meets

A meeting of the Laymen's Association was held Sunday evening at the home of Mr. Francis John. Mr. Leslie Claus gave a much-appreciated address on the life and poetry of Pauline Johnson. One of the interesting anecdotes the speaker related was about the poet's parents. When Chief Johnson built his new home "Chiefswood" for his English bride, he wished the front of the house to face the Grand River. Mrs. Johnson wanted the front of the house to face the road. Both won out this unique house has two similar front entrances, one facing the road the other the Grand River. Refreshments brought to a close a very enjoyable evening.

CHRISTMAS FOR BRITONS PROMISES TO BE BEST IN A LONG TIME

There were no toys manufactured for British children during the war years but this year will be different. Mutual Understanding

What a power for mutual understanding and appreciation that crosses boundaries the tourist trade is, was indicated in a speech to the Associated Boards of Trade and Chamber of Commerce in Toronto on Tuesday by Travel Minister Welsh of Ontario. Peoples such as those of the United States and Canada understand one another and tourist travel across the International Boundary is one of the marks of western world civilization. There has always been this kindly intercourse of these peoples growing up in peace side by side and it continues to expand.

Travel Minister Welsh at the Toronto meeting referred to the problems of the United Nations which are endeavoring to build a world of understanding and enduring peaceful association. He said that if Russia opened her doors as Ontario does to thousands of tourists, Russian fear and suspicion of the outside world would be dispelled within five years. And he added that such an arrangement of interchange of travel facilities and privileges would mean that the problems of the United Nations would disappear almost overnight.

Today the world has privileges which mankind the earth over was not always privileged to enjoy. Modern means of travel open up the wide world swiftly. Every province or state and every individual can participate in the kindly neighborly associations of the peoples of North America. More and more closely together in trade and travel the nations of the world are being bound and it makes no difference whether they are actual neighbors or not, because in reality all nations are becoming the neighbors of others no matter how far they are apart geographically. That is the trend which is unmistakably seen. Discoveries of the last generation have done marvels so that today those in the farthest-away countries speak and understand mutual modern language of science and have the same thoughts. Of course the era of scientific development with the era of the plane that makes of little avail the difference of space, the era of the fast transcontinental trains and fast ocean liners, has somewhat outstripped the international understandings. Yet there is the potent influence in the United Nations to bring all peoples into comprehending the benefits of mutual understanding and good will and fraternizing.

So the American who tours in Canada and the Canadian who goes off on a trip to the United States are playing their part in the great world movement of closer understanding.

The tourist and touring are thoroughly modern expressions of the desire to see and understand and help the world in which we live.

New Citizen Army

Britain's Territorial Army, to be reconstituted on the 1st of January, will have armoured formations and an airborne division. The Secretary of State for War, Mr. Bellenger, describing its defensive role in the House of Commons, said that in any future war the immediate threat would be from the air and the vital commitment of anti-aircraft artillery would fall on the Territorial Army. The Territorial Army would also provide the units needed by the Regular Army to convert it into a properly balanced force ready for battle. It would also fall to the Territorials to provide the second line to the Regular Army on a basis on which the Army could expand in a war. This will entail the provision not only of an infantry division but an armored formation, an airborne division and the necessary supporting corps and army troops. The main responsibility of the Territorial Army is thus switched from a "backing up" role to the primary defence of the country against air attack and the whole organization will be stepped up in line with modern warfare.

The permanent staff must necessarily be larger than before the war, when the Territorial Army was completely a voluntary citizen army, but even so will not exceed two percent of the whole unit establishment. Mr. Bellenger said that the commanders would be of the best material possible — mainly from those who served in the war that has just ended. Recruitment will open next spring. Eventually, as a result of compulsory service, the Territorial Army will in addition contain a large compulsory element which will begin to reach units in the summer of 1950.

The administration will continue to be entrusted to the County Territorial Associations and in view of the exacting and complex nature of their work, all the associations will include in an advisory capacity representatives of all types of local government bodies, trade unions, employers' associations and local education authorities.

Pictures From Space

Wonders will never cease. The other day a V2 rocket carrying a camera shot up to a height of 65 miles into space where nothing from this earth probably has ever been before unless a rocket in the late war. There it photographed the earth and that picture came through the crash at the end of the rocket journey. Now man has an idea of what the earth looks like in stellar space.

Hitherto men's views of earth have been taken on the earth or in planes. Now the unknown has been invaded and this may be but the beginning of photography in space far above this rolling ball of earth with cameras bombing our earthly sphere.

The setting up of the photographic apparatus so as to catch the earth's rim as one of the pictures showed was a fine piece of exactness of human work.

Preview of Their Future

At Matlock, in Derbyshire, the local juvenile employment committee has just held a vocational guidance exhibition—the first of its kind in Britain. Children due to leave school in the next two years saw displays of local activities including forging and stamping of aircraft parts, cotton spinning, nursing, quarrying, printing, motor-engineering, house decorating and many other vocations. Representatives of various industrial firms were there to explain the jobs. Children and parents thus obtained a sound and realistic idea of the alternatives before them and have a better chance to select a really congenial career.

No Discipline!

A year or so ago a new jail was opened at Tortworth, in England, and officials called it "a remarkable experiment in penal reform." It has no walls, nor iron bars; not much to prevent a dissatisfied guest from walking out, although those confined there include criminals serving long terms.

Recently several prisoners escaped, but were picked up and returned to custody. The London Express interviewed one of them, a chap who once tried to murder a policeman, and he said: "Why do you keep us in a place like this? Give us high walls and prison bars and a bit of discipline; then we know where we are." Another prisoner had a similar complaint. "There is no discipline here," he declared.

This seems to us a remarkable state of affairs, and we should consult the men most concerned before we change the traditional appurtenances of our prisons.

One of the most interesting finds in the Huron Indian bone pit Cahiague was a fractured Chinese willow pattern plate, says Midland Free Press Herald. That did not prove that the ancient Hurons were Chinese in origin, nor even that they had a Chinese guest. The archeologists did not even suggest that Champlain had brought it along with him when he visited the Indian stronghold in 1615. No, it was not even as exciting as that. It was probably left there by a modern picnic party which had eaten a meal on the spot and the broken plate had been thrown into the hole after one of the children had dropped and broken it.

TURKEY

Time was—and not so long ago—
The turkey was a special treat,
A feat we waited long to know
And second helpings all could eat.
The children begged the drumsticks then;
The wishbone was a joy to clutch;
But now Thanksgiving nears again,
Of turkey we have had too much.

The glamor from the bird has gone.
No longer children with delight
Behold the turkey coming on.
No more it stirs the appetite.
So much we've had the whole year through,
The zest for it has flown away.
Gone are the happier times we know,
When turkeys ruled Thanksgiving Day.

'Tis commoner than chops today.
It's served at banquets, hot and cold
And every ordinary way.
The charm has gone from turkey wings.
As food, a steak is now preferred.
Thanksgiving Day no longer brings
A welcome to that grand old bird.

Permanent Ballet Company Coming into Being at Winnipeg, Brings Art to All, Not to Chosen Few

By ENID NEMY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, (CP)—A permanent Canadian ballet company which would bring that art to the people instead of a chosen few is coming into being in Winnipeg.

First step is a scheduled Western Canadian tour next spring by members of the Canadian School of Ballet, formerly known as the Winnipeg Ballet Company. A small, compact group will make the trip which will enable them to perform in smaller cities where stage facilities are restricted. The tour will take in the west coast and also such cities as Moose Jaw, Sask., and Medicine Hat, Alta.

At present, there are 15 students at the school training to be ptrformers. However, they are also getting a thorough teaching background so that they will be able to fall back on their teaching if they haven't professional jobs.

The woman behind the idea has already made ballet as familiar as jive to thousands of Winnipegers. A 46-year-old Englishwoman, Gwenneth Lloyd came to Canada eight years ago "because I decided it was time to break away and I knew there was a clear field for ballet in Western Canada."

The first few years would have discouraged even the most hardy. The majority of Winnipegers were inclined to think of ballet as "sissified" and only a few outright individualists dared show an interest in it. Miss Lloyd and her partner, Betty Hey-Farrally, were forced to supplement their earnings by teaching at three private schools.

It was after the first public performance that ballet took hold in Winnipeg and since then its popularity has increased steadily.

A short time ago the company held three farewell performances featuring Paddy Stone, a former pupil of Miss Lloyd's who has joined the Sadler's Well company in London. Tickets were sold out a week ahead of time and a few ballet enthusiasts were willing to trade a pair of nylons for a pair of ducats.

Two more branches of the school were established this Fall. Louise Nunns is in charge of the school at Brandon, Man., and Joan Stirling has taken over at Selkirk, Man. Both girls are members of the Royal Academy of Dancing and former pupils of Miss Lloyd.

First Week of Strike Costs U.S. Industry 400,000 Tons of Steel

New York, Nov. 27 — (AP) — The first week of the coal strike cost industry in the United States more than 400,000 tons of steel, the Iron Age, National Steelworkers paper, estimated today.

Operations of the steel industry, the paper said, plummeted to a rate of 68 per cent of capacity from last week's revised estimate of 90.5 per cent.

The downward spiral of the operating rate, it was predicted, soon would hit metalworking plants throughout the country. The publication estimated that within two weeks fabricating operations would be cut to 50 per cent with many plants out cold within a month if the strike continues that long.

Hamelin Revises Charming Legend Of Pied Piper

Hamelin, Germany, (CP)—The legend of the Pied Piper of Hamelin is being charmingly revived in that old city on the River Weser in Germany. U.N.R.R.A. has opened a Summer holiday camp there for children of Baltic and Polish displaced persons where, for the first time in six years, they can enjoy freedom and open air.

They play in the fields and swim in the river, sleeping in tents and even the food is cooked and eaten out of doors. They can visit a cave in the hillside where, according to legend, the Pied Piper disappeared with Hamelin's children in 1294.

On the last night of each week after a concert for the children, the camp leader, Miss Kathleen Baird, of Perth, Australia, wearing a cloak and feathered hat, pipes them up the hillside to their beds and the sound of the children singing can be heard a mile away in the town.

May Revolutionize Butter Industry With New Machine

Ottawa, Nov. 27 — (CP)—Two continuous butter-making machines of a type which might revolutionize the butter industry were in commercial use in Germany before their seizure by the Allies but the exact quality of the machines' product has not been determined, officials of the National Research Council said today.

In a report on wartime German developments in dairy technology, W. H. Cook, director of the division of applied biology of the National Research Laboratories, said preliminary investigations on quick-butter machines are being made here at the request of the National Dairy Council.

The report dealt also with a German process for cold pasteurization of milk with ultraviolet light and a mechanical cheese-making process.

In Niagara Falls, Dr. J. A. Pearce, an N.R.C. member, said yesterday the machines might revolutionize the Canadian butter-making industry. But many problems must be overcome to develop quick-butter production in Canada.

Mr. Cook said there is proof both machines had manufactured butter that met German standards but which would not be approved in Canada. Butter-makers here were not permitted to manufacture butter with a 20 per cent water content.

"The composition of the butter from both machines is: water, 20 per cent; non-fat solids, 1.5-2 per cent; and butter fat, 78-79 per cent.

"No provision is made on either machine for adding salt as most of the German domestic butter is not salted. All of the operations observed used sweet cream although it was stated that ripened cream could also be used with (one) machine.

"The production of butter to meet Canadian standards of moisture and fat content and domestic salt requirements with these machines would demand some modifications in the processes employed, if not in the machines themselves."

One of the German processes—alfa—had a design capacity of 550 pounds an hour and required about 120 square feet of floor space.

The other process—Fritz—made butter which appeared to have a lower density than the ordinary product.

Campaigns Needed To Improve Habits

Toronto, Nov. 27—(CP)—Community-sponsored campaigns are needed to improve the habits of drivers and pedestrians and ensure safer streets and highways, A. H. Rowan of the motor vehicles branch, Ontario Highways Department, said today in an address to the annual meeting of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce.

Outlining the work done by the Motor Vehicles Branch to promote safer driving, Mr. Rowan said reduction of traffic fatalities in the province by approximately 250 from 1928 and 1929 totals had been largely due to a closer check on drivers.

An overwhelming majority of licensed drivers had good safety records. The number involved in reported accidents in 1945 was about two per cent of the total registered, of whom .07 per cent were involved in fatal accidents.

A record kept by the branch showed accidents, convictions and complaints registered against every driver and served as a guide for checking physical condition, skill or attitude of frequent offenders.

Mr. Rowan said physically and mentally defective individuals presented a difficult problem. Applicants suffering from physical handicaps such as the loss of an arm or a leg were required to file detailed information concerning their disability and were restricted to operation of a vehicle properly equipped to compensate for it.

Frank D. Bliss, chairman of the Public Safety Committee of the Hamilton Chamber of Commerce, described the city's safety campaign which will open Dec. 2. Motorists will be asked to sign a safety pledge and place a safety sticker on the corner of their windshield.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

LET US TRY TO BE ALCOHOLOGICAL

That was an excellent article you had in the paper a little while ago on alcohol (writes a reader). We meant to preserve it. If you have any reprints please send me some .. (W. S. H.)

In the same mail came a letter from another reader who protests my characterization of the individual who drinks the usual "occasional" glass of liquor as a defective. This reader argues that "the same logic could be applied to a great many other things besides alcohol. I have watched people reaching for a package of cigarettes when they are tense. Then some people take a cup of tea or coffee when they are down. Why do you restrict your remarks to alcohol?" (B. M. W.)

I do not know which article brought these responses. I have no reprints of articles appearing in this column.

What is a defective? A defective is a person who is lacking physically or mentally. I contend that a person who is not lacking physically or mentally will not indulge in any kind of alcoholic beverage or liquor.

It is absurd to compare the use of tobacco or tea or coffee with the use of alcohol.

Use of tobacco by children or youths is injurious — this is unquestionably the consensus of medical opinion today. Physicians recognize "tobacco heart" as common among young smokers—palpitation, irregularity, rapid action; in some cases heart pain of a shooting character, which may be severe; in some cases attacks of such severity that they deserve the name of angina (I quote this from Osler). Tobacco amblyopia (partial blindness) and acquired color blindness from excessive smoking in young people are recognized by oculists. Smoker's duodenal ulcer complex is frequently recognized in young women who smoke excessively—all of the symptoms of ulcer except the X-ray demonstration of ulcer. Many persons who have stomach or duodenal ulcer find that they suffer more when or if they smoke than they do when or if they do not smoke. Still, as a matter of health, it is questionable whether smoking is injurious to the great majority of adults who smoke—as nearly as I can determine the consensus of medical opinion today.

Some of the gravest effects of alcoholic indulgence, such as multiple or polyneuritis (partial paralysis) and Korsakoff's psychosis (a kind of insanity characterized by confusion, severe disorientation, memory defect and confabulation) are due as much to nutritional deficiency, particularly vitamin B complex deficiency, as to positive damage to nerves and brain by alcohol. The nutritional deficiency is incidental to the victim's frequent, prolonged or periodic abstention from food in favor of his or her tipple, or sometimes to the pathological repugnance he or she develops for food and the vomiting that occurs when or if the victim tries to eat.

But all that is degeneration, deterioration, decline from a higher state of the normal state of health of mind or body to a lower, abnormal state. As Webster says: Degeneration is deterioration of a tissue or an organ in which its vitality is diminished. Remember this, please, when I say that many drinkers are degenerates. This term implies that the person has been normal but has now begun to decline, to degenerate, to die. The term defective, on the other hand, implies that the person has never attained full normal development of mind or body.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How did North and South Carolina get their names?

In 1562 Jean Ribaut established a colony of French Huguenots at what is now Port Royal, South Carolina. He named the settlement "Charlefort" and the territory "Carolina" in honor of his king, Charles IX of France, who had patronized Admiral Coligny, leader of the Huguenots and projector of the American colony.

Ribaut's colonists at Charlefort, failing to receive expected aid, abandoned the place and sailed for France. In 1564 Rene de Laudonniere, who had been Ribaut's lieutenant, established a new settlement on the St. John's River in Florida and called it "Fort Caroline."

"Carolina," Ribaut's name for the region, never came into general use, and after the Spanish destroyed the Huguenots at Fort Caroline in 1569 it disappeared as a place name in America.

In 1629 King Charles I of England granted a vast tract of land between Virginia and Florida to his attorney general, Sir Robert Heath, and named it "Carolina" in his own honor. It is doubtful whether Charles I or Heath were aware of the fact that Ribaut had so named part of the region 67 years earlier. No settlements were made in Carolina by Heath and in time his patent was vacated.

In 1663, 99 years after Ribaut had first visited the region, Charles II, son of Charles I, regranted the territory to eight "Lords Proprietors." The name "Carolina" was retained by Charles II as a compliment to both himself and his father.

Thus, in a sense, it may be said that the region was christened Carolina three different times, each time after a different king named Charles.

Theoretically North Carolina and South Caroline constituted one province until the Revolution. From the beginning of the English colony, however, Carolina had a tendency to divide into a northern and a southern section. Because the two settlements were far apart and had little in common, separate governments existed from the first. Up to 1691 the northern section and the southern section each had its own governor. From that year until 1712 there was generally a governor at Charleston and a deputy governor for the northern settlement. It was in the latter year that they became separate colonies for all practical purposes.

At first the northern section of Carolina, the part of the province lying north and east of the Cape Fear River, was called Albemarle, after the Duke of Albemarle, one of the eight favorites to whom Charles II had granted the territory. About 1689 Albemarle, one gan to be called North Carolina and the southern part of the province South Carolina, and these names were retained when the Colonies declared their independence of Great Britain.

Florida Town's Population Is 26 Persons, 10,000 Fish

By HARRY SMITH in Cleveland Plain Dealer

Marineland, Fla.— Since last week Marineland, Fla., has been a village, with a post office. It is 18 miles south of St. Augustine, about 25 north of Daytona, and has a population of 26, of whom five are aldermen, one the mayor and another the police chief, with the fire chief yet to be named.

That is the two-legged population of the country's only "oceanarium," plus two cormorants and a penguin. The finny population, in residence in two big tanks, is around 10,000. It varies from day to day as from 2,000 to 5,000 small fish are added weekly to sustain their predatory companions. Its "fish eat fish" in the sea, and that's the way the Marine Studio denizens live in their two-family roofless house.

The Marineland oceanariums have been open only eight months since the war. The two tanks already have been populated with more big fish and sea mammals than ever. In them are six porpoises and five different varieties of shark, including two man-eaters of the tiger species. Marine Studio today is a two-ring circus starring sharks on the hippodrome and porpoises in acrobatic.

There's a story about each kind of fish, about his capture as well as his habits. For example, the tiger shark is not such a terror as reputed, at least in captivity. Recently six girls from Rollins College dove and swam under water, while the sharks swam through the girls' formations. When the oceanarium was first populated, Marineland fishermen use to dope sharks into insensibility before transferring them from nets to the tanks Now they let the shark fight until he knocks himself out, which makes him quite as inert as did a shot in the fin.

You who come down here this winter will hear this and a lot more about the small fish world at Marineland. You may not know until you get here that the price of admission has jumped from a dollar a person to $1.67. That's because fish living has gone up—and the price of help around a fish farm. When Marine Studios opened last March every item in rehabilitation cost more than before the war. The total expenditure was $260,000.

As one drives north from Miami to Marineland, taking the shore highway instead of United States No. 1, the Florida of the picture book, of the films and as you imagine it, unfolds. On many stretches the boom of the sea drowns car noises and at high tide bits of seafoam skitter across the road. On the other hand lies the Florida jungle

The seascapes are a bit like our lake front. For the most part they have been taken over by winter dwellings and premises, hotels and camps. You snatch at clear views of the Atlantic only to dive into beautiful avenues lined with palaces, rambling hotels and tree-hidden cottages. Many would vote the drive between Palm Beach and Boynton along the ocean, the most beautiful for homes, landscaping, and natural charm in our land.

There was no construction to speak of along the east coast of Florida during the war, and much that has been started since has been halted at some stage by dearth of material. But even if there had been, it is doubtful if the face of that long stretch would have been changed. It is the first Florida we of the North knew as a winter playground. Palm Beach typified the state, and still does with scarcely any change. Along came Miamis to crowd the older Florida east coast resorts off the front page.

Palm Beach Still There

That partial eclipse hasn't hurt stately Palm Beach, homey Lauderdale, old St. Augustine with her old architecture and abhorrance of novelty, up-and-dusting Daytona, whose beach speedway still provides the resorts best events, and the smaller communities which count among their winter residents the third generation—Fort Pierce, Vero Beach, Lake Worth, Melbourne ,Cocoa, New Smyrna and a dozen other towns with beaches.

Daytona, by the way, is planning a resumption of automobile speed tests on its beach. An event of greater importance is scheduled for Feb. 22, 23 and 24—the annual international motorcycle elimination races, at which 5,000 riders and their iron steeds are expected. The course wil be approximately three miles—half on the beach, half on the highway. Two hairpin turns will supply the thrills in lieu of hill climbing The excitement will arise from the fact that the races will be run with 140 machines per heat. The hairpin turns will accommodate only half that number at one time.

In the Florida east coast event list, St. Augustine, too, has plans—its annual fiesta and the week-long blessing of the shrimp fleet. The latter sounds routine. The blessing may be so, but the week's event will be as colorful as Portuguese imagination can contrive, aided by the city's interest in the celebration.

A Lost Opportunity

In the archives of lost opportunity—remembering that Cleveland might have been the automobile capital of the United States—this yarn may interest you. The originators of Marineland, including the well-known Whitneys and Ilya Tolstoy, wanted to locate in St. Augustine ,across the bridge. They showed the city fathers of this venerable burg the architect's plans. Marineland was refused admittance to any part of the oldest city because its tanks and grounds did not conform to the prevailing architecture and landscape of the town.

That's nothing. Almost every Florida city has some comparative yarn or tradition, not necessarily of opportunities muffed but all under the head of error or neglect. New Smyrna vows that, if given the chance, it can prove that St. Augustine is not the oldest city in the United States. "New Smyrna is." There are several places that claim the first landing of De Soto.

All of the resorts mentioned, and many more, agree that the coming tourist season will be as big as last winter, but they no longer warn you not to come. Some operators go so far as to say that insistence upon reservations is a mistake because it keeps away visitors who could be accommodated.

East coast communities—whether it be town or country or both co-operating, we didn't find out—seem to have picked some of the most beautiful sites along the ocean or trailer camps. It's a delight to run onto these, because everybody seems to be having a good time. Several of the ocean-side trailer camps are large enough to be cities in themselves. What will they and their like be by February? If one were to make a traffic count now of trailers moving southward the figures would astound.

A Super Butler Retires

Life Story of Charles Gilmore, Who Served Noted Men With Distinction and Made Money on Investments—Noted Member of Fast-Disappearing Human Species

(From the New Yorker Magazine)

What ever became of Jules Bache's butler? This question, prounded from time to time in our hearing during the last year or so, set us on a small investigation that yielded, as nice a success story as we have recently had the pleasure of passing along. Jules Bache's butler was Charles Gilmore, or, more exactly, Gilmore. He was born in Surrey sixty years ago and started out as a houseboy for Lord Swaything. He subsequently, and respectively, joined the staffs of Lord Leith, a Scottish peer, and William C. Whitney, an American peer, rising to the position of steward or head butler. In this echelon, when he was thirty, he moved to the household of the late James Speyer, thence to that of a Pittsburgh millionaire. Infected by rugged-individualistic ambitions, he presently abandoned butlering to establish a lace-importing firm, which folded.

In 1918, on a friend's tip, he applied for the then vacant job of steward at Mr. Bache's Adirondacks camp. Gilmore recalled all this and more in a pleasant, reminiscent talk we have had with him. "Mr. Bache asked his secretary to look up what they paid the last man," he said softly. "I told the secretary he needn't bother. 'If I suit you, Mr. Bache,' I said, 'you'll pay me what I ask, and if I don't it would be utterly useless to discuss salary.' Mr. Bache's mouth flew open, but he said all right, and I went on to the camp. We never discussed the matter again. I started at two hundred and fifty dollars a month. Needless to say, there were occasional increases, and Mr. Bache willed me the usual ten thousand."

Gilmore is an expertly tailored man with bags under his eyes. He managed Bache's camp, his Fifth avenue house, and La Colmena, the Bache house in Palm Beach. He received a monthly cheque for the household expenses, kept the books, stocked the cellar, hired, fired and managed the staff of servants, which averaged around fourteen, and, toward the end, guided the public through the city house three days a week when the art collection was on public view. "Jull liked to entertain," he told us. ("Jull" is what he and the other servants among themselves, called Mr. Bache, he explained.) "He would give me a list of people who had been invited for dinner and leave the rest to me. In the morning, I would bring him a book of menus, and sometimes he'd check what he wanted and sometimes he'd leave the choice to me. We never had cocktail parties. I'm happy to say. We had two thousand guests to luncheons and dinners the week Prince Potenziani, a former Mayor of Rome, was here. On the Monday after it was all over, I asked Jull if he would be at home for dinner that night. He said, "Haven't you done enough?" That was the only time he ever referred to my work to me. I enjoyed Jull. We were temperamentally suited."

* * *

Jull enjoyed Gilmore, too. Jull went abroad for two months every spring and, as a manifestation of his good will ,always treated Gilmore to a like vacation, with expenses. Gilmore divided his time between England and the Riviera. He became a knowing investor. A dinner guest lightly asked Bache one night if Gilmore made money in the market. Gilmore was serving. "If he doesn't it's his own fault," replied Bache, looking sharply at his butler. "God knows, he hears everything." Bache made several million dollars in Chrysler stock and at a dinner party mentioned that he thought it was a good buy. Gilmore, standing behind Bache's chair, kept shaking his head at the guests. He thought it was too high. Once Bache boasted to a friend that Gilmore had cleaned up a hundred and fifty thousand dollars in the market in a year. We asked Gilmore about this and he said, "I regretted Jull's spreading those rumors. It got so that when house guests left, they simply shook hands with me instead of slipping me a tip. One of them even asked me for a loan." Gilmore once inquired of a Bache in-law, to whom he was serving Mouton-Rothschild, whether a company he was president of was going on a dividend basis. The in-law said he thought so. Gilmore nodded approvingly. "I happen to be a rather substantial stockholder," he explained.

* * *

Several people who tried to hire Gilmore away from Bache were met with a cool "I'm afraid you couldn't afford me, sir." Even since Bache's death, Gilmore has declined all offers of employment. He has an apartment in Astoria, travels a bit in Maine and Florida, but spends most of his time on a friend's farm in Wheatley Hills, Long Island, caring for the livestock and consulting his soul. "I could have retired years ago," he told us, "but I liked my life with Jull too much. There was always a stimulating air of activity. Now I doubt if I shall ever come out of retirement. I'm something of an anarchronism, you know. The big houses are going with the high taxes, and men of my specialized talent no longer have adequate scope. When conditions permit, I shall go back to the Riviera, visit friends and brush the edges of fashion."

Implement Plants Still Delayed by Recent Steel Strike

Hamilton, Nov. 27 — (CP) — Shortage of steel as a result of the recent strike in the basic steel industry is still impeding the farm machinery industry in its race to meet the urgent, spring-time need for implements, Claude W. Lockard, president of the International Harvester Company of Canada, said in an interview Tuesday.

Explaining the pressing demand for equipment, Mr. Lockard said that coupled with a tremendous export demand there was a five-year backlog of domestic farm machinery needs.

Fur Coat Prices Reduced in U.S. From Highest Prices in History

By DOROTHY CAREW

New York, Nov. 27 —(AP)—Fur coat prices in the United States are tumbling rapidly from the highest levels in history.

Mink can be had at prices which represent "savings" of thousands of dollars, and Persian lamb, beaver and Alaska seal are off hundreds.

It all began a month or more ago when consumers began to balk at paying peak prices for luxury furs.

"Retail markdowns today amount to about one-third of original prices," one industry spokesman said. "The more expensive the fur, the deeper the price cut."

One lone survivor — Mouton— continues not only to hold its own as to price, but has been edging upwards since removal of price control. Good Mouton, a fur buyer said, has gone up from $105 to $115 wholesale in recent weeks.

In contrast, an Alaska seal that sold for $950 wholesale in mid-September can be replaced today for $600 to $650.

Mink, which zoomed to record heights of popularity and price during the war, is high on the markdown list. Recent New York retail advertisements offered an $8,000 natural wild mink for $4,949, and of two $3,500 coats, one was marked down to $3,489, and the other to $3,150.

Beaver price tags show $1,075 to $1,450 coats reduced to $698 to $984. Persians originally selling at $480 to $1,150 now are $398 to $896.

Demand Continues.

As to why the consumer stopped buying furs at September peak prices, spokesmen for the industry have varied explanations.

Some say it is a temporary slump due to unseasonably warm weather; others state that the drop in sales came as a direct result of the September break in the stock market.

Economists are inclined to agree with a third group which describes the current fur situation as "a terrific deflation—and a real one."

Raw furs have followed the same price course. The drop since September in Alaska seal was said to amount to 35 to 36 per cent, in mink from 20 to 25 per cent and Persians 15 to 20 per cent. Muskrat prices currently are 25 per cent below last year's Office of Price Administration ceilings.

The industry generally is of the opinion that despite price resistance, there still is a heavy demand for fur coats. But one buying representative said that "everything will have to be cheaper" from now on.

Brilliant Costume Jewelry

By ALICE ALDEN

COSTUME JEWELRY created for this season by America's leading designers, is as lovely, as lush, as elegant, as the beautiful new clothes. In keeping with this elegance Clifford Furst, who designs Castlecliff jewelry, comes up with some bright new ideas. The designer suggests, that you clip your second earring to your neckline, just above your pin, if you go in for one of the new down-one-side hats. When the hat is removed, back goes the earring to the ear. The pin and earrings are of gold finished sterling, set with brilliants with a large pearl in the center.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Veteran's Wife Has a Message For Another Veteran's Wife

One of the letters printed in this column a few weeks ago was from the wife of a discharged veteran who was making her very unhappy by his frequent outbursts of ugly temper over trifles. Because she was expecting a baby the situation upset her even more than it normally would, and she was beginning to feel the whole thing was more than she could stand.

Now, from the wife of another veteran, who also went through a difficult time with her husband, comes a cheering letter addressed to the first one. It is so full of sympathetic understanding, practical suggestions and good, sound common sense that I feel it will interest and help many another wife bewildered by the attitudes shown by a husband back from the wars. For that reason, I am printing the letter in full:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I should like to address my letter to the young lady whose letter appeared in your column signed 'Unhappy.'—

"I was casually reading 'Advice to the Lovelorn' when I suddenly realized that the disconcerting situations you were describing coincided exactly with so many of the things my husband and I have experienced during the past year. Your husband's actions are so much like my husband's that I'm inclined to think it is a sort of war-illness. I assure you I have been desperate to know how to cope with him and to help him through his readjustment completely.

"You see, my son was one month old when his daddy came home, and I think my husband felt that he had walked from one 'ball-and-chain' right into another. He certainly hadn't realized how confining a small baby is to the parents, nor had he anticipated a tired, some time unglamorous wife. He expected the attention the baby was now getting, for, before he went overseas, I had catered to his whims complettly.

"I know, as all mothers do, how one feels during pregnancy, but that condition is natural, and his attitude is so unnatural for a healthy, young man, and so terribly wrong. If you feel as I did, you want your husband with you constantly after such a long separation.

"Finally, I realized that we were just together too much. We exhausted our conversation and bickered incessantly. I reasoned with myself that when we were engaged, we saw each other only a few hours a week, and, when he was in the army, hardly at all. So now I encourage my husband to take up hobbies, to go out with old friends, to go home alone and visit with his parents occasionally, and he always comes back refreshed and willing—even glad—to come home to his little family.

"Things do improve with time and patience. My husband is still inclined to gripe, sometimes is childish and violent, and is somewhat anti-social. But imagine my surprise when he suggested, recently, that we invite friends in one evening to play bridge— my favorite pastime—which he had heretofore flatly refused to learn. I know now that he is trying to help himself and is not just being hateful.

"If anyone thinks that the problems of the soldier's wife ended when the boys came marching home 'safe and sound' they are utterly mistaken. Her real job—the greatest test of her patience and understanding—has only begun. The best advice I can give you is to put your own feelings into the background and concentrate on making a fine home and a happy family. You'll soon find yourself being repaid in the love and consideration of your husband and children.

"Another Veteran's Wife."

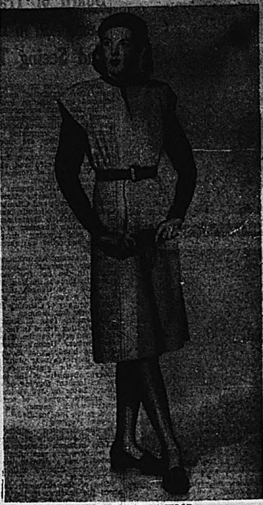
HIGH TALL IN HATS

Niagara Falls, Nov. 26—(CP)—Regretfully murmuring "That was a $9 hat," one weekend visitor to the Falls gazed into the gorge, as high winds sent his head gear sailing. He wasn't alone, however, as breezy weather of the last few days took heavy toll of both men's and women's hats going across the high bridges.

New Two-in-One Dress



By PRUNELLA WOOD

Believe it or not, this dress was first seen by your reporter as an event at the rodeo in Madison Square Garden, when Justin McCarty, the Texas designer, put on a fashion show one afternoon recently. Clearing the wild bulls and bucking horses out of the arena, a parade of old-fashioned rigs took over, and every team, carriage or jaunting cart carried a beautiful model dressed in something new and fine.

All of us liked this beige wool jumper and black rayon jersey shirt combination, seeing in it a warm, smart dress for almost any daytime affair but the most formal . . . and one good for town or country too. We also remarked that the shirt would come in handy with wool skirts or pants.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Grannie's Switch is Used Again

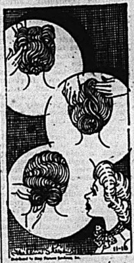
One of the beauty surprises of the time is the revival of false hair. Forty years ago it raged like wild fire, then went out of style over night. When Fashion runs out of new ideas, old ones are dug out of the moth balls, put into action. In the pulchritude parlors you will find displays of what are now called "extra hair pieces."

There is a reason. The uppity hair-do arrived. Fine. But how many women had enough pigtail material to form topknots? Not many. Even if a woman puts her mind on it she can't grow more than five or six inches of hair a year. Today, demountable braids and coils are used for towering crowns, and for chignons at the napeline. You know! Soft coils, some going sidewise, some vertically. The two-puff chignon is a favorite—a couple of hirsute buns placed side by side.

Only fine, first-quality hair will deceive the observing eye, and one must be cautious when selecting the shade. The two-strand switch seems to be the most popular item; it lends itself gracefully to coils and rolls, doesn't look as heavy or as unnatural as the three-strand.

Hairdressers tell us that it is better to drape the strands on the head than to arrange them first and then pin them on. Arrange them as you would the home-grown product. For the chignon, one's own hair is arranged in a flat coil at the nape line, the centre of the switch fastened tightly with pins, a strand of the natural hair placed, ribbon-like, over the place where the strands are united. There is no danger then of exposure of the weft.

Once you adopt this new coiffure you will find any number of ways of making the rear of your head attractive. Coils can be twisted together, cruller fashion, placed vertically. That mode is known as the elongated chignon.



Demountable braids and coils are used for many coiffures

You can give the strands an upsweep, make a large puff or roll of each end, and place them just back of your ears. Some women have a gift for creating personality hair-dos. Extra pieces give them opportunity for original designs.

If you like braids, you can use them to encircle the head. Or, the centre of the united strands can be placed at the back, the ends fluffed, or "ratted," and used to give the pompadour a lift.

A quaint effect is the old fashioned figure eight placed midway between napeline and crown, then pulled out to form a psyche. That, my children, is going back to remote times; it is known as the Grecian mode.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Christmas Gifts For Overseas Servicemen

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What is the final date for mailing Christmas gifts to servicemen still overseas? And what gift would you suggest I send to a serviceman who is a good friend of mine (but we're not engaged?)

Sallie

November 15 is the final date for mailing Christmas gifts to servicemen overseas. One excellent gift (since in most places over there is almost impossible to get good leather items) is a leather folding wallet, of good sturdy leather, and having separate compartments. Another welcome gift is a game set compactly fitted into a sturdy simulated-leather case, and equipped for backgammon, gin rummy, checkers, chess, cribbage, and so forth (there are less expensive sets, of course, with equipment for fewer games). A present always in good taste for "just a friend" to send, and always welcome, is some item of smoking equipment. And the ever-popular pen and pencil set.

When Married Woman Signs Funeral Register

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

By your reply to another reader in your column several days ago, you answered a question that had always bothered me too.. how one should sign the Guest Book at a wedding. You said that the informal name should be written, that a married woman should sign her name Mary Robinson or Mary Smith Robinson. Now I would like to ask you about another signature-occasion that has also perplexed me..how I, a married woman, should sign my name in the register that some funeral directors provide, to be given to the family after the funeral.

"Mary".

You would sign this register with your informal name also: (1) Mary Robinson, if you are an intimated friend of the family; (2) Mary Smith Robison, if, as might be true in some circumstances, the including of your maiden surname would more easily identify you; or (3) Mary Robinson (Mrs. John Robinson), if the family knows you only by your formal name, as, for instance, might be true if they have known your husband for some time and know you only as "Mrs. John Robinson."

Getting The Two Families to Know Each Other

Dear Mrs. Meeckman:

On my birthday, which is very soon, I am to announce my engagement and I am troubled about the meeting between my parents and my fiance's parents. My fiance and his family live in a town not very far from us, and I have spent two or three weekends at his home, at the invitation of his mother. We are not having any kind of engagement-announcement party, and I am wondering whether it is proper for my family to write his family inviting them to dinner after we become engaged, or should his family make the first move? If you tell me it is up to my family, should my mother write the note of invitation, and how soon after the engagement has been announced?

Puzzled

The proper procedure is for your fiance's parents to make the first social move. As soon as possible after their son has told them of his engagement, they should come to call on you and your mother, to welcome you into their family and to establish cordial relationship between the families. Or, if the distance or other circumstances makes this visit impossible, they should write or telephone you and your mother. This important formality taken care of, either family may invite the other to lunch or tea or dinner. If your family decides to make this first move, your mother is the one who should do the inviting, either by telephone or note....and this invitation may be extended either before or after the engagement is announced, preferably before.

Fashion Flashes

AT LONG LAST, here it is! A strapless slip, either regular or evening dress length, with molded bra bodice, made of jersey that packs beautifully and that can get by without pressing.

VERY HANDSOME fur-trimmed suits mark the seasons elegance. Black broadcloth makes a suit whose long, fitted, side-buttoned jacket is topped with a collar of blue fox that can be worn in a low square decollete or drawn high to frame the face. Seen with blue fox muff and black velvet pillbox with high, curving feather fancy.

REALLY LOVELY was a hat that caught this reporter's eye of pale pink felt fashioned into a soft tricorn, the hat is entirely covered with cobwebby black lace that extends into scarf drapery.

REMEMBER sugar tongs? Although we can't blame you if you don't, here's the inverted sugar tong neckline as the latest idea. It is used on a pretty daytime frock of gray crepe and is piped in pink satin. The dress has pink, stone-studded buttons and links and has skirt fullness at either side below a cutaway hip yoke effect. Nice everyday dress.

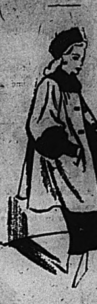
THE SOFT LOOK is a feature of the new winter-weather wool blouses. Black wool jersey makes a cosy and smart blouse with mandarin neckline and soft, deep armholes. Nice with a draped gray flannel skirt.

THE UNCLUTTERED LOOK makes the best dinner dress for a mature woman. An ideal model in black or white or pastel colors is of crepe cut with a wide ruffle that begins with a soft bow-like detail above the high, unbelted waistline and continues down to meet a high slash at the hem in front. High, rounded neckline has a keyhole cutout. Shirring softens the bustline. High waistline dips to a V in back.

100,000 LIGHT BULBS STOLEN YEARLY

New York, Nov. 27 — (AP) — While a temporary dimout blanketed New York City because of the coal crisis, the city's Board of Transportation disclosed ruefully that it wages a continuing war on dimout in the subways. Officials said 100,000 light bulbs are stolen each year from the platforms and trains.

The Fur Lined Coat



Green woolen coat lined with Persian lamb

By VERA WINSTON

THE FUR-LINED coat, while not receiving the heavy promotion accorded it a season or so ago, is still to the fore. A smart example of this fashion is shown in this attractive coat of bright green woolen. Cut on the lines of a smock, it flares from the yoke in back to its neat three-quarter length. Black Persian lamb makes the yoke, the small collar and the lower portion of the sleeves and also the lining. The coat has slit pockets and self buttons, and would be nice worn over a dress, a suit or with a matching skirt.

New Soapless VEL Cleans Without Suds

by Frances Thompson
noted homemaking authority

Over a million dollars have already been invested in perfecting VEL, a revolutionary new post-war discovery in cleaning. It is not a temporary substitute for soap. And because it is not a soap its action is entirely different. Like all things new, when you use VEL you must know the right way to get the best results.

NO SUDS NEEDED

The most noticeable difference between VEL and soap is in the suds. Most women have always looked to the suds, in soap for its cleaning power. VEL makes suds, but the suds are unnecessary to the cleaning action. In fact, VEL cleaning action continues long after suds dissolve.

Next you'll notice a difference in the water. Soap combines with water to make a cloudy milky-white solution. When the suds dissolve, VEL leaves the water as clear as soft water in a rain barrel . . . makes the water act soft too. As a result, you'll quickly see how much grease and grime VEL removes.

SURPRISINGDY LITTLE NEEDED

Just as too much baking powder can spoil the best cake recipe, so, too much VEL may give you disappointing results. So follow the instructions on the package carefully. It's surprising how little you need.

VEL FOR DISHES

A teaspoonful or two is plenty for a dishpanful of water. No need to add more VEL unless you have a larger sink or very greasy pans. You'll be pleased to find how sparkling clean VEL leaves glassware and dishes . . . how VEL leaves no soap scum on dishpan.

Australians Sparing In Pleasures And Domestic Purchases

By JACK HOLDSWORTH

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 27 (CP)—A spending orgy that came in Australia with the end of the war is petering out and people have become sparing both in their pleasures and domestic purchases.

Returned service personnel have spent their deferred pay received on discharge either on their rehabilitation or on a holiday before resuming civilian work. Civilians are thought to have spent their war savings.

Sydney night clubs report a big drop in attendance. Except for Friday and Saturday nights when they are still crowded, attendances are said to be only about half of what they have been though food and service have improved.

Shops also report falling demand for goods other than essentials. Hotel-keepers, whose bars do big business, say that their sales are steady but there is no wild spending.

Bookmakers in Sydney and Melbourne report that people are betting on the horses in modest sums instead of big wagers that used to go around the ring. Melbourne bookmakers estimate their takings at a recent important race meeting were down 30 per cent though attendance at the track was larger than a year ago. Totalizator figures are also down.

There has been a decline in savings deposits with banks. Deposits with trading banks dropped by about $10,000,000 in June. Deposits with the government-controlled Commonwealth Bank after reaching record figures in July have fallen from a monthly average of $20,000,000 to about $700,000.

Death of Driver After Car Collision

Detroit, Nov. 27 (AP)—Automobiles driven by Harold R. Donaldson 54, of Memphis, Mich., and Henry Doeren, 60, of Detroit, collided Monday night. The two exchanged names and addresses.

"Why, I know you," Doeren said. "You work for the Budd manufacturing company. I've talked with you over the phone many times in the past 20 years."

Donaldson acknowledged the acquaintance. As he did. Doeren collapsed. He was dead upon arrival at receiving hospital.

Horse is Being Banished From Canadian Army

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 27 —(CP)—As an heirloom and a showpiece guilty of failure to contribute positively to modern methods the horse is being banished from the permanent Canadian Army.

Without the slightest whinny of nostalgia, a spokesman at Army headquarters made it clear that the active force, for its own reasons, has joined a trend that has seen the horse become a fugitive from the milk wagon, the beer truck, even frequently from the furrowed soil itself.

As in those other cases, his explanation was perfectly simple The horse is becoming an anachronism in this wheel-wild world.

It was put forward directly as an answer to the failure of Canada to field an Army team for the jumping at either the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto or the National Horse show in New york, pre-war scenes of efficient Canadian riding against military teams from such countries as the United States, France Belgium, Russia, Germany and others. The competitions this year saw entries from the United States, Mexico and Peru.

With Army approval, an effort was put forward by the Winter Fair to organize a Canadian team but it failed—because it couldn't round up enough satisfactory horses in Canada and because it couldn't obtain Army approval to mount Canadians on horses offered by the United States Army.

Possibly there is a different spirit among the troopers with such permanent force cavalry regiments as the Lord Strathcona's Horse and the Royal Canadian Dragoons, but at headquarters the horse is viewed as simply another sacrifice to time.

Men who have just come through a tough war in which the horse played no notable part headquarters officials are bent on squeezing the appropriated public dollar for every bit of modernity. That means training in motorcycles, tanks and scout cars whose bellies are full of gasoline.

So the horse is out. In the United States and European continental armies this is not so, but headquarters officials are willing to bet that they will probably vanish from British Empire Forces.

Board of Trade Movement Should Lend Aid in Improving Labor Laws And Seeing They Are Respected

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP)—With new labor legislation due to be enacted by Canadian Provinces within the next six months, the Board of Trade movement faces the responsibilities of lending informed aid in improving labor laws where they are shown to new improvement and to exert its influence to ensure that the laws are respected and obeyed, G. V. V. Nicholls of Montreal said in an address today.

Speaking to the annual meeting of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, Mr. Nicholls, Manager of the Research Department of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said growing disrespect for law and order was abroad in the land.

This contempt for ordinary law had been apparent in industrial strikes in the last few months, especially those at the Ford Motor Company of Canada plant in Windsor, a year ago, and at the Steel Company of Canada's Hamilton works last summer.

Mr. Justice Ivan C. Rand, in his arbitration award in the Ford strike, had said that the Automobile Workers' Union's action in diverting hundreds of motorcars into a barricage near plant property "and the interference with innocent members of the public was an insolent flouting of civil order." Later he had spoken of the union's "abuse of striking power" which "cannot be excused, much less justified."

Besieged Workers

In the Hamilton strike the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) besieged upwards of 2,500 workers in a steel plant and insisted it had a right to prevent anyone from entering or leaving the property.

"One of the strangest things about the hearings of the Commons standing committee on industrial relations into the steel strike was the almost complete absence of any reference to the illegal siege operations going on in Hamilton at the very time the committee was sitting," said Mr. Nicholls.

When the committee was considering an invitation to visit the steel plant, one of the members asked the union head whether, if the committee decided to go, its members would be allowed to pass through picket lines—"no one appeared to find anything strange in the picture of a member of the parliament of Canada seeking permission from a union, which was engaged in an unlawful strike and in illegal picketing, to enter a plant where he had ever right to go anyway."

It could only be assumed, said Mr. Nicholls, that the authorities had given up hope of enforcing the law and the committee had decided to ignore the question of law and order altogether.

"Probably they were right. For the authorities run a grave risk when they wink at violations of the law for weeks and then suddenly try to enforce it against several thousand organized and determined men The time to stop lawlessness is when it first begins."

Mr. Nicholls listed three ways in which the average citizen could encourage respect for law and order in the conduct of labor disputes.

Must Respect Laws

"First and foremost, we can exert our influence to see that the law is observed in the little and big things of our day-to-day lives... If we are employers of labor, we can be careful to see that we ourselves respect the laws governing our relations with our employees. Thirdly, while insisting that the law should be obeyed so long as it is the law, we must lend our aid to improving it where it is shown to need improvement."

W. C. Woods, President of the W. C. Woods Company of Guelph, said that in his opinion economic security could not be gained by increasing prices and wages.

"Increased productivity should result in lower prices in order that there may be an increased demand for goods which would make it possible to utilize the labor displaced by more productive machines," he said.

Does Not Agree

"Some people contend that labor should get the benefit of increased production made possible by better machine tools and better methods and that the benefit should take the form of increased wages. This, in my opinion, is not so. Labor should get the benefit of the average per capita increase in productivity in the form of lower prices only."

Mr. Woods contended that the price of labor should be substantially constant and that the price level should fall at a rate equal to the per capita increase in productivity.

"To concentrate our effort on production, a free price and the competitive system throughout the largest possible area of the world will be our best guarantee for peace and prosperity."

Discussing labor-management relations in Great Britain, J. R. Lloyd Davies, Deputy Labor Attache at the British Embassy in Washington, said the compulsory arbitration system set up during the war had been continued through the first year after the war. He credited it with averting much industrial strife during the first year of reconversion.

Painted for Calvert by Adam Sherriff Scott, R.C.A.

At Indian Head, Saskatchewan, in 1907, a field of golden grain flourished despite killing frost. It was Marquis Wheat. To Doctor William Saunders, father of Canadian Agriculture, founder of the Dominion Experimental Farms, the discovery of Marquis fulfilled a life's work. Today Marquis Wheat thrives for the world's benefit.

In 1907 SAUNDERS said:
"Be Men of Faith and Progress"

In 1622 CALVERT said:
"Contribute to the Planting"

OVER THREE CENTURIES ago, Calvert said to his settlers: "I came to sow...and cause these counties to be cultivated."

Founder of historic colonies in the New World and famous Secretary of State to King James the First, Calvert may well have foreseen Canada's agricultural progress when he said: "The land will yield us many things if our endeavours are not wanting."

Man of Vision of the 17th century and pioneer of unity, Calvert's ideals have inspired men of vision through the generations since Calvert's time 300 years ago.

The full measure of our stature as a nation depends upon unity of purpose. There is only one Canada for clear-headed Canadians.

BLUE BOMBERS ON WAY EAST TO MEET ARGOS

Odds of 3 to 1 Being Quoted Krol and Company Will Retain Grey Cup

By EDDY WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Nov. 27 — (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Western Canada rugby champions, sped eastward today toward a revenge rendezvous with Toronto Argonauts in the Canadian football final at Toronto Saturday.

The 24-man squad is definitely the underdog in the Dominion classic at Varsity Stadium. Odds of 3-1 are being quoted freely in Toronto, and even Bomber's staunchest supporters expect nothing better than a close battle with Argos retaining their crown.

But when coach Jack West—a quiet, greying North Dakotan with a reputation as a disciplinarian and for moulding good football machines while at North Dakota University — led his charges aboard their train last night they gave no impression of a team being led to a slaughter.

West contented himself with a curt "Argos will know they've been in a football game" but some of his players had visions of revenge for the disastrous 35-0 defeat the Bombers suffered at the Toronto squad's hands last year.

While they may not be — as yet — the Bombers of other days — the era of Fritz Hanson, Bob Fritz, Jeff Nicklin, Bert Oja, Eddie James, Art Stevenson, Greg Kabat and other Bomber all-time greats — the 1946 edition has 4 United States imports — all from North Dakota — and such veteran stalwarts as Mel Wilson, Bill Ceretti, Nate Shore, Norm Geller and Jack Manners. Six of them made the all-star western team.

They split a pair of pre-season exhibition games with Montreal Alouettes, vanquished by Argos in the Big Four final, but, handicapped by injuries to some of their players, looked only like on average team in their Western Canada League games.

As a matter of fact they were within six minutes of losing the western crown to Calgary Stampeders who led a home-and-home final 21-18 with just that much time to go. But led by quarterback Dobler, who is regarded as their brightest star, the Bombers scored eleven points in those six minutes and took the title.

On Dobler depend most of the Bombers' hopes. He can kick and pass with anyone the Bombers ever had — including their immortals — and his field generalship stands comparison with anything along that line seen here in many a day.

Winnipeg, Nov. 27 — (CP) — With Winnipeg the hot-bed of curling in Canada, it's small wonder that two Winnipeg entries already have gone forward for the Nipawin, Sask., $10,000 bonspiel next Jan. 6-16. The entries will be skipped by Howard Wood of the Granite and Leo Johnson of the Strathcona Clubs.

Woods, twice winner of the MacDonald's Brier Tankard, emblematic of Canadian curling supremacy, and Johnson, a one-time winner and Manitoba's representative in the Dominion finals last winter, have their eyes on the four 1947-model automobiles which go to the winning rink.

Latest reports from secretary Morris Belovich of the Nipawin Curling Club are that entries are reaching him from Nova Scotia to British Columbia and he expects to reach his limit of 128 rinks before the deadline of December 14.

The prize-packed bonspiel is causing widespread interest throughout curling circles. The entry fee is $100 a rink, the proceeds of which will help pay for a new curling rink at Nipawin which is already under construction.

Officials announced that there will be three qualifying events with $1,000 in prizes for each event, and those rinks entering the fours in any event qualify for round-robin playdowns for the autos. Rinks qualifying in the first event will not be eligible to compete in the second or third events. Heated sleeping car accommodation has been arranged for visiting rinks, who have been asked to bring their own rocks for the tournament.

Too, the 'spiel has received its knocks. The presidents of the Dominion and the Saskatchewan Curling Associations, Jimmy Armstrong and Jimmy Robison, have claimed it is bringing professionalism into the game. But the officials at Nipawin say that "every knock has been a boost," and entries are still coming in to their headquarters.

Senior hockey in Western Canada seems to be coming into its own again — Manitoba is operating a three-team senior league for the first time since the early SOS and Kenora, Ont., recently announced the organization of a new four-team senior league. The Western Canada Senior League is well under way with its five-team 100-game schedule.

Pinky Davies of Flin Flon, Man. former defenceman of Boston Bruins in the National Hockey League, has been appointed instructor at the juvenile hockey school at Nipawin.

President Says No Dispute Exists Between Bodies

.. (By The Canadian Press) ..

Hanson Dowell, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said last night that to his knowledge no dispute existed between the C.A.H.A., and the International Ice Hockey Association, and that the entry of a Canadian team in the world championships scheduled for Prague next Spring would be discussed at a meeting of C.A.H.A. officials in Montreal Monday. He was commenting on a London dispatch which quoted British hockey sources as saying a dispute had arisen between the C.A.H.A. and the I.I.H.A. over Canadian participation in the World Series at Prague, Feb. 15-23, 1947.

Opening sessions were routine except for discussion of difficulties, including sandflies, which plagued Canadian women athletes in Australia eight years ago, at the opening in Montreal, yesterday of the Women's Amateur Athletic Federation of Canada. The sand-fly-bitten athletes competed in the British Empire games in Australia in 1939.

Charles Watson, president of Toronto Huskies of the Basketball Association of America, said last night at Toronto that Huskies would be "very interested" in any plans for an All-Canadian Professional Basketball final. The idea came from Vancouver where Clam MacDonald, foresaw a Vancouver team in the coast pro circuit battling it out with the Eastern Canadian pro champions.

An annual $100,000 horse race with a world championship flavor, to have its first running next Fall, was announced yesterday at New York by Empire City track officials. The race would be the Empire Gold cup 1 5-8 miles, for three-year-olds and up.

Justice Samuel H. Hofstadter ruled at New York yesterday a trial was necessary in a $200,000 slander and libel action brought against fight promoter Mike Jacobs by representative Donald O'Toole (Dem.-N.Y.) The action grew out of allegedly defamatory words Jacobs uttered, O'Toole said in his complaint, after the Congressman criticized Jacob's conduct of the Joe Louis-Billy Conn fight last June 20 in New York.

Prelude to a promised 1947 shakeup of the Chicago White Sox was yesterday's dismissal by Manager Teddy Lyons of Coach George (Mule) Haas, hold-over from the regime of Jimmy Dykes, whom Lyons succeeded as pilot last season. General Manager Leslie O'Connor predicted "Many changes, I hope," through trades and releases.

The score of a Scottish League soccer game last Saturday between Dundee and Dunfermline was 5-2 for Dundee. The Canadian Press, through an error in cable transmission, said that Dundee won 3-2.

George Herman (Babe) Ruth, former Yankee home run king, was admitted to a New York hospital yesterday for observation. Officials said his condition was fair.

GALT RED WINGS SWAMP FALCONS OF ST. CATHARINES

Team Has Won Six of Eight Starts But Only Fifth in Standings

(By The Canadian Press)

Galt's fast-skating Red Wings must sometimes wonder what it takes to get to the top of the OHA Junior "A" standings.

They've won six of their eight starts, including a thumping 9-3 triumph over St. Catharines' Falcons in Galt last night, for the second-best won-lost average in the 10-team circuit. They rank second behind the pace-setting St. Michael's College club in goals scored and second-low in goals scored against them. And they're tied for fifth place in the group.

Main reason for the Wings' lowly estate, apart from their inability to beat the Irish in two starts, lies in the group schedule. While other teams have fattened their averages in four-point games involving Windsor Spitfires and Toronto Marlboros and Young Rangers, the classy Detroit farm club has played all its games against two-point competition.

But off last night's display the Wings' position should improve. They piled up an 8-1 lead over the winless Falcons in the first two periods and coasted home easily in the final frame.

The Wings' second line took the scoring spotlight with Bill Scott and Bert Giesbrecht each scoring twice. Robertson, Bruce, Cooney, Uniac and Hnatuch got the other Galt goals. Thompson, Unger and Currie scored for the losers, with Maxie Haunn turning in a great performance in the nets despite the lopsided score.

Mindful of the O.H.A.'s new edict against rough play, both teams played clean hockey but 6 penalties, including a major, were meted out in the torrid third period.

Oshawa Generals, tied for second place, take on St. Michael's College in Toronto tonight in the only junior game. In the senior loop Hamilton's unbeaten Tigers clash with Hamilton Pats and the second-place Toronto Staffords visit Stratford.

The score shall count and the face-off shall then be at centre ice, and player B3 shall then be penalized.

If team "A" loses possession of puck without scoring, play shall be immediately stopped, the face-off shall be at a spot where puck was located at time of stoppage and player B3 shall be penalized.

Rule 34, Sec. (c)

The same as above applies if a player of the team not in possession commits a Match penalty.

COACH OF QUEENS RESIGNS OFFICE

Kingston, Nov. 27. (CP)—Douglas Monsson resigned Tuesday as athletic director and football coach of Queen's University. Monsson came here last summer on a two-year contract following his discharge from the U.S. army after five years in service, most of it with the late General George Patton's 3rd Army.

Before the war Monsson was a star footballer with University of Illinois. A weak Queen's football squad was able to win only one game under Monsson this year, defeating McGill here 14-5. Monsson, a lieutenant-colonel when discharged said he hoped to re-enlist in the U.S. Army.

Bowing out with Monsson is Tex Thomas, assistant coach, himself a one-time Illinois luminary and once line coach at the University of Alabama. In announcing acceptance of Monsson's resignation, officials of the Athletic Board of Control of Queen's said no consideration had yet been given to replacing Monsson or Thomas.

TEDDER MORRIS TELLS ARGOS NOT TO BE TOO SURE

Argo Coach Believes His Team Can Defeat West if They Play to Form

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 27. (CP)—Coach Tedder Morris pulled the thought lines into his forehead with a subtle eyebrow movement, pondered for a bare split second and then said "awright, awright, when the game's won it's won but not until then."

All of which is another way of saying the little Malton, farmer and his Toronto Argonauts take nothing for granted until the last whistle blows.

So for Tedder and Argos there'll be no playing fast and loose with their Grey Cup when their Dominion Football Championship goes on the line in Saturday's east-west game with Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

What the Tedder warns against is over confidence, just because Argos took Winnipeg 35-0 last year and wound up Eastern Champions last Saturday with a 22-12 beating of Toronto Balmy Beach.

But the Argo approach to the Canadian final, their 15th game of the season, is leisurely, with Morris not pushing the players too much.

Never Spies On Enemy

"They know what they have to do and if I can make it easier for them at times, so much the better," said Morris. They haven't let me down yet.

The Argos field general said he hadn't scouted Jack West's Bombers; that he never spies on the enemy; that it shouldn't be necessary if his team does its job properly.

While Tedder put the rest of his boys through a game of touch football, Joe Krol and the ends limbered up his passing arm with practice passes. That Krol arm, after all the forward passing it's done this season, becomes just about invaluable for Saturday's game.

And, as snow covered the Varsity stadium field the Bombers themselves 24 strong, rumbled eastward by train and such a football-wise man as Annis Stukus sounded a word of warning to the east.

The veteran football star and Toronto Star sports writer took one look at the odds said to be offered by Western bookies—4-1 odds on Argos, 2-1 that Bombers lost by 20 points—and noted: "Beware of the West when they say they should stay at home."

Winnipegs have never beaten an Argo team in the Dominion final, but it's a fact too that this year they have had tougher schedule than last and now they have a new coach in Jack West and four important American imports in Wally Dobler, Bill Ordway, Don Hiney and Martin Gainor. The latter coming east for his second time.

Canterbury, England (CP) — Dr. Hewlett Johnson, dean of Canterbury, says visitors to the Cathedral nowadays are less inclined to carve their initials in the old building than in the past.

BOB MONTGOMERY STIFFENS MOUZON IN EIGHT ROUNDS

Hangs Onto One-Half of World Lightweight Title by Victory

By SID FEDER

Philadelphia, Nov. 27—(AP)—The 27-year-old bobcat Bob Montgomery always wins the battle when the chips are down.

He did it again last night by stiffening whirlwind Wesley Mouzon, a 19-year-old streak of dark brown lightning, in eight rounds at Convention Hall to hang onto his half of the world lightweight championship, just when everyone figured he was washed up.

He proved he was still champ of that portion of the lightweight world bounded by New York and Pennsylvania (not to be confused with the other, or National Boxing Association, half where Ike Williams, the transatlantic traveller from Trenton, N.J., has the official blessing).

A turnout of 12,416 customers piled up the biggest indoor fight gate in Quaker City swatting history — $85,414.

This had been built as a grudge match, from ill feeling left over from last August's short-and-sweet scramble between Bob and Wesley, and it turned out to be exactly as advertised.

The two went at it as if they were going to knock each other's head off, with Wesley taking the first three rounds on his speed and jabs, and Bob coming on to slow down his frailer opponent with body bombs, soften him up with right hands, and finally cave the roof in with a long left hook at 2:18 of the eighth.

Bob has always blamed last summer's speedy birdie-singing finish on the fact that the bout was put on early, because of threatening weather. Always a slow starter, he claimed he didn't have a chance to warm up.

"I warmed up in the dressing room this time for half an hour before going into the ring," he revealed after last night's fuss.

Mouzon was surprisingly light last night at 132 3/4. Montgomery weighed 135.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

HEAVY SUGAR N

Sugar production in Queensland, Australia, is a $32,000,000 a year industry.

"Looks like the standout show of the whole season" commented one wrestling fan today regarding next Friday's mat program which features not one but two (count 'em) main bouts.

The return match between Valiant Vic Christie and Karl Krippler Davis vies with the other main encounter which features a team bout between Ben and Mike Sharpe on one side and big Olaf Olsen and Strangler Bob Wagner on the other.

Davis and Christie had a thrilling battle here last week which resulted in a peculiar decision on the part of Referee Ernie Powers. Apparently hit by Christie while breaking up a melee near the ropes, Powers went down with a crash and today is sporting a nice bruise on his face. When he got up the official rushed over to Davis and disqualified the latter under the impression that the Krippler was the one who smacked him.

The teambout between the Sharpe brothers and Wagner and Olsen should warm the arena building to a new peak regardless of the outside temperature on Friday. These towering young Sharpe brothers beat the Russians team combination in Maple Leaf Gardens two weeks ago and served notice they are ready to take on any pair in the whole world. Ben is the scientific member of the slugging Sharpies but brother Mike likes to use those oak-beam arms and fists of his and when he hits a man something has to give.

Form Charts Favor Bruins And Leafs But Leaves Third N.H.L. Game Tonight Toss-up

Leafs Go to Chicago, Boston Plays at New York and Canadiens Visit Detroit

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

On the basis of past performances Toronto Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins should enhance their National Hockey League standings in tonight's games, but Montreal Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings may as well toss a coin right now.

The form charts lean heavily towards the league-leading Leafs and the fourth-place Bruins mainly because their respective opponents have yet to humble them in this six-weeks-old season.

Leafs should have the softest touch as the Black Hawks, whom they meet in Chicago, three times have bowed to Conn Smythe's boys, by scores of 2-1, 5-2 and 4-2. Bruins show but little less success against New York Rangers, visitors at Boston, with a 3-3 tie and 3-1 and 4-0 victories.

The Montreal-Detroit clash is scheduled for Detroit. In four previous meetings, the pot was split with Canadiens winning two by 7-2 and 4-3 scores and Detroit 2-1 and 6-3 victors. But in each case the home club was the winner.

With the records disposed of, a glance at the immediate positions of the six clubs might be relevant.

Black Hawks, fallen onto dark days, will be seeking to end a three-game losing streak against Toronto. Two players will be making their first appearance against Leafs — veteran Clint Smith, injured in a pre- -season exhibition game, and young Bill Gadsby, up from Kansas City Play-Mors of the United States League.

Leafs will present 15 tried and true performers despite the continued absence through injury of winger Harry Watson and Gus Bodnar, who gashed his leg Saturday against Detroit. Rookie Harry Taylor, who joined Leafs recently, should see action as the 16th player.

Big Dutch Bouchard of Canadiens may miss the Detroit game, in which Montreal hopes at least to protect their second - place position from the Red Wings, one point behind in third. He would be replaced by Leo Lamoureux on defence.

Best news on the Montreal camp this week was the return of centre Buddy O'Connor, who broke a hand before the season opened, and this means tricky Kenny Mosdell gets a needed rest, he broke his nose in the weekend action.

Rangers, three points behind Bruins in fifth position, start at Boston with hope born from a great week-end drive in which they humbled Canadiens and Chicago after 8 winless games. Bruins will be seeking a victory to get back into the battle for the top.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 27. (CP)—Resumption of the Wightman Cup series and Wimbledon tennis tournament this summer after a seven-year lapse has demonstrated all too clearly Britains lack of players ready for international competition.

British players weren't even within hailing distance of victory so the council of the Lawn Tennis Association has decided to launch a nation-wide coaching scheme early in 1947, to develop new talent.

It hopes to obtain co-operation of local education authorities on an expense-sharing basis.

The plan is to divide the country into five areas, and all secondary and elementary schools where tennis is taught will be invited to participate. School teachers, supervised by professional coaches, will be asked to look out for promising youngsters. Boys and girls who show ability will be taken in hand by county branches of the L.T.A. and given advanced teaching.

"It is the finest thing that has happened in British lawn tennis for many years," a member of the L.T.A. executive said.

At last it's happened—horse and rider in a steeplechase have finished their adventure together, perched atop a fence, rocking-horse fashion.

Well-backed to win the Grand Sefton chase at Liverpool, Ian Alder was last seen as he approached the open ditch after passing the stands the first time. His effort at a leap landed him with his forelegs over the fence and hind legs in the rear. His jockey kept his seat as the horse fell astride the obstacle.

The pair remained in that position a moment; then the rider climbed off and walked along the top of the fence while park attendants dragged his animal to firm ground.

Alex Brown, who began pro sport as a motorcycle speedway rider and turned to the cue game, is sore at the way things are developing since Joe Davis announced his retirement a couple of months ago.

Alex, rated by some experts a few years ago as the world's No. 2 snooker player, isn't included in a four-player round-robin tournament to decide Davis' successor and has thrown out a £100 ($400) challenge to the winner. The four in the tournament are Horace Lindrum, Duncan Macdonald, Jack Smith and Fred Davis, Joe's brother.

HIDING IN ARGENTINA CLAIM

Toronto, Nov. 27 — (CP) — Robert Martin, president of the Trinity-Bracondale Progressive Conservative Association, told a meeting of that organization last night that he knows where Sam Carr is.

Carr, former organizer of the Communist party in Canada, has been sought for several months on a Federal subpoena in connection with the espionage trials.

Martin said Carr is "hiding in Argentina."

J. H. P. Here is some information regarding trotting and pacing horses as per your request.

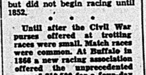
• • •

About 90 per cent of the registered trotters and pacers of today trace back directly to in the male line to Rysdyk's Hamiltonian, and the vast majority of them have collateral crosses with that stallion. In turn Hamiltonian, foaled in 1849, was a direct descendant of the English thoroughbred stallion "Messenger," foaled in 1780 imported in 1788. Some of Messengers' progeny attracted wide attention by their speed, spirit and endurance.

• • •

At first trotting races were usually of three miles. Topgallant, a grandson of Messenger through both sire and dam, was the fastest trotter of his day and was credited with doing three miles in 8 minutes, 11 seconds. In those days a mile in 3 minutes was considered as fast as a horse could trot.

• • •



• • •

The earliest authentic trotting record in America was made by Yankee, a gelding of unknown antecedents who went one mile in 2.59 at Harlem, N.Y., in 1806. Most celebrated of the Messenger get was the mare Lady Suffolk first "queen of the trotters" whose reign lasted from 1833 to 1852. She made a record of a mile in 2.29½ in 1845. After that the breed became established and training methods improved there was a steady advance.

• • •

In 1859 Flora Temple trotted a mile in 2.19¾ after having successively set new speed records on four previous occasions. She was foaled in 1845 but did not begin racing until 1852.

• • •

Until after the Civil War purses offered at trotting races were small. Match races were common. At Buffalo in 1868 a new racing association offered the unprecedented sum of $10,500 for a four-day meet. Trotters began to earn large sums of money. In 1867 Dexter cut the mile record to 2.17 1/4. In 1871 Goldsmith Maid trotted in 2.17 flat and in 1874 she reduced that to 2.14. She was by Abdullah a son of Hamiltonian was foaled in 1857, first appeared on the track when 8 years old and for a long time was the greatest money winner on either track or turf. Her total winnings were $364,200.

• • •

The next trotting queen was Maud S a golden chestnut mare only 15 hands, 3 inches high. Foaled 1875 and sired by Harold, son of Hamiltonian. When four years old Maud S trotted an exhibition mile in 2.17 1/4 and was then sold to William Vanderbilt for $20,000. She steadily cut down the record until in 1881 she went the mile in 2.10 1/4. The black gelding Jay-Eye-Cee lowered this to 2.10 in 1884 but Maud S showed that she was still the fleetest of trotters by hitting 2.09¾ that year and 2.08 3/4 in 1885.

• • •

Using the then new bicycle wheel sulky with pneumatic tires, Nancy Hankam, a brown mare foaled in 1886 trotted a mile in 2.04 in 1892. This was gradually lowered until Croesus set a new record of 1.59 3/4 in 1903 which was promptly lowered to 1.58 1/2 by the chestnut mare Lou Dillon. Sold to C. K. G. Billings for $12,500 Lou Dillons' racing engagements were cancelled and she was used only in races against time. Thereafter she astonished the devotees of racing not only with her record mile with pneumatic sulky but also by drawing the old-fashioned high wheel affair a mile in 2.05 clipping three and three quarters seconds from the former record held by Maud S.

• • •

It was a little more than eight years before Lou Dillon's record was broken. In 1912 the gelding Uhlan trotted a mile in 1.58. A year later at Lexington, Ky., he went a mile in the marvellous time of 1.54 1-2. This does not stand as a trotting record however, since it was not made under conditions of recording racing. In 1922 Peter Manning set a new record of 1.56 3-4 for the mile. Three years later when nine years old, he did two miles in 4.10 1-4.

• • •

In 1938 at Lexington, Ky., Greyhound trotted a mile in 1.55 1-4 which up to 1944 remained the world's record against time.

• • •

The history of the pacers parallels practically that of the trotters. Careful breeding and training have steadily produced pacers of greater speed and stamina. Before Lady Suffolk had bettered 2.30 in 1845, the pacer Dover a brown gelding had gone the mile in 2.28.

• • •

In 1845 another gelding James K. Polk, lowered this to 2.27 and exactly ten years later the mare Pocahontas paced a mile in 2.17 1-4. In 1868 Billy Boyce a gelding made 2.14 1-2 but this was under saddle. Sleepy Tom, gelding, hit 2.12 1-4 in 1879 but in 1884 a brown horse named Johnston made 2.06 1-4.

• • •

The black stallion, Direct, established a mark of 2.05 1-2 in 1892 but Hal Pointe lowered this to 2.04 1-2 the same year. Two years later, Robert J. cut this down to 2.01 1-2 and then in 1897 the celebrated black stallion Joe Patchen made it one quarter second lower. Prince Alert, in 1902 was the first pacer to hit 2.00 flat and the next year he paced a mile in 1.57.

• • •

In 1905 the brown stallion Dan Patch went a mile in 1.55 1/4 but with the help of a windshield, a device that was afterwards barred from official racing. In 1925 Directum I set the record at 1.54¾ which held until 1938 when the four-year-old stallion Billy Direct broke Dan Patch's 1.55 1/4 with a mile in 1.55 and without a windbreak runner. The record for double-gaited horses is held by Calumet Evelyn, who paced a mile in 1.59 1/4 at Lexington in 1935 and the next year trotted a mile in 1.59 1/2.

Harness racing has reached its greatest development in the United States where it has become one of the most popular of outdoor sports. At a rough estimate some 5,000 trotters and pacers compete in the hundreds of race meets annually in the U.S.A. and Canada. The vast majority of these meetings are held at county and provincial or state agricultural fairs where betting is prohibited. Trotting is the most popular form of harness racing in the U.S.A.

New York, Nov. 27. (CP) — Place Frankie Sinkwich at the head of your fame-is-fleeting list this season. . . practically nobody noticed the laconic announcement by New York's football Yankees the other day that the one time All-America college star with Georgia has been released for the season because of a knee injury . . . Sinkwich was the Tommy Harmon and the Doc Blanchard of his day, with his picture in every magazine and newspaper in the United States and movie offers beckoning. . . Then he ran into a block thrown by Bob Dove, who grew up with Frankie at Youngstown, O. . . . A cartilage in Sinkwich's left knee was strained and this season he couldn't muster the old steam. . . . At a recent practice the newspapermen and photographers ignored the former Georgia star, who retired to the dressing room with the comment: "After you've been good once. You can't stand going out there and looking bad and having people call you a bum."

A dispatch from Hamburg, Germany, announcing that Max Schmeling had been declared "Free of Nazi taint' by a denozification court and had obtained a professional boxer's licence from British authorities there brought this unblushing comment from Dan (N.Y. Daily Mirror) Parker: "If Max Knows his onions and is looking for another stake, Hamburg is just the place for him to remain."

ARMY FIGURED TO TAKE NAVY

By LEE LINDER

With Navy in possession, the middle signal caller shouted — "Rise tacks and sheets, let go and overhaul the weather lifts"—and his teammates knew he meant a flying wedge.

That was the first Army vs. Navy football game 56 years ago, when the teams met one frosty November afternoon on the slippery plains of West Point in a classic that today is the United States gridiron's greatest show each year.

The 1890 skirmish excited no one. A lone reporter from a New York paper stood with 500 shivering spectators on the rope-lined field and watched a hastily-assembled Army team lose 24-0 to more experienced Navy.

This Saturday, however, more than 300 newspapermen and 100 photographers will diagnose every play in the 103,000-seat Municipal Stadium here. This time Army has the experience, while Navy—loser of seven straight after winning its opener, still is trying to assemble a winning squad.

As Army-Navy game enthusiasm grew so did animosity — and when a retired Rear Admiral challenged a Brigadier General to a duel in 1894 the secretaries of war and navy cancelled the game for five years.

Army is odds-on favorite to extend its unbeaten streak to 27 against the midshipmen. The last time Army lost a game was to Navy in 1943 by a 13-0 score.

Army has won 24 times against Navy, lost 19. Three games were tied.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Like many a man, I am very much misunderstood. Nobody climbs on my knee to console me. But a few (blessem) write letters to let me straighten out their puzzlement.

♥ K 7 4
♦ K 10 8
♣ A 8 4 3

It seems that a player opened with one heart and this hand made a reply of one no-trump. The opener then bid two hearts and this hand passed. That started something.

It turned out that there was enough for a game in hearts in the pair. This hand was criticized for passing the two heart bid. All of the players there assume it is the fault of my system.

Among the comments were: "Your book says this hand counts to only three tricks. The three tricks were high cards. They were all shown by the response of one no-trump."

They continue: "Two hearts was not forcing. With no additional tricks, this hand could not raise to show his support for the heart suit. That is where the trouble seems to be."

These players put their finger on very important spots in the Horse Sense method of bidding. They show intelligence. They show a knowledge of what they are talking about.

However, when you break a rule you should not throw the blame on its companion rules. The order of choice of bids is T-A-N. A takeout is first, an assist second, a no-trump bid is last.

With adequate support, this hand should not respond first with a no-trump. It should assist to two hearts. No-trump comes after an assist in the order of preference of bids.

Even so, one no-trump response did not raise the number. There is still an assist raise available on the second round with the third trick. Refuse to abuse a rule that you use.

The Movie Column

Kieron Moore, the 22-year-old Irish discovery now playing the lead in Sir Alexander Korda's "Man About the House," is the latest excitement in the British film industry. Mr. Moore is a dark-eyed; black-haired Irishman who started acting at 17 at Dublin's Abbey Theatre, went to London to play in "Desert Rats" and was snapped up by Sir Alexander for a seven-year contract.

Leslie Arliss, his director, says he is going to be terrific. "He has had no film experience, and naturally his work is still a bit rough. But he does the right thing by instinct."

Stories of King Arthur and his Knights will be produced by three studios. United Artists are working on a feature-length cartoon, "King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table; Eagle Lion, J. Arthur Rank's American affiliate, has bought screen rights to the comic strip "Prince Valiant" which includes Arthurian characters, and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has announced he will go to England next year to produce and play Sir Lancelot in "The Knights of the Round Table," written by Clemence Dane.

Ron Randell, the Australian stage and movie actor, will make his American film debut as Bulldog Drummond in "Bulldog Drummond at Bay," directed by Sidney Salkow as first of a series based on the novels of the late M C. McNeile, better known under his pen name of "Sapper."

$1,000 UNCASHED CHEQUE

Minneapolis, Nov. 27—(AP)—The First National Bank was combing through its records of the past 53 years trying to find out what happened to $1,000 belonging to one E. C. Cutler. The search started after I. C. McManis, a custodian at Kansas State College in Manhattan, Kans., found an uncashed cheque. The date on it was Oct. 25, 1893, and it was signed by Cutler.

FIGHTING AT HAIPHONG

Hanoi, Indo-China, Nov. 27 — (AP) — French transport planes ferried paratroopers into Hanoi yesterday as continued fighting was reported between French and Viet Nam forces at Haiphong and Langson. Official quarters here said three French soldiers were killed and 17 wounded in the Langson fighting. Viet Namese losses appeared heavy, with 63 taken prisoner.

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty was telling us about men being superior to animals, saying, Many centuries and ages ago, wild animals roamed the earth in sertch of their pray, and men hid in caves, but gradually men invented weapons to master the animals so they could claim the earth for their own. They even domesticated some of the animals, such as the horse and the ox, and made them werk. They were able to do this because Nature has endowed men with certain qualities that she has denied to the animals. Who can tell me a way in which men are superior by nature to beests she said.

Me waving my hand and saying, Any man can imitate a dog barking, but a dog imitating a man talking would be werth a fortune.

Well, now that's a good answer in a way, because it's quite true that men are gifted with the power of speech and they invented language to take advantage of it, Miss Kitty said.

Making me feel even smarter than I thought I was, and Raymin Levy waved his hand, saying, Most people have mad memories and an elefant neve forgets anything, but no matter how much an elefant remembers, it cant write a book about it.

That's very true, but the important thing is, why? Miss Kitty said. What would an elefant need to be able to write a book? she said, and Raymin Levy said, It would need to know how to fill a fountain pen or werk a typewriter.

Nansense, it would need to have been endowed by Nature with reasoning power, Miss Kitty said. How many members of this class believe themselves to be endowed by Nature with reasoning power? she said.

Which everybody raised their hands, and Miss Kitty said, Well I'm greatly relieved, I'm sure. I was beginning to doubt it, she said.

Being sourcastic.

Me and Puds Simkins were walking home from school with Mary Watkins and trying to be funnier than each other to see who could make her laugh the most, and we came to the bilding that's being tore down to make room for another one to go up, and we stood outside the rope with the big danger sine hanging on it watching the bricks and stuff banging down on the sidewalk, and I saw Mr. Flannery the cop starting to come down the street and it gave me a swell idea, and I said, Hay, I'm going to crawl under this rope, I dont care whether the sine says Danger Keep Out or not.

And I grabbed a hold of the rope with a fearse expression, and Mary Watkins said, Benny, dont you dare, you stay right here, even one of those bricks is enough to kill you if it hits you right.

Aw, he's just bluffing, he wouldn't have the nerve, Puds said, and I said, The heck I wouldn't, what am I afraid of?

And I looked in back of me and Mr. Flannery was closer but not close enough, and I said, Well, here I go.

Benny, stop, please, I'll tell your mother, Mary said, and Puds said, Aw let him do it if he's crazy enough.

Which by that time Mr. Flanney was right in back of us and I quick put one leg over the rope saying, I've only got one life to lose, the heck with it, and Mr. Flannery yelled, Come out of that, get away from there, have you no sense at all, dont you see that sine, what do you think that rope's for, now keep going, the 3 of you.

Which we did, me saying, Darn him, he had to spoil everything, and Mary saying, Anyway, it certainly was a brave idea.

Puds just looking sispicious on account of not having enough proof to say anything.

The search for the perfect actress to play Mrs. Paradine in "The Paradine Case" has apparently ended with the announcement by David O. Selznick that the part will be played by Alida Valli, 23-year-old blonde Italian film actress, if she can arrive from Italy in time.

Miss Valli, known professionally by only her last name, won the Venice festival award of 1940 for "Piccolo Monde Antico".

"Out of the Ruins", the National film Board's 30-minute documentary on the effects of the war of Greece and that country's efforts at rehabilitation with the help of U.N.R.R.A., is being shown to audiences of all ages on the non-theatrical circuit in New York and Washington.

This documentary has been reviewed in the United States as the best available firm on Greece and one of the best on U.N.R.R.A.

"Trent's Last Case", which has been the last world in mysteries since Britain's E. C. Bentley wrote it in 1930, will come to the screen starring Joseph Cotton by way of Selznick's vanguard films. The story centres on the murder of a British financier.

Artists Alliance Corporation, the new movie company backed by Mary Pickford and Lester Cowan, has announced its first four pictures: "One Touch of Venus", "Babylon Revisited", "Sorrel and Son" and "The President's Husband. They will be distributed next year.

"Sorrel and Son" has already

CHAPTER 7

"Listen, I was thinking about what you told me about going home to wash lunch dishes," began Mollie.

"No harm in that." Jennifer's sad little face brightened into a smile.

"Well, I don't know whether there is or not," Mollie answered decidedly. "The radio and helping those little girls with homework is all very well, but you ought to have some friends. Who comes in, in the evenings?"

"Oh..Oh, you mean company? Betty's friend Seely sometimes, and they go out and leave the children with me. And old Mrs. Crane from downstairs. And Mrs. Bangs. She's the dressmaker next door. She made over this dress for me and wouldn't let Betty pay her anything." Jennifer looked down at the gray cloth with the red buttons.

"Have you got a formal?" Mollie asked abruptly, after a moment. It was the noon hour. With some fifty or sixty other girls the two were eating their luncheon from paper bags, seated at the long bare tables in the stark, bleak pavilion on the roof. Girls were drinking tea; a kettle was boiling. Girls were busy at the line of mirrors along one wall. Girls swept in and out of the swinging doors of the lavatory; there was a strong smell of disinfectant, tea, powder, cold odors of soap and wet towels were in the air. Outside a shy, late February day was beginning to shine like spring; there had been a smothering fog all morning; now it was clearing and they could see the sky above the cindery, breeze-swept roof.

"A formal?" Jennifer asked. She flushed uncomfortably. "A party dress?" she asked, knowing the answer.

"Yep," Mollie answered briefly.

"No. I had a white dress for commencement," Jennifer admitted, "but Betty cut it down for Elna's confirmation."

"Oh?" Mollie's face brightened. "The child was confirmed? What church?"

"We don't go to any regular church. It was just that Elna got going to Sunday school with her school chum last year and there was a confirmation class and she got into it."

"I see...." Mollie said slowly, her enthusiasm damped. "But — well, what do you wear if you go to a 'to anything? Theater or movies?"

"Anything I happen to have on" Jennifer answered with a laugh.

"Ah-ha," Mollie commented noncommitally in an abstracted tone. "Look," she said suddenly, "I have a cousin named Ellen Flowers—to tell you the honest truth I think she's half-witted or something—but she's my aunt's daughter so my mother can't do enough for her. She's coming down from Sacramento for a week and Mama is fixing up a party for her; she's about your age. Look, why don't' you come?"

"Oh, I'd love to." But Jennifer felt a sudden wave of shyness and fear sweep over her.

"No, I mean really. You can wear anything—it won't be a party. I mean it'll just be a lot of boys and girls and dancing and cake—that kind of thing."

"Don't you live way out Twin Peaks way, Mollie?"

"Oh, I'd get you there, only — all is, you'd have to stay overnight," Mollie said, frowning slightly as she concentrated upon the plan. "One of the boys would whirl you home, of course, but Mama always likes to have the girls stay—except my cousin Cecilia who lives three doors away, and the Grogans; they always come about ten strong. But you'd have a much better time staying overnight. My sister Delia's coming; she's married now and lives in Oakland, but we'll fix you up a couch in my room. I'll let you know what night and you tell your stepmother.."

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Evans was situated upon one of the steep, rounded hills that bound the old outlines of San Francisco toward the southwest, known as Twin Peaks. The city had long swarmed around them and beyond them, but because of their steepness the Peaks had remained only partly covered with homes. Many of these were of the humblest description, mere cabins stilted against the sharp rise of grassy earth, but many of them also were more pretentious, bulwarked with good stone copings, surrounded by gardens dripping with fuschsias and nasturtiums and all the hardier flowers and rising like medieval castles to survey for miles in every direction the city and the bay and the far hills.

The narrow streets of Twin Peaks climbed like shelves about the curves of the hills or jutted on sharp upgrades between the cave-like garages and long flights of garden steps. Humble or fine, every house on the hill boasted a royal outlook whether the sun was rising over the Berkeley hills or setting beyond the Golden Gate, whether wild rains were sweeping in from ocean or milky summer fogs stretched long fingers over the roofs and spires of the city and the spiky wall of masts along the piers. The incomparable beauty of a widespread view was shared by them all.

The large double parlors of the Evans house were situated two floors below the high street upon which the doors of a double garage opened. Passing the side of the garage was a bridge and a short flight of descending steps to a front door. The front door admitted Jennifer and Mollie, on the great evening of the party, to a large square hall flanked by bedroom doors; an inner stairway, somewhat pretentious, descended in a curved bay of windows and scattered palms from this hallway to reach the drawing-room floor.

But Mollie and Jennifer stopped at the bedrooms, Mollie flinging open various doors to shout for her mother, Jennifer in a state of excitement, ecpectation, and admiration never equaled before in her life.

Oh, what a house—how many rooms and how bright they were with the late sweet afternoon light lingering in them, and how wonderful were the persons who surged to and fro, and what fun they were having! It scared her a little and enchanted her as well; she was almost voiceless for the first hour. But that was of no consequence, for they were all talking, laughing, shouting, hammering, whistling their utmost; her voice could by no possibility have made itself heard.

Mollie's married sister was there, spooning applesauce and pablum into a heavy, staring baby boy seven months old. Mollie's brother Joe, a kindly, big, loosely built redhead, was being sent on errands. Her other brother, Eugene, whose name was always pronounced wth a violent accent on the first syllable, was in a helpless, ineffectual way attempting to make himself generally useful. Jennifer supposed Eugene to be about eighteen; later in the evening he told her that he was exactly ten years older than that and that her patronizing older-sisterly ways would have to be altered. Ellen, the visiting cousin, a prim little girl with glasses, was neatly unpacking a very smart bag in Mollie's room. There were twin beds there, and a wide couch deliciously made up with sheets and blankets for Jennifer.

The man of the house, a stout, successful, red-faced, vociferous person who walked about dangling a section of the evening paper from a puffy hand, and looking sharply over his glasses at his daughters and their guests, welcomed Jennifer with the remark that she favored his late aunt Julia, and Mollie's stout mother, flushed from kitchen activities, gave Jennifer one look and then put her arms about her for a motherly hug, saying at the same time, "Why, she's nothing but a little ger'rl! I wish I had one that size—great animals that you've all grown to be!" And then, to Jennifer: "I've put you on the couch, darling, but it's as good as any bed in the house and better if you ask me!"

"Oh, I'll love it," Jennifer was beginning shyly, when Mrs. Evans said, "My dumplings! They're burnt black on me," and disappeared downstairs.

"Finish this up for me," said Mollie's sister, putting the baby and his half-consumed bottle into Jennifer's lap. Jennifer cradled the bullethead expertly against her arm; she had fed bottles to Faddy not so long ago. Michael Kane looked up at her in surprise, waved a fat leg, applied himself to his meal, and sucked away contentedly, his eyes rolling about the room.

There was enough for him to see and Jennifer to see. More girls were arriving now; Mollie was dressing; the visiting cousin, Ellen Flowers, a small, eager-eyed, plain girl, had assumed a much admired dress garlanded with roses, had pinned a wreath of roses upon her somewhat lifeless hair. It was pale brown hair, very straight where it left her head, holding itself reluctantly in curl at the ends. The other girls were enthusiastic about her dress, however, and she seemed to be well pleased with herself.

Much exchanging of bras and stockings went on; there were stitches to take; somebody rushed downstairs to do some last-minute pressing. Mollie wore a not too fresh gown of blue silk. "I'll be into ice cream and they'll be slopping coffee and beer all over me," she argued when her sister alluded to it as "looking like the last run of shad." Delia was evidently going to wear her wedding gown; it hung in imposing satin folds from the closet door. "I've put on eight pounds since Michael came and I don't doubt it'll bust right open on me the minute Father Cahill arrives!" she confided to Jennifer.

When only a film remained to prove that there had been milk in the bottle and Michael had been carried off to his crib, Mollie came into the room carrying a brief pink frock on a hanger.

"Come here," she said to Jennifer. And as Jennifer walked toward her she held the dress up against her.

"Perfect," said Mollie's sister.

"Try it on," 'Mollie commanded simply.

"Me!" gasped Jennifer. The room went round. She was ashamed of her underwear, of course, but nobody seemed to notice it. Delia and Mollie slipped the dress over her head and Mollie wheeled her about to see herself in the mirror.

"Sizes too big," said Ellen Flowers, keenly interested, not too sorry.

"Yep, it's too big," Mollie said regretfully, while Delia stood in the dressmaker's attitude, hand pressed into her cheek, head dropped sideways, studying the case. Jennifer's heart sank. She would have worn it had it dragged on the floor. To put it on she had discarded her heavy shoes, her office dress of gray cloth with red buttons. She tipped herself up on her toes.

The borrowed dress was not new, but it was not old either. It was of rose-pink taffeta with tiny rosettes of rose, silver, and blue wherever they could with any propriety be placed. Its neck was rounded with a frill of silver lace; its puffy sleeves came only halfway to the elbow and showed most of Jennifer's bare, slim, childish arms.

"It's lovely!" she breathed, her eyes on the mirror.

"Now wait," said Delia. "The thing is, what about slippers?"

"Oh, she can wear any of mine; we'll stuff 'em a little," Mollie said.

"There's a pair of Eileen Molloy's slippers in my closet that I'm going to return to her one of these days," said Mollie's mother, who had just come in and sat panting in a big chair. "Run up there, Vic," she added to a girl guest, "and feel in the back of the black box that's marked 'sealskin boa' and you'll have your hand on them. They'll fit her like the skin on your nose."

"Jennifer, if I see you into that dress someone'll have to rip you out of it when you come up to bed," said Delia Kane. "D'you mind that?"

"Of course she don't; Mollie'll do it for her!" Mollie's mother assured her, still breathing hard.

"Oh, can you do it, Delia darling?" Mollie pleaded.

Delia already was armed with a thimble and thread. She drew Jennifer toward her, and as her fingers moved Jennifer actually saw the dress tighten itself, shorten itsel, fall into trim little folds where it had bagged, puff just a little more in the sleeves, fluff out just a little more from the belt.

"Mind you don't try to get out of it by yourself," Delia warned, with a pin in her mouth.

"Oh, I won't!" Jennifer breathed fervently.

"I've probably got about half of these stitches into her girdle," said Delia. "Look, Mama."

"Well, she looks like a dear sweet child," Mrs. Evans approved, moved almost to tears.

Jennifer under Mollie's direction, sat down on the dressing-table bench, and Mollie began to work on her hair. She brushed it sharply, pinned it here and there, pulled out little sprays and feathers of it to lie against Jennifer's temples. She powdered Jennifer's slightly uptilted nose and recommended a mild lipstick that somehow did wonders for Jennifer's looks.

By this time the slippers had been brought down from Mrs. Evan's room, which was apparently upstairs again, perhaps on a level with the garages, and there was a Cinderella tableau when Jennifer tried them on, stood up, took a step or two, and turned upon the watchful and sympathetic company a face radiant with triumph. A perfect fit!

From the moment she was floating on a sea of bliss. She was not drab, brokenhearted little Jennifer Richie any more; she was someone entirely, a girl that everyone in this brilliant company liked, and called "little" and "darling" and a girl who was taken into their hearts and on more than one occasion into their arms and whirled away on a high tide of laughter and affection and fun on the current of her first real party.

Not that the Evanses considered it a real party. This was but a lesser, casual affair. By seven o'clock the guests were all assembled, and they were but some thirty or thirty-five all told, not enough to give the slightest impression of crowding in the big, bright ,overlighted rooms.

ANCIENT CASKET FOUND

Mexico City, Nov. 27—(AP)—An ornate crystal and gold casket which researchers believed might contain the remains of Herman Cortes, Spanish conqueror of Mexico, was discovered last night in a box taken from behind a blank wall in the chapel of an ancient downtown hospital. Cortes' remains, hidden by his descendents during anti-Spanish riots in 1823, have long been sought by historians.

SOFT COAL

Judge Goldsborough leaned forward and remarked:

"Calling it a labor dispute does not make it one."

Again, later, he interposed:

"What you are saying, Mr. Padway, is that when society itself tries to protect itself from cold and hunger and misery and economic disintegration, it is involved in a labor dispute. That is what you are saying."

"The gentlemen (government counsel) may say there is no labor dispute, but that denies the elementary facts," Mr. Padway replied.

Mr. Padway also challenged the court's right to try Mr. Lewis for contempt.

"If the Norris-La Guardia Act is applicable, then this court had no right to issue the contempt ruling," Mr. Padway declared.

Mr. Padway spoke after Judge T. Alan Goldsborough decided that the question of dismissing the contempt citation against the United Mine Workers' president should be taken up first.

Mr. Lewis sat stolidly behind a battery of union lawyers. An issue was whether he should be punished for permitting his 400,000 soft coal miners to quit work last Wednesday, despite a court order.

The small courtroom was so crowded that only 12 spectators were able to find seats. Hundreds of disappointed curiosity seekers were left outside in the corridors.

Might be Jury Trial

Judge Goldsborough announced it had been suggested that Mr. Lewis "might be entitled to the right" of a regular jury trial. Accordingly, the judge said he was considering empanelling a jury with full power to convict or acquit the union leader.

John F. Sonnett, Assistant Attorney General, chief government counsel, quickly told the court the government contends Mr. Lewis has no such right.

After relating how the Norris-La Guardia Act had been drawn by Congress specifically to protect unions from being deprived of their economic weapons through restraining orders and injunctions, Mr. Padway called attention to Judge Goldsborough's stop-strike order served on Mr. Lewis Nov. 18.

"If there ever was a command to go back to work, this order commands that very thing," Mr. Padway declared.

The government contends that the Norris-La Guardia Act does not apply when the employer is the government as in the case of the coal mines.

Long Shutdown Serious

Government economists reported that a 90-day shutdown in the coal fields would be "catastrophic" to the United States.

This prediction was contained in material compiled by economists on the probable impact of the strike on the country's post-war recovery for presentation to the court. It may be next week before it is brought out, however, as the trial may extend for days, even weeks.

Judge Goldsborough will not be bound by the jury's recommendations, however, when he decides whether Mr. Lewis should be held in contempt of court for disregarding the judge's order of last week to call off termination of the United Mine Workers contract with the government.

One of the points on which the case hinges is whether or not Mr. Lewis had a right to declare the contract terminated. The government contends he did not — that the contract is binding so long as the government holds possession of the mines which it seized last spring to end a 59-day strike.

Mr. Lewis contends he had the right.

Partly dimmed out today, the U. S. reeled under the growing impact of its second major coal stoppage within a year as unemployment in related industries hit 70,000. There were indications 200,000 to 250,000 workers would be idle by next week.

As the strike went into its 7th day there were these developments:

The steel industry reported 45 of its 227 blast furnaces banked and future cutbacks were scheduled.

Railroads began furloughing men.

Some schools and colleges extended the Thanksgiving recess to conserve coal.

Some of the active strong golds were Donalda, Macassa, Premier, Beattie, MacDonald, Orlac, Quebec and Rush Lake. Loss of a few cents for Pacific Petroleum was about the only change in the western oils.

Salt Development Scheme Proceeds In Saskatchewan

Regina, Nov. 27 — (CP)—Drilling of wells for a $1,000,000 salt development scheme in the Unity area of Saskatchewan to employ between 60 and 80 men will begin immediately, it was announced today.

Resources Minister J. L. Phelps said in a statement that an agreement between the provincial government and the Prairie Salt Company, Limited, providing that a plant with minimum capacity of 25 tons daily would be ready for operation before June 30, 1948, was ratified by order-in-council yesterday.

Decision of the government to grant exploration and development rights to the company, a subsidiary of the Dominion Tar and Chemical Company Limited, Montreal, came after the Provincial government's economic board decided that it "would not be desirable to develop the salt deposits under public ownership at the present time."

Rental of the area to be developed, about 90 miles northwest of Saskatoon, will be one dollar per acre annually and royalties will be based on 30 cents a ton or three per cent of the net manufactured sale price of bulk salt, whichever is the greater.

A 435-foot layer of salt with assays running as high as 99.2 per cent sodium chloride — almost pure salt — has been discovered at nearby Vera, Sask. The discoveries were made while drilling for oil.

The refining plant will probably be set up at Killsquaw Lake, near Unity, to make use of the large supply of water necessary for the processing.

Other terms of the agreement include: the company is required to give preference to the Saskatchewan market; any associated minerals produced in the operation remain the property of the Crown; the Crown has the first right to purchase the product; the company must give first preference to Saskatchewan residents in employment; and the Provincial government must have first option in the event of sale of the company.

Tourism is Seen Factor in Mutual Understanding

Toronto, Nov. 27—(CP) — If Russia opened her doors as Ontario does to thousands of tourists, Russian fear and suspicion of the outside world would be dispelled within five years, Travel Minister Welsh of Ontario today told the convention of the Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce.

Such an arrangement also would mean that the problems of the United Nations would disappear almost overnight, he asserted.

Ontario's tourist plans for next year call for maintenance of high standards of meals and accommodation, Mr. Welsh said, as well as for stricter regulations for tourist camps and the licensing, inspection and classification of more than 3,500 resorts.

Better arrangements for visiting yachtsmen are in the offing as is a plan to make visitors more conscious of Ontario winter sports facilities.

Also planned is an increase in the number of border travel bureaus.

Plymouth, England (CP) — The city has been given a "go ahead" by the Town and Country Planning Ministry to take over 178 acres for post-war rebuilding programs.

Sub Found, Towed to Port

Durban, Nov. 27—(Reuters) — The submarine Rover, formerly of the Royal Navy, was found by a Mombasa tug yesterday after being reported adrift for 24 hours about 80 miles from Mombasa. The Rover is being towed to port. She left Mombasa for Durban last Thursday with a crew of eighteen aboard.

Winnipeg Children Warned to Keep Off Streets at Night

Winnipeg, Nov. 27 —(CP)— The sex-pervert slayings of two 13-year-old Winnipeg boys — still recorded in police files as unsolved — is prompting officials periodically to warn parents to keep children off the streets after dark.

Police have checked hundreds of clues and tips, questioned known sex-perverts by the scores and almost nightly sent cruiser cars racing to some dark lane or street where crime-conscious citizens have reported some suspicious happening.

But the killer — police are certain it is the same man — of Roy McGregor, shot three times, whose body was found in a Fort Rouge district coal and lumber yard last January and of George Smith, also shot three times in a west-central lane in September—is still at large.

Because he may strike again, anytime, anywhere, officers don't grumble when they close in on a back lane only to find that the "man-assaulting-boy" report that was telephoned to headquarters a minute before is some father cuffing his son, belatedly returning home. In fact they welcome the reports. Some night, they say, some citizen's phone call may direct them to the man they have been seeking relentlessly for nearly a year.

To keep citizens conscious of the danger that hangs over boys that Chief Constable George Smith — no relation to the slain boy — issues warnings. School principals post his letters on notice boards and pass them on to teachers who in turn warn their pupils. Winnipeg newspapers feature them; radio stations broadcast them.

Chief Smith issued his latest yesterday. It said:

"The Police Department have been working all out in the hope they would bring this criminal to justice.

"When the police have succeeded in their task, life will once more be normal but not until then."

Nor is youthful life exactly normal.

If night falls and a boy hasn't appeared home, there's a flurry in the house, telephone calls to neighbors, a search by some irate —and anxious—parent. When Boy Scout meetings or other youth activities end, the children are escorted home or travel in groups with the last boy of a group usually telephoning his home. Then his father or mother meet him or watch from their front door. Constables on a beat and patrol cars keep a watchful eye on any children they see unescorted.

MOLOTOV CALLS ON U. N. FOR END TO ARMS RACE

No Jail Sentence For Lewis Likely Say Commentators

Mine Boss Accepts Order Extending Injuction 10 Days

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Nov. 28 (CP). — John L. Lewis, leader of the 400,000 striking soft coal miners in the United States, today was the unseen shadow across the national table as Americans celebrated their favorite feast—Thanksgiving Day.

The grimly ominous figure of Mr. Lewis and his sensational court trial dominated the U.S. scene but Americans celebrated with a determination to forget for the moment that they are on the verge of a labor uprising of catastrophic proportions.

Silent, iron-visaged and unsmiling, the 66-year-old leader of the miners yesterday submitted to serving of an order extending for 10 days the injunction ordering him to take the necessary action to send his men back to the pits.

But he had one ray of hope; Judge T. Alan Goldsborough said at the contempt hearings yesterday that whatever the outcome of the trial no one would suffer discomfort.

This was interpreted to mean that while Mr. Lewis and his United Mine workers might be fined if found guilty, there will be no jail sentence.

Yesterday's developments saw opening of the trial of charges of contempt of court for the failure by Mr. Lewis and his associates to obey the injunction served on him Nov. 18, forbidding him to advise his followers that their contract to operate the mines seized by the government in the last strike would end Nov. 20.

Claims Act Does Not Apply

Counsel for the mine workers argued, in vain that the injunction was a violation of the Norris-LaGuardia Act which forbids injunctions against strike action when a labor dispute exists.

That, Judge Goldsborough declared, does not apply when the strike is against the government.

However the argument over the right of the court to try Mr. Lewis for contempt occupied the entire court day and adjournment was taken until Friday morning.

The trial may last weeks and there may be an appeal to the Supreme Court.

Mr. Lewis faced an uphill battle to clear himself of the contempt charge. It was clear the opening skirmishing had not gone well for the miners' leader.

Out of a welter of legal argument the one point standing out starkly was Judge Goldsborough's observation on his injunction. He said Mr. Lewis and his United Mine Workers were "guilty of contempt" if they disregarded it irrespective of whether his court had power to issue an injunction forbidding a work stoppage so long as the government holds the mines.

Called it Anarchy

And he said it was "anarchy" when individuals gave no heed to orders from the courts.

By the token of that language, Mr. Lewis has lost his motion for immediate dismissal of the contempt charge — unless his 8-man legal battery comes up with some argument more impressive to Judge Goldsborough than those used thus far.

A ruling on the motion may come soon after the hearing is resumed tomorrow morning.

Meanwhile this Thanksgiving Day was marked by a rising tide of unemployment, affecting an estimated 90,000, and by dimouts which darkened cities in more than a score of states.

Basic steel plants, those converting iron ore and pig iron into steel, and railroads were hardest hit as the A.F.L. United Mine Workers' bituminous coal miners began a second week of idleness. Steel fabricators, who use steel as a raw material, expected wholesale lay-offs which spokesmen predicted would climb to 100,000 within a week in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio.

The ban on extra lighting and coal consumption brought extended Thanksgiving holidays to many schools and colleges.

Tight Wire Trip To Cross Falls Has Met Snag

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Nov. 28—(CP) — Plans of the "Great Arturo" to cross Niagara Falls on a tight wire met a snag yesterday.

Niagara Frontier Commission officials said the Commission opposes "any stunts with the Falls as a background."

"The Great Arturo" — Arthur Trostl — announced Thursday in Tampa, Fla., he would leave for Niagara Falls to train for a tight-wire attempt next spring.

Torstl, Vienna- born, said he crossed the Danube River on a tight wire when 15 years old.

Commission officials said no application from Trostl has been received, and added that "if he put his wire on somebody else's property, such as below the Rainbow Bridge, we wouldn't have any control over him."

An attempt below the Rainbow Bridge would be a crossing of the Niagara River gorge rather than the Falls. All seven previous successful crossings by tightrope have been across the gorge.

The first was made in 1859 by Blondin, who carried a man on his back and pushed a loaded wheelbarrow. He repeated the performance three times the following year. Balleni crossed in 1873 and was followed three years later by Maria Spelterina, who wore baskets on her feet.

In 1887, Steve Perre crossed on a 6/8ths-inch cable. Three days later his body was found in the gorge and it was believed he had tried to duplicate his feat during the night and had plunged to his death on the rocks below.

Soldier and Half Sister Sentenced For Incest

Stafford, England, Nov. 28 — (AP) — A 29-year-old soldier and his half sister who lived apart as children but fell madly in love while on furlough were sentenced today for incest. Both William Davies and Mary Beards, 23, pleaded guilty. After promising to discontinue the romance, Davies was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and Miss Beards was placed on probation for two years. Prosecutor E. Terrell said a police officer arriving to arrest Davies for being absent without leave found the couple locked in each other's arms.

Former Paratrooper Wins Fight Against Paralysis to Drive Car

St. Thomas, Nov. 28 —(CP)— A war-imposed struggle against a paralysis that crippled him from the waist down has ended in partial victory for Ted Higginbottom of St. Thomas — he can drive a car, thanks to an ingenious hand-operated control.

The former member of Canada's first special service force who seemingly became a bed-ridden invalid when a steel fragment entered the base of his spine on Italy's shell-torn battlefield, obtained permission to drive the car yesterday — only the 19th Ontario veteran permitted to use the special control.

It was May, 1944, when the whistling shell fragment cut Ted down. Carried from the field a paralytic, he kept his courage high through long months of hospitalization. Last January he came out of hospital and got his job back in a department store.

But the permission to drive his car was the crowning touch. The control that permits it protrudes from the left side of the vehicle's steering column and is similar to the gear shift lever attached to the right side.

Pressure downward of the lever operates the clutch and accelerator. Pressure upward operated the brakes. That's all that shows of the pipes and cables and booster compressors that make the controls work.

"But it's great to have that feeling of independence," he said with a grin.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK TELLS ASSEMBLY CAREER AT END

Presents China's New Coalition Constitution And Claims no More Political Ambition

Nanking, Nov. 28 — (AP) — Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek presented his National Assembly a draft constitution for representative self-government today and in an emotion-packed speech told his countrymen he considered his political career at an end.

The full impact of his words was not immediately clear, but some observers felt Gen. Chiang, now 60, was ready to retire altogether as president of the National Government, a position which carries with it command of China's ground, sea and air forces.

Split Asunder

China was virtually split asunder by civil war as he spoke. The Chinese Communists refused to attend the National Assembly as it was set up and angrily withdrew their chief peace negotiator to Jenan. Fighting went on in North China and Manchuria.

The National Assembly, convoked without the Communists, was tensely silent as the man who led China through eight years of war with Japan rose for his brief speech, the full significance of which has yet to reveal itself.

"I am 60 year old now," he said in presenting the Assembly China's new coalition draft constitution. "In the past 20 years, since Dr. Sun Yat-Sen's death, I have been entrusted with the responsibilities of government."

"Now that the National Assembly has taken over, I have no more political ambition."

There was no immediate indication whether his statement meant he would divest himself of his vast powers.

The new constitution, Gen. Chiang told the Assembly, provided for a residential system of government, with extensive powers entrusted to the chief executive.

He declared there would be a danger of totalitarianism if the president did not know how to limit his powers, and added:

"The Chinese people must be educated in the science of government, since they have not had any experience in self-government."

The Generalissimo said that if the new constitution is to work satisfactorily those who exercise power must ably protect the rights of the people in all ways.

He spoke even as the split widened between his Kuomintang and the Communists, who have been making extensive military gains in North China and Manchuria while his own troops are under a cease-fire order.

"This presentation marks the end of responsibility of the National Government and the beginning of government by the people," he said.

NEWSPAPER DEAN DIES

Bangor, Me., Nov. 28 — (AP)— Frank H. Davis, 79, Dean of Maine newspapermen, died last night after a brief illness. Mr. Davis was a member of the editorial staff of the Bangor Daily Commercial, where he had been employed for the last 11 years. He started his newspaper career on the old Bangor Whig and Courier, on which he served at one time as editor.

Mercy Slayer Of Imbecile Daughter Has Been Reprieved

London, Nov. 28 — (AP)—Gordon Richard Long, sentenced to be hanged for the mercy slaying of his imbecile daughter whom he "loved very much," was reprieved today by Home Secretary Chuter Ede. The hanging would have been set for some time after Dec. 8.

Long, 46-year-old paper mill worker, pleaded guilty last week to putting to death his seven-year-old Jessie, born with a misshapen head and deformed feet—a little girl who, he told police, could not tell day from night and could only speak in "unearthly noises."

Long's neighbors yesterday handed a petition for clemency to the Home Secretary, the only person who can commute the death sentence.

CRIPPS' CREDIT SPEECH BRINGS STRONG COMMENT

Newspapers See Stark Future for Britain in Way of Exports

London, Nov. 28 — (CP Cable) —A warning by Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade, that Britain is rapidly using up the dollars she borrowed from the United States and Canada brought a burst of comment from London morning newspapers today.

The Conservatives Daily Mail said of Sir Stafford's speech, delivered yesterday to an export trade conference: "One by one the wrappings of illusion are being pulled from the eyes of the British people. Some day the seventh will be removed and they will face stark reality. Sir Stafford Cripps came near pulling it away yesterday . . ."

The Independent Daily Mirror said that 46,000,000 Britons are living on credit. "Half of everything we bring into this country to feed our people and keep our industries working comes from the United States and Canada and we pay for only a fraction of it. We pay the rest out of Canadian and American loans."

Tragic Story Of Departed Family Related by Vet

Hamilton, Nov. 28 —(CP)— A tragic story in which a Hamilton ex-serviceman was granted custody of his three-year-old daughter from his English war-bride wife, was unfolded before Judge William F. Schwenger today as the distraught husband informed him that his wife and mother-in-law had left his home while he was at work last night, taking the baby, her crib and clothes with them.

The Judge awarded the applicant, Elison Herbert Guinter, custody of his daughter in the absence of the wife, Eileen Dorothy Guinter. The husband told the Judge that his wife and mother-in-law previously had tried to sell the furniture and to book passage for England, and he feared they intended to take the baby with them.

His mother-in-law was not happy in Canada, the court was informed by the husband.

The husband said he learned from a neighbor that his family had been moved during his absence in a truck, which had its identification sign covered.

The mother-in-law came to Canada in June of 1946, but apparently was not content here, and persuaded her daughter to return to England with her. Guinter heard they intended to take the child with them. He commenced proceedings to prevent them from taking the little daughter from the country.

The day before the case was to have been heard in court — only last night — the family left home while the husband was at work.

Opposition to Design For F.D.R. Memorial Continues to Grow

London, Nov. 28. (AP)— A hue and cry against the design for the Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial statue, which represents the late United States President standing, grew louder today.

Fifty-one more members of Parliament, bringing the total to 80, signed a motion criticizing the proposed Grosvenor Square Statue as "inadequate and unworthy."

The Daily Telegraph printed a picture of the statue in Washington which shows Abraham Lincoln seated—the posture favored by most objectors to the Roosevelt statue.

The Roosevelt Memorial committee still declined comment.

AZERBAIJAN GOVT. ERECTING DEFENCE AGAINST IRANIANS

Apparently on Verge of Re-Asserting Its Independence

Tehran, Nov. 28 — (AP)—The Azerbaijan Provincial government, apparently on the verge of re-asserting its independence, was reported today to be erecting fortifications in the path of Iranian government troops dispatched from Tehran to supervise elections in that northern state.

The Tehran newspaper Etelaat reported that Azerbaijan forces under Gen. Daneshian were hastily building defence works near the Azerbaijan frontier about 65 miles north of Zanjan, from which Iranian troops yesterday were said to be advancing toward the border.

The reports followed a radio broadcast from Tabriz, Azerbaijan capital, declaring that the troop movement had violated agreements between the provincial and central governments and that Azerbaijan now considered these agreements "nil and cancelled."

Premier Ahmed Qavam replied to the broadcast by dispatching a message to Dr. Salamollah Javie, governor-general of Azerbaijan province, re-affirming his intention of sending security forces to Azerbaijan to maintain order during the coming national elections.

Says Dr. Shugar's Task to Improve Recording Paper

Ottawa, Nov. 28 (CP). — The Crown today produced information on the two-year naval career of the accused in the trial of former Lieutenant David Shugar, charged with conspiring to communicate confidential information to Russia.

The 31-year-old native of Poland, a physicist graduate of McGill University, is the 13th Canadian to go on trial as a result of the espionage probe. He pleaded not guilty yesterday before County Court Judge A. G. McDougall.

Igor Gouzenko, former Russian Embassy clerk, identified technical information prepared at the Russian Embassy and listed in a document placed in evidence yesterday as questions that were to be passed along to Shugar by Sam Carr, vanished former national organizer of the Labor-Progressive party.

Former Cmdr. S. W. Comach said some of the information would be available to Shugar. Some would not be.

He said Shugar was assigned to the task of improving the recording paper of the Asdic—submarine detection device—for many months.

Early in 1945, the accused had been assigned to the improvement of an oscillator, another part of Asdic equipment. Both phases were "very definitely secret".

OFFICE TO CLOSE

Woodstock, Nov. 28 (CP).—The Woodstock Prices Board office will close, effective Jan. 1, 1947, it was learned today. The area now served by the local office will be consolidated under the jurisdiction of the London office. The Ration Board will continue to operate in the city as in the past.

DAIRY FARMERS ASK INCREASE FOR PRODUCTS

Brief Presented To Prime Minister King And Cabinet; States Situation Critical

Ottawa, Nov. 28 —(CP)— A seven-man cabinet committee headed by Finance Minister Ilsley today promised to give careful consideration to the representations of Canadian dairy farmers for higher prices for butter, cheese and concentrated milk products.

The representations were made in a brief presented to the cabinet committee at the House of Commons by a delegation headed by H. H. Hannam, president of the Dominion Federation of Agriculture and R. H. Bailey of Edmonton, president of the Dairy Farmers of Canada.

Mr. Hannam said later the delegation, made up of representatives of the dairy industry, received a "sympathetic hearing."

There was no statement from the cabinet representatives.

The delegation brief placed stress on the declining production of dairy products and urged that higher prices be permitted if the trend was to be reversed.

Gardiner Heard.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner, the only cabinet member to address the delegation, was understood to have emphasized that feed for livestock, plentiful in 1944 when dairy production was around its peak, now was in short supply.

Alex Mercer of Vancouver, a delegation spokesman representing Fraser Valley Milk Producers, Ltd., told the cabinet committee that if Canada was obliged to supply another country with cheese and the price was lower than the cost of production, the country should absorb the loss rather than the producer.

The delegation was reported to have asked that farmers be given a price of 74 cents a pound for their butterfat, against the 52 cents, including a 10-cent subsidy, which they now receive, and a price of 32 cents a pound for cheese, compared with the 22 cents they now are paid.

The brief said the delegation asked for the interview "because of the serious and very unsatisfactory situation which prevails in the dairy industry."

Contents of Brief.

It continued:

"It arises fundamentally because of the need for maintaining a proper balance between farm costs and farm prices; between prices of dairy products and prices of other farm products; and also between prices in the four branches of the dairy industry itself, namely, butter, cheese, concentrated products and fluid milk.

"The crux of the situation is that prices being paid for milk going into butter, cheese and concentrated milk products are too low on any basis of comparison that may be made with prices for other farm products, or for milk going into the fluid milk trade, as well as in comparison with costs of production which have been rising steadily since the first of the year.

Woman Who Was Presumed Dead Adds New Complications to Case

Calgary, Nov. 28—(CP)—The case of the woman who returned to Alberta after 16 years to find her husband had remarried and to learn more details of the Alberta court decree of May last year which declared her dead, had new complications today.

The woman — Mrs. Sylvia Hollister — in an interview here denied that her farmer husband had been unaware of her whereabouts during the 16 years she allegedly "disappeared." Mrs. Hollister, who arrived here from New Zealand Sunday, said she had not left Lacey Hollister of Vulcan, Alta., but that she had been ordered to leave after domestic difficulties in 1929.

She said a separation order, drawn up by a Vulcan lawyer and dated Aug. 22, 1929, gave her custody of their two children—both now in their early 20s and in New Zealand — with the provision that she assume responsibility for their maintenance and her own.

Mrs. Hollister said that after her father's death in 1930 she had moved to Vancouver with her children and her mother. There, during the period from 1930 to 1938 when she left with the others for New Zealand, her husband had visited her, she said.

Declaring she did not intend to grant a divorce to her husband who remarried a month after the court decree, Mrs. Hollister said she first learned she had been declared legally dead in July last year and that later on that year she had sent a cable and two letters to legal authorities in Calgary and Edmonton, but apparently the cable was never received.

The woman said she had received a reply from Mr. Justice C. J. Ford who presided at the sessions when the decree was granted informing her that the letters were received in Calgary in September, 1945.

Debate on World Arms Reduction Opens in Assembly

Final Approval Given For International Troop Count

By MAX HARRELSON

Lake Success, N.Y., Nov. 28—(AP)—Foreign Minister Molotov, opening the United Nations debate on world armament reduction, called on the member countries today "to put an end to the arms race which has begun."

Mr. Molotov addressed the 54-member political committee of the U.N. assembly after it gave final approval to a closely linked plan for an international troop census, with Russia dissenting on the scope of that industry.

The way was cleared for the arms discussion when an Australian effort to renew the fight against the big-power veto was sidetracked until tomorrow or Saturday.

Egypt Agrees to Delay

Egypt yielded earlier to British and United States opposition and agreed not to press for immediate action on a surprise demand for immediate withdrawal of all armed forces from the territory of U.N. members except in cases covered by the charter.

Egyptian delegate Mahmoud Bey Fawzi told the 54-member political committee of the U.N. assembly that in view of the American and British insistence on more time to study the proposal he would agree to have it considered separately rather than in connection with a world troop inventory.

Both Senator Tom Connally of the United States and British delegate Sir Hartley Shawcross had objected that the question had many implications and that it should be considered as a separate matter but only after delegates had time to give it thorough study.

As an example of the possible far-reaching effects of the Egyptian proposal, Senator Connally cited the case of American troops now in Panama under an agreement with the Panamanian government and declared that the measure might mean that the assembly would ask the United States to recall all of its troops defending the canal

Call Proposal Dangerous

British and U.S. delegation members said the Egyptian proposal in its present form was "dangerous" and was "wide open" to numerous interpretations.

Thrown into the powerful 54-member U. N. Political and Security Committee yesterday during a heated discussion which saw approval of a world-wide soldier census, the Egyptian proposal came as a surprise to delegates and brought immediate objection from Britain and the United States.

An attempt to bring the proposal to a vote was stalled and the Egyptian plan was held over until today for discussion.

Russia threw her support to the proposal but Britain and the United States succeeded in postponing action until today, arguing that the Egyptian amendment to the soldier census was "vague' and "unacceptable" in its present form.

In presenting the amendment, Egyptian delegate Mahmoud Bey Fawzi told the committee there was nothing hidden in his proposal. He said Egypt admitted the legality of agreements for collective self-defence, that it did not affect troops outside of a country if they were within the charter, and that he could see no grounds for opposition.

M. Molotov told the committee when the amendment came up that he understood occupation forces were not included in the proposal, to which British delegate Philip Noel-Baker replied there was nothing to sustain M. Molotov's opinion.

This issue was expected to draw the concerted attention of all delegations today as the most important problem presently before the political committee, which is working as usual on Thanksgiving Day.

Once this issue has been handled, the Committee will vote on the entire soldier census resolution, which was voted on item by item yesterday. Then the committee will take up the discussion of disarmament.

Donald MacLean Refused Bail

Hamilton, Nov. 28. (CP)—Donald MacLean, 68-year-old former employees of the Hamilton Street Railway Company, charged with murder in connection with the torso-slaying of John Dick last March, has been refused bail, Mr. Justice A. Urquhart said today.

MacLean, with William Bohozuk, friend of Mrs. Evelyn Dick, sentenced to be hanged Jan. 7 for the murder of her husband, await trial in January for the slaying of the 40-year-old street car operator.

Their trial began last month after Mrs. Dick had been convicted, but was adjourned when the Crown's case was stalled because of Mrs. Dick's refusal to testify in the charge against her friends and MacLean, her father.

Counsel for Mrs. Dick has filed an appeal at Osgood Hall in Toronto.

An election for the reeveship only will be held in Huntingdon as last year's council of Arthur Hagerman, Cecil Geen, Elmer Wood and Morley Haggerty were returned by acclamation.

DRIVERS INJURED WHEN TRUCK COLLIDES WITH CAR

Dr. William Cornett, Stirling physician, suffered chest and knee injuries, and Gordon Irwin, 172 Station St., Belleville, suffered knee injuries as result of a collision between two vehicles at the intersection of No. 14 Highway and the Madoc road at Foxboro shortly after nine o'clock Thursday morning.

Dr. Cornett was proceeding in an easterly direction when at the intersection his car was in collision with an oncoming truck driven by Mr. Irwin. Each vehicle was damaged to the extent of approximately $500, according to Provincial Constable James Driscoll who investigated the accident.

DREDGING COMPLETED AT GOVERNMENT DOCK

Dredging of the channel extending some 350 feet east of the Government Dock facing the city dump has been completed and the channel now has a depth of some sixteen feet. Operations for installation of proposed piling and a retaining wall have been postponed until spring.

The entire residue of the channel bottom composed in the main of clay, stone and some gravel, was hauled down bay by tug and tow-barge and dumped there.

ALBINO FAWN SHOT NEAR OTTER LAKE

An albino fawn buck shot near Otter Lake in the Weslemkoon district by Percy Gould of Peterborough attracted considerable attention on Front street today. Mr. Hugh Singer of this city was in the party that hunted in that area. The deer was almost pure white except for brown spots on its hind hocks and the upper part of its head and ears. Albino deer are quite uncommon and this one attached to the front of the car drew a crowd of spectators. One of the bystanders stated that his uncle shot a pure white buck in the same area about five years ago.

Particulars of the accident, and the extent of injuries, were not obtained. Dr. Allison gave the injured first aid at the hospital, while they are now under the care of Dr. G. H Stoble.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Men's Club executive held their re-organization meeting on Wednesday evening and decided to resume regular meetings in January. Fred Reid is president of the club with Jack Wilson being named as vice president, Lorne McDougall as treasurer and Vic. Lancaster as secretary.

Premature Lighting Might Result In Strict Rationing

Toronto, Nov. 28—(CP)—Premature lighting of municipal Christmas trees and Christmas decorations could bring about a crisis in the Ontario Hydro power situation which might result in rationing, Dr. Thomas Hogg, the chairman of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission, warned today.

"We're hoping against hope that it will be possible to get by without rationing," Dr. Hogg said. "In any case I think it will be possible to say there will be no restrictions on Christmas lighting for a few days before Christmas.

"If Christmas lighting is premature, however, we may have to ask for help from consumers to restrict street, sign and domestic lighting and use of electricity."

The Ladies Have the Best of It In Selection of Christmas Gifts It'll Be Mostly Bills for Poor Pa

It's going to be a somewhat funny Christmas for the head of the house. Not that he's going to be rid of the job of paying the bills, but when he looks at his stocking on Christmas morning he is going to be surprised at the things he didn't get.

And it's not because the family think any the less of him. It is just the fact that presents for the male of the species, as far as variety goes, will be scarcer than the proverbial hen's tooth.

There are practically only two lines left open to the shopper for Dad's present, that have any volume or variety.

If he is sports-minded, then he can have his pick. Or if he needs a watch, he can take his choice. Outside of that he'll take whatever he can get.

A survey of Front Street shops today revealed some startling facts about Christmas merchandise. And milady gets all the "breaks." It will be "Poppa who pays" but Mother will get the cream of the choice of gifts.

Suits Still Scarce

The old man won't get that new suit for Chrstmas, nor for Easter as far as that goes, only in some cases. One store that usually orders 800 suits for Spring trade must be satisfied with 83. Hats for Christmas will be fairly good as far as supply is concerned. Ties won't be too hard to get. Shirts and pyjamas are definitely out. Lined gloves will be scarce but the unlined article will be fairly plentiful.

The laboring man who has plenty of avoirdupois will have to make his old overalls do. Small sizes will be available in small quantities, but the gent who has an equatorial measurement of over 40 inches, must dream, and wear the old ones plus patches.

In the jewelry line china, crystal and silver-plated flatware will be very scarce. Sterling silver won't be so hard to get and you can take your pick of any make of watch. There's lots of 'em.

Plenty of Cosmetics.

The lady of the house scores again in the drug-store type of seasonal gift. There will be no scarcity of cosmetics and gifts of that nature and there will be plenty of fancy soap, perfume, etc. Deliveries are not crowding stores but it is predicted they will be such as to supply the holiday demand.

Back to the sports department. There are all kinds of sports shirts on hand and at fancy prices. One dealer stated he had sold fifteen dozen shirts priced at $10.95, $11.95 and $12.95 and the latter sold out first. There are plenty of scarves, but boys' sweaters will be fairly scarce.

The fur coat trade seems to be good, and milady should not suffer too much if she needs a new Christmas frock.

Toys in Good Supply.

The kids will have plenty of toys with this year's trend definitely toward the peace angle. The tanks, guns, aircraft and soldiers, submarines and battleships are noticeable by their quantity absence.

In their place has come the articles of a peace-time era, with a large increase in toys made of metal. Trucks, fire engines, wagons, etc., are plentiful in woods, metals, plastics, and at peacetime prices.

So there it is, "You pays yer money, but there aint much choice."

'Tom' Noakes, Native of City Becomes Helicopter Pilot

A. W. "Tom" Noakes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Noakes, 57 Grier Street, and now a resirent of Toronto, was graduated this week from the Bell Aircraft Corporation's flight training school at Niagara Falls, N.Y., to become Canada's second commercial helicopter pilot.

Noakes, who is a pilot for the Lundberg - Ryan Exploration Company of Toronto, learned to fly in 1935 at Kingston, Ont., and served as a staff pilot at the Royal Canadian Air Force observer school in Malton, during the war. He has logged 2,500 hours in conventional airplanes.

Although piloting a helicopter was a new experience for him, Noakes encountered no difficulty with the different piloting technique required in rotary-wing aircraft and soloed after six hours of dual instruction.

He's convinced that the helicopter has a great future.

"Its versatility will make this type of aircraft valuable for geographical surveys of the kind conducted by Lundberg-Ryan," he said. "The helicopter's ability to land in, and take off from, small clearings also will prove advantageous in providing emergency air service to isolated sections of Canada."

Noakes resides with his wife Lillian, and their daughter Mary, at 15 Fairbanks Avenue, Toronto.

He will fly helicopters for Lundberg-Ryan, which have contracted with Bell Aircraft to purchase two of that firm's two-place aircraft, the first commercially-licensed helicopter in the world.

Roughage Feeds In Good Supply Says Crop Report

The monthly crop report published by the Ontario Department of Agriculture has this comment to make regarding available fede suplies for Hastings and Prince Edward livestock this coming winter:

Hastings — There will be sufficient roughage feeds for all classes of livestock. Hay is above average in feeding quality. Silage is below average but should be sufficient with other roughage feeds. A better than average grain crop was harvested this year, but the high livestock and poultry population will still make it necessary to bring in considerable Western feed grain.

Prince Edward — There is sufficient hay to winter the stock on hand. There is considerable more local grain on hand than any year since 1942. Many of the larger poultry men have laid in their winter supply of Western grain. Very few silos are full; but there is an abundance of pea silage available at canning factories.

One of Heaviest Docket Faces Court Session

The annual General Session of the Peace for Hastings County will commence on Monday, December 2nd., with one of the heaviest dockets on record scheduled to be heard.

Scheduled for hearing, and undoubtedly the case which will be heard first, is the one charge of fraud against E. M. Carefoot, MacDonald Ave. The preliminary hearing in connection with this charge heard last summer saw much interest on the part of county residents.

Also scheduled to be heard during the sessions is a charge of indecent assault against Gordon Mulligan, of Trenton, former civilian employee at the Trenton Air Station, and charges of gross indecency against Ralph Turner, and William and George Boyd of Coe Hill. In a further case of Rex vs Harper, multiple charges are scheduled to be heard.

It is expected that Judge Lane, of Picton, will preside in the Carefoot and Mulligan charges, while Judge Reynolds, of Kingston will take the remainder of the court.

Candidates For Bd. of Education Will Be Heard

The voting and other public will get a first hand opportunity to hear the platforms of the candidates, twelve all told, who are aspiring to seats on the 1947 Board of Education, at a special meeting being held in the Collegiate Auditorium next Wednesday night at eight o'clock.

The meeting is being sponsored by the combined Home and School Association of Belleville, and is being held to give the public the chance to hear candidates speak, as well as those already in office. Speeches will be limited to five minutes.

The Home and School Association held a similar meeting last year and it proved such a success that officials felt another should be held this year. It was stressed that the meeting is being held mainly to hear aspirants to office air their views and platforms and it will not be a criticism of those in office of the past year, nor of the activities of the 1946 board.

Major Engagement Now Under Way In Lariss Area

Athens, Nov. 28—(AP)—Press dispatches from Northern Greece reported today a "major engagement" under way in the Lariss area between Greek regular troops and a strong mountain band, which was said to be suffering heavy casualties.

The same sources reported that Greece forces had surrounded a Leftist band of approximately 250 men in the Souphli district near the Turkish border and asserted that about 20 other guerillas had been captured in "mopping up" operations in that area.

Minor engagements were reported in several other areas in Northern Greece.

Official sources said 11 villages had been destroyed or badly damaged by guerilla bands since Nov. 1 and that more than 100 villagers had been slain.

Transport Licences For All Seeking Them Advocated

Brantford, Nov. 28 — (CP) — Stanley Dye, M.P.P. for Brantford, said in an interview today licences to operate provincial commercial vehicles should be available to all wishing to enter the transport business.

"I don't agree with the present system of issuing P.C.V. licences through application and hearing before the Municipal Board," he said.

"In my opinion, it is causing monopolies in the motor transport business and blotting out free enterprise."

Many war veterans wished to enter transport business but had been unable to obtain licences.

"An applicant for such a licence has to appear before the (Municipal) Board and the application is usually opposed by a lawyer representing the big transport companies. Naturally they want to keep the field of business restricted."

Mr. Dye said he saw no reason why the government should control this branch of business.

A SERIOUS PROBLEM

Kirkland Lake, Nov. 28—(CP)—The death rate in the Kirkland Lake-Larder Lake area from tuberculosis is 40 per 1,000 as compared with the average Ontario figure of 28 per 1,000, and tuberculosis is a serious public health problem in this district, Dr. G. B. Lame of Timmins told a Kirkland Lake service club (Lions) last night.

Chance Remark Results in Arrest Of Four Youths

A series of break-ins which have baffled local police during the past week appeared solved today following the arrest on Wednesday by Inspector Hayes of four local youths, one a juvenile of fifteen years.

Taken into custody by Inspector Hayes were Ralph Wright, age 16, Starling Street, who faces three charges of breaking and entering and one of theft; William Stapley, age 17, Cannifton Road, two charges of breaking and entering and one of theft; Robert Nicol, age 17, Bleecker Avenue, charged with breaking and entering, and the juvenile who faces three charges of breaking and entering and one of theft.

All four of the youths are charged with breaking and entering the Belleville Collegiate ammunition room some time over the weekend and of stealing seven military rifles, rugby sweaters and other sporting equipment. Several of the rifles were recovered from where they had been cached beneath the Canadian National Railways freight sheds, while the remainder of the rifles were found in other parts of the city.

Wright and the one juvenile involved are charged also with breaking and entering the York Trading Co. warehouse and stealing tobacco and merchandise, and of stealing a radio out of an auto which had been parked near the Belleville Collegiate. Most of the merchandise was recovered in the same cache where the rifles were found.

Wright, Stapley and the juvenile also stand charged with breaking and entering the Belleville Creameries building on Station Street and of stealing three 50-pound cases of butter. None of the butter has been recovered.

A chance remark by one of the youths involved which was overheard by Inspector Hayes as he was visiting a local newstand, led ultimately to the arrest of all four of the youths. At the time of the remark the officer had not been noticed by the youth and subsequent questioning led to the arrests.

Pays Tribute to British Efforts in India

St. Catharines, Nov. 28—(CP)—Tribute to the British government for earnest efforts to settle the India problem was paid last night by Canon Heber Wilkinson, missionary to India. Addressing an Anglican men's rally, he said he had nothing but the highest praise for the British government's "conscientious and honest efforts" towards bringing about a peaceful India, coupled with self-government. The Christian church was using its influence in every way to bring the divided forces of India together.

Proof of Saving

Canadians have been giving the proof of Canadian stability and financial strength in which they have been buying Savings Bonds. Purchase of this fine security, backed by the strength of this young nation which has earned a high place in the world for its enterprise and reliability, has reached the towering figure of $467,223,350 up to the middle of November in 1,149,188 applications for the loan. All this has been achieved quietly by the solid strength of the Canadian people who recognize a good security and have come to realize the importance of saving to the economic structure of the Dominion.

This large figure of nearly half a billion dollars has been built up by purchases of two thousand dollars and under, the limit of purchase to an individual being $2,000 and the great majority being much less. All the facts indicate the real interest the people have in buying their country's securities. The lesson was learned during the war when it was made clear how much each person's purchase of Victory Bonds aided in the prosecution of the conflict. That training will not be forgotten.

Memory Honored By Unveiling

This week a bronze life-size bust of the late Sir Charles Saunders, who was the originator of the world famous Marquis wheat and Dominion Cerealist for two decades was unveiled in the Administration Building at the Experimental Farm, Ottawa. The unveiling ceremony was conducted by Dr. Newman, successor to Sir Charles. Dr. Newman called his predecessor one of Canada's "very great benefactors, the magnitude of whose contribution to agricultural science of this country" cannot be fully evaluated. Marquis wheat, he noted, is "one of the great products of the plant breeder's world."

It is interesting to note that Dr. William Saunders, father of Sir Charles Saunders, was the first director of the Experimental Farm and that Sir Charles followed in his footsteps.

Dr. Newman told of the wealth of material the late Sir Charles Saunders left on cereals and Dr. E. S. Archibald, director of the Dominion Experimental Farms, spoke of the former cerealist as "one who had made a great contribution to the wealth and prosperity of Canada through his achievements in scientific agriculture."

This bust is the gift of the Dominion Government to the Administration Building which stands on the site of the residence of Dr. William Saunders.

Such a record of accomplishment in scientific agriculture as that left by Sir Charles Saunders is worthy of being memorialized in bronze for the sake of the generations of the future who will always owe a debt to his labor and accomplishments in the interest of agriculture.

Snow That Thrilled

There have been two snowfalls, one on October 1st, and the second on November 26th, just eight weeks later. The first snow disappeared almost as rapidly as it fell. The second fall was of greater proportions, eight inches, but mildness of weather and some rain reduced the volume and made the snow very heavy. The first snowfall was abnormally early, the second in what is winter, though the mercury remained above freezing all next day, that in itself being unusual at this late season of autumn which has only three weeks to go until the winter equinox.

Tuesday's snow was the first in which the very many young children could disport themselves and these younger, too small for school, as well as older, enjoyed playing in the snow. It was Canadian winter for them in earnest, it made possible snow battles, sliding on the hillsides and sidewalks, and gave sleds a chance to be used. The gaily-colored clothing of the youngsters showed off to every advantage against the snow, the blanket of white stretching as far as the eye could see and beyond and as far as the smallest could know, to the ends of the earth.

To the agriculturist the snowfall brought the blessing of more moisture and protection while it should last. To the city dweller it meant clearing of walks and paths to the porch and doorway. To the merchants it brought realization of the presence of winter and the imminent appearance of the holiday season but a very short time away. To all it was a fair indication and realization that homes are getting ready for the Christmas season when winter's cheer is felt at its height.

Snow is the suitable setting for this time when Christmas trade is growing by leaps and bounds as the days pass. Shops have an irresistible appeal with their display of gifts to suit every taste.

To Light The Commons

Bronze chandeliers whose candles gave light for Pitt and Burke will probably carry some of the newer lighting of the new House of Commons, though they have not been seen in the Chamber since the fire of 1834.

They have been bought with that intention by the Ministry of Works from the Tennyson-d'Eyncourt family, in whose Lincolnshire seat of Bayons Manor, Tealby, five of them have been hanging since that date. There were originally eight, but one of the squires of Tealby put three of them in a village school which was burnt down and they were lost.

At the time of the 1834 fire the head of the family, an uncle of Lord Tennyson, was member for one of the London boroughs, and he acquired the chandeliers to light a new banqueting hall. The last occupier of the manor, Mrs. E. C. Tennyson-d'Eyncourt, has gone, after the fashion of the times, to live in a neighboring cottage. She is glad to see the return of the chandeliers to Westminster, and with them the glass candle shades, which have all been carefully preserved.—Manchester Guardian.

Heels of Aluminum

—Gus Crooke, an Australian radio-man, thinks he has solved the problem of "reheeling" old shoes, says Australian News.

One morning, he chanced upon a line of women outside a Sydney shoe repair shop, who were obviously waiting to have new heels put on their shoes. To Gus, this was an unnecessary waste of time. He hit upon the idea for a shoe nad a high aluminum heel. At the moment, it looks as if it will earn him a fortune.

The touch of originality is in the heel. At the bottom is a detachable layer of rubber or leather. The purchaser of every pair of shoes is given a number of spare heels. When one heel wears out, the wearer simply inserts another. The total weight of a pair of shoes is only 2½ ounces.

Apart from their convenience, the inventor claims that they are strong enough to withstand a pressure of some tons. They promise to be cool in Summer, warm in Winter.

World patents have been applied for. and already orders have been received from North and South America, France, India, Palestine, South Africa, Singapore, Burma.

Every human being has a work to carry on within, duties to perform abroad, influences to exert which are peculiarly his and which no conscience but his own can teach.—Channing.

THANKSGIVING

Home for Thanksgiving! The table stretched-out;
The old and the young once more gathered about.
The little hands folded, and bowed every head,
As grace before dinner by someone is said.
All eyes on the carver, who stands at the mark

The drumsticks and wishbone! All carvers must know
Those parts of the turkey to children must go.
The dressing! Unless he's reminded, I'll bet
That's something the carver will surely forget.
The voice of the father then sounding the call:
"Get busy and eat! Second helpings for all!"

Time was that dinner was ours to provide.
At the doorway flung open we stood, side by side,
The mother and I. But her spirit has flown.
And now comes Thanksgiving—and I am alone!
But still, as she wished us to keep it I'll try,

A prayer for Thanksgiving! Dear Lord, we are glad
And grateful this day for the blessings we've had;
For faith that sustains us at times we must weep;
For the memories golden we tenderly keep.
Thanksgiving! For her we are keeping it still!
Lord, grant us the courage to bow to Thy will.

Talk With Indian Moslems in Glasgow

By LEWIS MILLIGAN

The problem of setting up an independent government in India is apparently an insoluble one. No sooner is it announced that the leaders of the contending parties have decided to come together and form a united administration than their followers start killing one another. In the past Britain has been accused of encouraging, if not of actually creating these political factions, in order to retain control of the country and its people. That idea has now been exploded by the Indians themselves, and recent events have proven that British rule in India has been a uniting influence—at least, it has prevented the factions from flying at each others throats, by establishing and enforcing a system of British law and a stable government.

Meets Indian Natives

I have never been to India, and cannot speak from first hand knowledge of the situation in that country. But while visiting Glasgow in June last I learned something about the Indian problem at second-hand from three natives of India. I sat at the same dining table with them for two days. The one sitting opposite to me was a dapper little fellow, with a refined face and an engaging smile.

During the meal he was occupied in studying a sheaf of papers, from which he read excerpts to his companions. At first I thought it was a report in one of the numerous Indian languages, for he read so rapidly and ran one word into another without the least sign of punctuation. Occasionally I caught an English word, and later learned that he was reading a draft of the newly proposed constitution for an united government for India. Judging by his little side comments, I assumed that he did not agree with the proposals.

Against Simple Government

This was confirmed when they told me they were Moslems, and declared that the Moslems would never agree to a single government for India, because it would mean the domination of the 300 million Hindus over the 100 million Moslems in the country. They wanted India divided into Hindu and Moslem states. They pointed out that Europe was divided into different nations, so why could not India be the same? The dapper chap admitted that the Moslems were a "backward people," and said this was because they had refused to co-operate with the British as the Hindus had done. He regarded the British as "foreigners" who had no right in the country. He insisted that the British should "get out of India." "Right away?" I asked. "No, not right away," he replied, for if they were to quit the country at once the Moslems would come under the heel of the Hindus. He had no suggestion as to how or when the British should get out.

Rulers For 800 Years

He told me that the Moslems invaided India from Persia and that they had ruled the country for 800 years. "So you are foreigners, too; and you as a minority ruled over the majority," I said. He replied that many of the Hindus had become Moslems, that his own ancestors were originally Hindus. This was evident, for his two companions were of a different type; they were much darker and had a Moorish cast of features, almost Negroid.

I asked what he was doing in Glasgow. He said he was studying "naval architecture" at the John Brown shipbuilding works. He hoped to get a position in the government naval department. "What government?" I enquired — "the British Government?" "No," he replied rather hesitatingly, "whatever government is finally formed for India." He said there was no doubt that India would be friendly to Britain after the withdrawal, if only to save the country from being dominated by the Russians. He was quite sure that there would be a third world war.

Of the other two Moslems, one was studying medicine and the other law at the Glasgow University. What struck me about these Moslem Indians was their intense bigotry against the Hindus. They were educated men, but their education seemed to be on the surface, and the native kept on breaking through the veneer — particularly was this the case with the two Moorish fellows. The dapper chap was more suave, but very voluble, and he talked and argued like a precocious child. Whatever may be said about the British rule in India, one thing is certain, that it has discovered it themselves. But when you ask them how they are going to establish a democratic government in India with its teeming millions of illiterates, its hundreds of languages and irreconcilable religions, they have no reasonable answer.... The problem of India is not a political one; it is a religious and racial problem.

Housebreakers Jump Twenty Feet from Window

Toronto, Nov. 28 — (CP) — Two housebreakers escaping from an upstairs room of a house on Edith Drive in North Toronto last night jumped 20 feet from a window to the street, apparently without being injured.

Police later arrested Hugh McPhee, 25, no fixed address, on 3 charges of housebreaking and one of car theft. The other man fled.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

TONSILLECTOMY

I took my two sons, aged eight and thirteen, to a nose and throat specialist to see if tonsillectomy would protect them from having colds. The specialists advised me that he could find no indication for tonsillectomy in either child. Would you mind explaining why you feel so strongly on the subject of tonsillectomy? Have you had an unfortunate personal experience? My experience proves that at least one nose and throat specialist removes tonsils only when he feels there is definite need for the operation. (W.J.)

Experience has proved that "young men who have had operations on the nose and the throat, such as tonsillectomy, are more subject to respiratory infections than young men who have not had such operations" (Smiley). Forsyth found more respiratory infections ("colds" to you, "Cri" to me) in the course of a year in tonsillectomized students than in non-tonsillectomized students of the same age. These are typical of numerous reports in modern medical literature, all of the same import.

Nobody can possibly guess your identity, W. J., from what I say here, so I'll say what I have to say without apology. In the first place it was wrong in my opinion, to take the children to a specialist if, as your letter implies, their physician did not so advise. In the next place, you assumed that you know as much as an "ordinary" doctor knows about such things and, worse, you were willing to subject your children to the risk of life that is involved in every such major operation as removal of the tonsils, and on a wretched gamble at that. The medical reports cited about show beyond all question that tonsillecttomy perpetrated upon the child on the off chance that it may make the child less susceptible to respiratory infections is a gamble indeed.

No, my dear Mr. W. J., I have had no unfortunate personal or professional experience, but how many doctors have had tragic experience with the atrocity I had rather try to forget.

If my own throat, health or life, or my child's, were concerned I'd submit to tonsillectomy ONLY if there were reason to believe the condition malignant (cancerous). If the tonsils were merely infected, I'd choose electro-coagulation (diathermy) if the patient were old enough to co-operate with the physician, tonsillotomy (clipping off part or most of the tonsil) if the patient were too young to co-operate. For merely enlarged (hypertrophied) tonsils and/or adenoids I'd choose X-ray treatment—especially if there were any evident impairment of hearing or any middle ear inflamation.

Tonsilltomy (usually done with the tonsillotome, a snicker-snee that slices off the portion of tonsil that obstructs breathing) is an instantaneous operation, requires no general anesthetsia, may be done without even local anethesia and with less pain that a patient suffers with extraction of a tooth, and involves no greater ris kthan does extraction of a tooth.

inally, I contend—and I have plenty of evidence from current medical literature to support my contention—that the tonsillectomy atrocity (attempting to remove every bit of tonsil tissue) is based on ignorance of pathology. There is no foundation for the notion that tonsil tissues in the throat is in itself injurious or likely to become injurious to health if not removed. It is on that notion, my dear children, that the tonsillectomy atrocity is founded.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Do scorpions commit suicide?

The common notion that scorpions commit suicide by stinging themselves to death when tortured, especially when touched by fire or a drop of whisky, is not borne out by scientific investigation.

Apparently the poison of the scorpion has no effect on the individual itself or on other members of the same species. The belief that scorpions sting themselves to death undoubtedly arose from their habit of curving the tail over the back and touching the body with the extremity. Often when they appear to be stinging themselves they are merely engaged in convulsive efforts to remove the cause of irritation or pain. If they did sting themselves in their struggle the poison would have no ill effects on them.

Scorpions, which range in length from one to ten inches or more, belong to the Arachnida or spider family, but they look more like crayfish or small flat lobsters than spiders. They differ from spiders in being elongated and in having the last five segments of the body modified into a flexible tail provided with a stinger that is supplied with venom by a pair of glands.

When human beings are stung the poison produces swelling, nausea and a tendency to paralyze the nerve centres in the back and the brain that control breathing. The sting, though very painful, is seldom fatal to human beings except to those having weak constitutions. Experiments indicate that the venom is essentially the same in chemical composition as that of rattlesnakes and honey bees. It is the quantity rather than the quality of the venom that makes the difference. When the poison from honey bees is injected into an incision in the human body in large quantities it produces virtually the same effects as the sting of a rattler or a scorpion, depending on the amount of venom. As a rule the sting of the species of small scorpions found in the temporate zones is not more severe than that of a hornet, but the poison of a few small species is as virulent as that of the larger ones. Some persons after being stung several times seem to become immune to the poison. When a person is stung by a scorpion the venom should be pressed or sucked from the wound as quickly as possible and a solution of ammonia applied externally and taken internally. If the sting is on a limb the application of a ligature is desirable.

Scorpions are native to tropical and subtropical regions and are nocturnal in habits. These rapacious arachnids eat insects, slugs, spiders and even small lizards and mice, which they seize with their pincer-like front legs and kill with their tail-stingers.

The females give birth to living young and the young ride on the mother's back for several days until able to fend for themselves. In the United States "scorpion" is erroneously applied to several species of lizards and skinks.

Instinct Only Guide of Insects

Two thousand and more years ago, the writer of Proverbs in the Bible set down the words: "The locusts have no king".

This is true of all the insects—even in their most complicated social systems, Edwin Way Teale writes in The Kansas City Star. It is true of the anthill and the wasp nest as it is true of the beehive. Even the driver ants of the tropics, moving in columns through the jungles, seem guided by instinct alone. In earlier times, the queen of the bee colony was supposed to be the king. He was supposed to give the orders and direct the work of the whole colony. Now we know that this imagined dictator is really the egg-laying queen and that—although the colony's welfare requires the presence of the queen—she is as much a cog in the machine as any of the myriad workers.

Building of Comb.

Nowhere in the activity of the hive is instinctive skill more apparent than in the building of the comb. The wax is produced from glands in the bodies of the younger workers. It is chewed and molded in their jaws. Bee after bee will add its bit of wax to the developing comb-cell. Each will give the wax a bite or squeeze and then another bee will take its place. In spite of the seeming haphazardness of this procedure, when all is done, a honey-comb, with its rows of hexagonal cells—a marvel of lightness and strength, an ideal of engineering efficiency—has been produced.

There are no overseers, no directors, no blueprints, no trial and error in the making of the comb. The knowledge of how to proceed is not learned. It is instinctive. Among all the insects, "The locusts have no king"—except instinct.

Wasp and Grub.

A scientist once imprisoned a worker wasp with a grub of its own species. In the nest, the task of the worker had been to provide the grubs with food. But in the prison cell there was no food. The wasp was in evident perplexity. How could it feed the grub? Eventually, it solved its dilemma. But it did in a way that reveals that curious blindness which so often characterizes instinctive behavior. It bit off the hind end of the grub and offered it to the front end!

Years ago, the famous watcher of the insects, the French scientist, J. Henri Fabre, made an interesting experiment with the reactions of instinct to an abnormal situation. He placed a shell of thin paper around the nest of a mason wasp. Inside this nest, a young wasp emerged and began biting its way through the masonry wall of its chamber. This material was almost as hard as iron. Yet the jaws of the young wasp were powerful enough for it to bite its way to freedom.

Shell of Paper.

But this time it emerged not into the open air—but into the freedom that mason wasps had found awaiting them for untold centuries. It found itself within the hollow shell of paper that Fabre had placed around the nest. This was an unusual situation; something instinct had not prepared it for. The insect was bewildered. With its jaws, it could have snipped its way through the paper in a single bite. But it didn't know what to do. It wandered helplessly about until it finally died in its prison.

It is a strange story that scientists have discovered about the gold-tailed moth of Europe. In the spring, when the earliest green is on the twig-tips, the larvae of this moth appear from the hibernation near the ground. Light attracts them powerfully. Instinct leads them to get as near to the sun as they can. They crawl upward until they come to the very ends of the upper twigs. And it is precisely there that the tenderest buds provide them with the food they need. Their instinctive attraction for the light draws them irresistibly to the only available source of food.

Caterpillar Test.

So powerful is this attraction that a caterpillar put in a glass tube, with one end facing a light, invariably crawls at once toward the lighted end. In fact, when choice buds are placed in the darkened end, the larvae is unable to go to them although it is dying of hunger. It remains charmed by the light, and dies of starvation within a few inches of plenty.

But—and this is the curious thing—once the larva of the gold-tailed moth has devoured the twig tip buds, it is no longer attracted by the light. Instinct reverses itself. The caterpillar is repelled by the light. It gradually works its way down the twigs. If this were not so, it would be held among the bare upper twigs by the attraction of the light and would be unable to descend and feed on the lower buds as they unfold. Devouring the first few buds seems to release it from its spell. After that, it can crawl in any direction.

Steele, on behalf of the Royal Canadian Humane Society, has presented a parchment to Herbert Morgan, Chatham boy, in recognition of his attempted rescue of his chum Walter Davidson from the Thames River last summer, after Davidson had been shot while playing along the bank of the river.

A Redoubtable Traveler

Thrilled one summer morning my friend, the Ornithologist, pointed out the world's greatest traveler, a bird whose tireless pinions carry it across wide and stormy seas almost from pole to pole twice in every twelve months.

In all Nature there is nothing so challenge the imagination as the migration of the Arctic tern; nothing that explains the strange, living chemistry driving this migrant from one polar region to another with the seasons, individual birds travelling as far as twenty-two thousand miles—from north to south and back again—in a flying time of twenty weeks. . . .

For years the migration pathway was shrouded in mystery. Great flocks left the north-polar regions, and seventy days later were reported in the Antarctic oceans. Even now, our records from banded birds are so fragmentary that we can make no positive statements; yet we do have a fairly good idea of the probabilities.

Birds traveling the eastern flyway seem to pass between Greenland and Labrador, flying southeast across the trackless Atlantic to the west coast of Africa. Some individuals continue down the west coast of the dark continent to cross Antarctic seas. Others recross the Atlantic—this double crossing of the ocean in one migration seems quite remarkable—and, paralleling the east coast of South America, continue to the icebound Arctic wastes. Birds using the western flyway parallel the California coast, continue down the western coast of South America and thence to Antarctica.

One might think that the Arctic tern has a restless urge for daylight. or eight months he never sees the dark of night, and for four months of this time he never sees the setting sun. . . . He might be said to pursue the sun, this pre-eminent globe-trotter whose bright eyes each year view a larger part of our globe than those of any other living creature.

He is a slender-billed, small-bodied, wide-winged, swallow-tailed bird, resembling closely the common tern familiar to everyone who has seen the sea. With his beady brown eyes cocked downward he soars in the air currents above the water in search of food. His bill is carmine. His slender red legs are held back against his body to streamline his flight. In his summer plumage his under feathers vary from silver gray to pure white. He wears a black cap on his head, fringed with a thread of white near the bill. His back is silver-gray. . . .

Later, under changing conditions, season, and environment he can so alter his coat and so well disguise himself that even experienced observers have been confused and have reported him as a new species.—From "The Woodland Book", by Elmer Ransom. (New York: Howell, Soskin. 1945.)

VANHORNE—RAY

The parsonage of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, was the setting on the evening of Nov. 16, for a quiet but pretty marriage ceremony performed by Rev. A. M. Laverty, when Marjorie Jean Ray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Ray, of Harold, Ont., was united with Donald Keith Vanhorne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Vanhorne, Demorestville, Ont.

The bride was charming in a dress of blue wool, with black accessories, and wearing a corsage of red roses. Miss Irene Ray was her sister's bridesmaid, wearing a gown of pink silk jersey, with a corsage of pink and red roses.

The groomsman was Mr. Glenn Norton, of Demorestville.

The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was earrings; while the groomsman received a cigarette case.

BISHOPRIC—ERVINE

Ferns, white 'mums, and pink snapdragons, softly illuminated by the glow of candellight, formed the picturesque setting for a very pretty wedding solemnized at half past four o'clock, Saturday afternoon Bridge Street United Church, when Miss Gwendolyn Mary Ervine, daughter of Major and Mrs. Samuel Ervine, became the bride of Mr. Hugh Ernest Bishopric, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bishopric, of Toronto, with Rev. D. C. Amos officiating, and Mr. Alec Gordon, organist of the church, supplying the wedding music. The soloist was Mrs. Dorothy Bradley, who sang "Beloved It Is Morn" during the signing of the register.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, made a charming picture in a gown of ivory French faille taffeta, fashioned with a fitted bodice featuring a circular neckline, short puff sleeves with matching mittens, and a full skirt with a short train. Her long veil fell from a Mary, Queen of Scots, headdress and she carried a shower bouquet of Rapture roses and bouvardia. Her only ornament was a gold locket, a gift from the groom.

Miss Margaret Stinson, of Toronto, was the bride's only attendant. She wore a gown of wine velvet fashioned with a fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and a full skirt, with a matching halo headdress and mittens. Her bouquet was of Queen Elizabeth roses.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. John Bishopric, and the ushers were Mr. Norman Frame and Mr. David Stewart, of Toronto.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Hotel Quinte, where Mrs. Ervine received the guests in a floor-length French model gown of heavenly blue crepe, with hyacinthe-blue sequins, a black hat with matching plume and wearing a corsage of Briarcliffe roses. The groom's mother assisted wearing a gown of ash-white faille, small flowered hat and fuchsia accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses.

For travelling to New York City, the bride chose an imported suit of English boucle in a combination of turquoise blue and black, with which she wore a seal coat, and black accessories. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Bishopric will reside in Toronto.

Out-of-town guests were from Ottawa, Perth and Toronto.

Prior to her marriage Mrs. Bishopric was the guest of honor at showers and teas when Mrs. W. Lockyer, Mrs. W. McCutcheon, Mrs. C. Earle and Mrs. B. Stenson ware hostesses, also a presentation and tea with joint hostesses Miss Jean Fairbairn, Mrs. C. McBrien and Mrs. F. Lusk at the former's home.

THE coats for rain wear get better and better, till they at last meet their ideal goal, which is to serve in dirty weather, although not limited to it. The black twill coat shown here is typical of the best, with its easy cut, its bright aquamarine blue lining and pipings, its generally feminine appearance.

Suc ha coat goes well with traveling clothes, trots about town or the campus attractively, and stays in style for wet or sunny days a long, long time.

Ladies' Guild Of St. Andrew's Holds Bazaar

Scores of ladies from all sections of the city visited the bazaar and attended the tea held Wednesday afternoon in the Sunday School Assembly Room of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, under the auspices of "The Ladies' Guild", of which Mrs. W. Mantle is president.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. J. G. Hornsby and Mrs. Mantle.

Bazaar booths and tables were arranged around the walls of the hall, leaving a large central space available for the tea table, surrounded by more than a score of smaller tables where the guests were invited to sit while enjoying the delectable sandwiches, dainties and "the cup that cheers". All the booths were very popular and well supplied with merchandise.

Great Variety of Work

Convening the fancy work was Mrs. H. Elvidge, where a great variety of beautifully patterned crochet work in white, ecru and colors was very much admired. Many useful articles, such as knitted gloves, embroidered towels, and utility bags were also found on this table, all displayed against a pure white cloth, festooned in red and green.

The "children's wear" booth, decorated in pink and white, made a dainty background for the lovely small garments and knitted articles made to fit children through all stages of growth, from infants to the four-year-olds; as well as a number of cuddley toys. This collection was in charge of Mrs. J. Goodfellow.

The table holding a large number of potted plants was convened by Mrs. A. Bell. Numerout species of cacti were augmented with pots of different flowering varieties, which, with several containers of purple heather and other "winter" bouquets, added color to this corner, against the decorations in green and white.

Home Baking Booth

On the stage, the ever popular "home baking" booth was the mecca for all visitors. Here the table was made effective with a central basket of burgundy shaded 'mums surrounded by products of the house-wife's art, which included pies, cakes, tarts, cookies, bread, rolls and plum puddings, with a few jars of pickles, jams and jellies added for good measure. The conveners, Mrs. A. Hill and Mrs. F. McKeown, with their assistants, were kept busy as long as the food lasted.

The tea table was most inviting with its beautiful lace cloth, its effective centrepiece of large bronze and yellow 'mums in a silver bowl and silver candelabra with tall green tapers standing guard on either side.

Presiding over the silver services were Mrs. J. B. Boyce with Miss Doherty for the first hour; Mrs. Graham with Mrs. Fleming for the second hour; and Miss Harold with Miss McCrea for the final hour from five to six o'clock. Assisting by serving the guests were, Mesdames Kelley, Elliott, Ryan, Cormier, McIlheny, Irwin, Ford, Arnold, Smith, Chadwick, Waldorf and the Misses McLean, Blair, Barbara Reid and Hilda Murray while Mesdames Kinnear, Cooley, Argue and Miss McLean were kept busy replenishing the plates and teapots.

Treasurers for the afternoon were Mrs. J. Hill and Mrs. P. Thompson.

In spite of wind and weather this was the most largely attended bazaar of the pre-Christmas season, thus far, the estimated number of guests exceeding three hundred, and the monetary results correspondingly gratifying to the ladies who worked so industriously to secure its success.

BANCROFT

Lions Club Holds Ladies Night At White Pine Lodge

Bancroft (Special.)—The Bancroft Lions Club held their annual Ladies' Night at White Pine Lodge on Paudash Lake. Although the highway was in a very slippery condition everyone arrived at their destination safely.

The early part of the evening was spent in singing of old songs, led by Mr. E. Jones of the Peterborough Radio Statio. Mr. Jones and two other personnel of Station CHEX, were present for the evening and were more or less responsible for the evening's entertainment. After a few of the old time songs were enjoyed, the master of ceremonies invited everyone up on the floor for an old-fashioned "Paul Jones" and by the time he finished putting young and old through their paces no one was ready for the fox-trot which followed. Dancing continued until after eleven o'clock when again Mr. Jones, with his Peterborough assistants, carried on a "Truth or Consequence" game. This proved to be a very hilarious hour of fun even the contestants enjoying the sport. Mr. Thompsett, proprietor of White Pine Lodge, then served delicious refreshments. Following this dancing commenced again and lasted into the early hours of the morning.

Export of Yule Trees Amounts To Big Business

Some 18 million Christmas trees valued at about $1,300,000 are expected to be exported this year from Canada. Approximately 99 per cent of these will go to the United States and the remainder to Great Britain, Bermuda and Jamaica.

While there is no way of knowing how many Canadians have a hand in the Christmas tree trade, the business is most active in Quebec, Ontario, British Columbia and New Brunswick, states an article in the current issue of C-I-L Oval.

Because of its fragrance and ability to retain its needles, balsam is the all-round favorite Christmas evergreen. But there are local preferences for other types in both Canada and the U.S.

In Toronto the white and black spruce are preferred, the article states. Scotch pine is first choice in Western Ontario. In the prairie provinces the preference is for spruce and lodgepole pine. British Columbia families are fondest of a junior specimen of Douglas fir.

From Farm Woodlots

Most Christmas trees come from farm woodlots, but many farmers are now raising them in regular plantation manner. Trees grown thus are ready for harvest in three to five years. One Western Ontario farmer makes Christmas trees his only crop on which he realizes an annual income of $4,000.

Forest conservation engineers are not seriously perturbed about the depletion of Canada's forest wealth through the tremendous business in Christmas trees. An area of less than two hundred square miles would be sufficient to produce, in perpetuity, the number of Christmas trees now being harvested. This is really insignificant compared with the area of farm woodlots alone, which amounts to almost 50,000 square miles. And behind the woodlots lie the vast Crown timberlands with their untapped supply of Christmas trees. All the conservationists ask is that common sense care be used in harvesting the crop.

HOSPITAL IN DARKNESS

St. Thomas, Nov. 28 — (CP) — Nurses groped about the wards of hospitals for a time here last night with flashlights as a high tension wire broke and most of Elgin county was left without electric power. The power went off in communities over a 40-mile stretch from Rodney in the west to Aylmer, east of here. In some places power was restored in a matter of minutes but at St. Thomas and some other points power was off for more than half-an-hour. The break occurred in bad weather.

Chicago Doesn't Want Canadian Money

One man against a few million, I fought the battle of inflation in Chicago recently and although battered and bruised in both pocketbook and soul, I came out with colors flying and a deathless resolve that, once back on Canada's dear shores, never again would I venture into the land of discounts and drug store cocktails.

Chicago was but a hectic interlude in an otherwise tranquil trip through the United States. I was escort to the corpse of an Alberta resident who had expressed a last wish to spend eternity in his native Ohio soil.

Being guardian to a corpse isn't exactly trying. He was a very quiet companion. However, I lost him in St. Paul and rejoined him in Chicago. It seems that the Burlington Zephyr which I boarded in St. Paul won't carry caskets, so while I rode to Chicago my quiet pal rested in St. Paul's baggage room and caught a later train.

The Canadian dollar is supposed to be on a par with the American dollar, but try to tell that to a Chicago merchant!

Lamb Among Wolves.

I knew the moment I stepped into Chicago's Union Station that I was really a lamb among the wolves. The wolves all held their paws out, too, but when they got a flash of that good old Canadian green, they gave me fishy stares and turned sulkily away.

My first rebuff came when I tried to check my baggage. The man wouldn't take my money.

"What's the matter?" I asked. "Hasn't civilization reached this town yet?"

A critical observer might contest that fact but I let it pass. Lugging my heavy grip, I tried to buy cigarets at the lunch counter. No go.

This was Saturday afternoon in Chicago. The banks were closed, the exchange offices were dark. I had no choice but to try to get some sympathetic soul to change my money at a decent rate of exchange.

I staggered into one hotel but the gent at the counter wouldn't have anything to do with Canadian money. At the next, a pert young thing disdainfully primped her hair while casting a caustic eye over a $20 Canadian bill. She allowed she would let me have $16 American for it.

Too Tough.

That 20 per cent discount was a little too tough to swallow so I staggered on. Finally, after several discouraging efforts to exchange my money, I trudged into a drug store lunch counter and there I met a real gem.

No, she couldn't change my money for me, but when I explained that I had already been in Chicago two hours and so far had nte been able to buy myself cigarets or supper, she told me to go ahead and order. I got my cigarets and supper but she still wouldn't take my money.

On the House.

"This one's on the house," was her answer. She wouldn't even give me her name so that I could repay her. Some day I'm going back to Chicago and find that little gal and really give her something to show for her help to me.

At a wineshop, I managed to exchange my smallest bill, $2, for $1.80, and later in the evening a Canadian ticket-seller at the wicket office of the station gave me $18.80 for a $20 bill, which is something more like the real rate of exchange.

Panhandlers Disdainful.

I discovered during the evening in Chicago that even the bums wouldn't take my Canadian dimes. One professional panhandler buttonholed me outside the station but when I told him all I had was Canadian dimes, he muttered something about "won't take 'em," and slouched off.

This district is known by Chicagoans in their quaint language as "de loop", from the way I got bounced around while trying to change my bills it was more like "loop de loop".

Late in the evening, my corpse and I departed for southern Ohio to complete the rest of the journey in tranquil silence.—By H. W. P. in Windsor Star.

Charge of Thermite Breaks Ice Jams

By W. P. KEASBEY
In Christian Science Monitor

Ice jams in rivers, notably the St. Lawrence and other rivers along the Atlantic Coast of North America, have at times presented serious problems.

To break up an ice jam, the aim is not to melt down a major portion of the mass of ice (a Herculean task in, say, a 25-mile river jam) but rather to set up strains within the mass of ice that will cause it to break up and let streams of water through to wash the accumulated ice away.

Experiments indicate that charges of thermite can be used effectively in breaking up ice jams. Thermite consists of aluminum in granular form mixed with an oxide of a chemically weaker metal, commonly iron. Normally this combination will not burn and is not explosive, but when touched off by the heat of a small charge of flashlight powder, the aluminum combines with the oxygen of the oxide with such violence as to produce temperatures in the neighborhood of 5,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

When the thermite charge placed in a shallow hole chopped in the ice at a strategic point, is touched off, the tremendous heat generated changes the ice into its chemical components, oxygen and hydrogen, the latter burning as a gas, causing flames to leap upwards of 100 feet into the air.

A jam on the St. Lawrence, estimated to involve a million tons of ice, was broken up with only two 90-pound charges.

After the thermite has been touched off the break-up of the jam usually extends over a period of hours, occasionally amounting to a day or more. The million-ton jam on the St. Lawrence yielded in nine hours.

Slightly Injured Bluebill Ducks Stranded in River

Niagara Falls, Nov. 28—(CP)—Large groups of slightly injured wild bluebill ducks are stranded below the Horseshoe Falls in the Niagara River, and veteran game men say they face inevitable death with approaching cold weather.

The birds are all that remain of an estimated 1,000 ducks which plunged over the cataracts during the dense fog last week. They appear strong enough to swim, holding their own against the swirling currents of the river but are unable to fly. Any effort to rescue them would be suicide.

Inflationary Prices May Result From Mines' Shutdown

Washington, Nov. 28 —(P)— United States government officials anticipate a slump in government income and strong pressure for inflationary prices if the coal mines are shut down for long.

John D. Small, head of civilian production administration, in a report on October production, said, "only the prompt resumption of coal mining will permit a continuation of the high level of production so important to ward off inflationary price rises."

President Joseph Myerhoff of the National Association of Home Builders said in a statement that the coal shutdown "imperils" completion of 400,000 homes for veterans on which construction has started.

Mr. Small's report said the walkout of A.F.L. United Mine workers brought to an "abrupt termination" nearly a half-year of high level production following the spring mine closure.

This production, he added, sent industrial output to a level 81 per cent above the average of the late 1930's, "but the coal strike is now threatening to shove production back down the ladder."

He said a "prolonged shutdown in the mines will hit industry faster and harder than it did last spring, adding:

"Not only are coal stocks lower than last spring but requirements are higher because of higher industrial activity and the cold weather, which is hindering transportation."

While Mr. Small noted increased output of steel ingots and steel products, and greater shipment of pig iron in merchant grades during October, he said steel mills already are banking furnaces as a result of the coal strike.

Ontario Boards Of Trade Suggest New Tax Proposals

Toronto, Nov. 28—(CP)—Labor jurisdiction "should be returned to Ontario" except in cases where the industry concerned was previously under jurisdiction of the Federal government prior to the war emergency," the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce have decided.

The association, which concluded its 35th annual meeting yesterday by electing its slate of officers including President C. A. Pollock of Kitchener, also urged the Dominion government to "re-examine the whole question of Dominion-Provincial fiscal relations" with a view to presenting modified tax proposals.

The resolution on taxes asked that the proposals be presented "to the end that a plan may be found which will prove acceptable to all of the provinces of Canada, thus permitting an equitable readjustment of the nation's tax burden, the avoidance of duplicate taxation and the economic loss that will follow in the train of an unsound tax system."

Prosperity could not be achieved "unless the provinces are allowed their just share of the revenues from direct and progressive tax fields to such extent as will enable them to keep pace with the demands of expansion and development of their human and material resources."

Inspection of all tourist camps by provincial inspectors was asked in another resolution which would provide for grading and classifying such accommodation before the granting or renewal of licences. Such classification should be prominently displayed, said the motion.

MacArthur Ties Up Wealth of Ten Richest Japanese Families

Tokyo, Nov. 28 — (AP) — Gen. MacArthur yesterday tied up the wealth of Japan's 10 richest families—the great family fortunes that provided the sinews of war—and ordered their assets turned into non-negotiable 10-year government bonds. Maj. Robert Cooper, of Allied Supreme Headquarters' Anti-Trust and Cartel Division, said the order would enable headquarters for the first time to estimate how wealthy the families were and would strip them of financial influence.

PICTON

1,840,000 Cases Canned Goods Packed in County

Picton, Nov. 28.—An almost record pack of canned goods was produced in Prince Edward during the past year. The record was in 1944 and the pack this season was just 195,000 cases below that.

The 1946 record for county factories is 1,840,000 cases of canned goods, which is equal to 44,160,000 cans.

It is an increase of 384,000 cases over 1945.

Production this year, with that of last year in brackets, was:

Tomatoes and Juice	1,250,000	(1,002,000)
Peas	435,000	(400,000)
Corn	120,000	(75,000)
Pumpkin	35,000	(15,000)

There were 4,300 acres of peas, 6,800 acres of tomatoes, 3,900 acres of corn and 500 acres of pumpkins for a total of 15,500 acres.

This acreage is almost equivalent to one acre per capita of the county's population of 16,750.

Dry weather seriously affected the tomato crop and pumpkins were not as large as usual.

Santa Claus Parade

Final plans for a Santa Claus parade in Picton next Saturday afternoon were made at a meeting of the committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce. Chairman Phil Dodds presided and reported that the town had strings of colored lights across the streets ready to turn on, and that they would erect large trees on the Armouries and Recreation Centre lawns. He said that merchants would have an avenue of lighted trees along Main street.

Parade Marshal Creighton Lockyer reported seven large floats, a 35-piece Kingston band, 35 persons in costume, Picton band, horseback riders, decorated bicycles and new cars would be included in the parade. Santa is to arrive at the airport by plane, then proceed to the parade starting point and then ascend a throne on a wagon drawn by four horses which were winners at the Royal Winter Fair, and in charge of George Atkinson.

While the P.W.O.R. bugle band gives a precision drill and those in costume entertain, the children will meet Santa in the Armouries. Each will receive a treat of oranges and also a balloon.

Members of the Anti-Aircraft School are to assist in handling the crowds expected. Those in charge of arrangements are P. Dodds, E. J. Williams, Don Thomas, Jesse Mason, Herbert Hyatt, H. Amos, Gordon Picard, Alfred King, Vernon Lockwood, C. Lockyer, Ralph Heffer, Monte Shannon.

Duty to Prevent Disorders

"If the movement of these forces is faced with any obstacles it will influence my good will and responsibility as well as the elections," Qavam said. He reminded Javid it was his duty to prevent any disorders or harmful propaganda in Azerbaijan and added:

"The Tabriz radio broadcast and statements made by irresponsible persons will surely delay the elections and raise other difficulties."

Qavan sent a similar message to Kurdish leader Ghazi Mohammed asking him how he intended to co-operate with security forces being dispatched to Kurdish districts in connection with the elections.

Quavan announced last week that central government troops would be sent to Azerbaijan, as everywhere else in Iran, to maintain order during the national elections beginning Dec. 7.

Subsequently, government troops moved into Zenjan which, Premier Qavam declared, Azerbaijan forces failed to evacuate despite promises to do so. Zenjan is 180 miles northwest of Tehran and 150 miles southeast of Tabriz, Azerbaijan capital.

The Mirror added that Sir Stafford had supplied the answer to the problem when he said: — "We must maintain and if possible increase our exports."

The Daily Graphic, Conservative, said that Sir Stafford while producing "the usual array of sententious platitudes" had served a useful function in warning the country that the government is "rapidly spending all the dollars received from the recent loans."

The Liberal News Chronicle said that the Board of Trade and other government departments now are carrying out a survey to discover whether Britain could sell more to the dollar area and buy more from countries with "soft" currencies.

The Daily Mail also said cuts in imports of Hollywood films and Virginia tobacco were likely to be included in the "drastic action" forecast.

"It is believed that in the search for dollar economy it may be considered to what extent the British film industry can be developed," the Mail story said.

ON ARCTIC BASES

In an address before the American Standards' Association in New York, Lt.-Gen. Ira C. Eaker, deputy commander of the army air forces, urged that bases be built to protect the Arctic frontier. The general said that this was the only quarter from which a possible future war could be waged from either Europe or Asia.

SOMETHING NEW in mutation furs has just made its debut. It is Golden Cross fox, a cross between platinum and red fox that retains the whites and grays of platinum fox but has an overcast in tawny gold.

EDGING FURTHER towards the back of the head, with trimming massed in back to emphasize the backward swing, seems to be the millinery trend for late winter and early Spring. Navy blue felt makes a half-bonnet cap posed well back on the head, with clusters of pink roses and picot-edged navy and pink ribbon placed in back, the ribbon falling in soft loops.

EVER SO SMART is an afternoon suit of black and white lightweight worsted, its fine birdseye pattern sprinkled all over with tiny jet beads. Bolero jacket with high collar and revers and easy sleeves with narrow cuffs.

WHO MINDS the rain when there are such cheery rain togs waiting to be worn. Canary yellow, bright pink and black plaid is used for a processed taffeta raincoat detailed with roomy hood, soft sleeves and big pockets.

A MAJOR FASHION with smart women come Spring will be the double-skin length fur stole, with black and platinum fox as attention-getters. The stole is draped over one shoulder, low on the other and across at the waist, judging from advance fashion sketches.

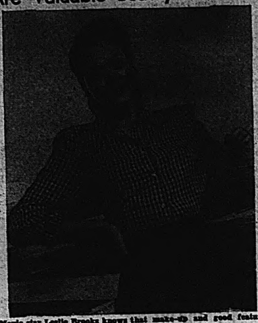
Adequate Rest and Relaxation Are Valuable Beauty Aids



Movie star Leslie Brooks knows that make-up and good features aren't the whole story.

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE health and beauty rule; divide twenty-four hours by three eight hours of work, eight hours of play, eight hours of sleep. Do we hear laughter from the hard working housewife? Well, anyway, she can get out of doors and have fun. She can pile into bed at a reasonable hour. No need of slaving all the time.

The great thing is to avoid over fatigue that leaves ugly marks upon the feminine map. It is often responsible for those horrid little hammocks that appear under the eyes. When you are tired physically, mentally or emotionally there are chemical changes going on within your body. You're full of fatigue bugs and they are poisonous. Eyes lose sparkle. Complexion lacks coloring. Life looks mournful. When you begin to feel weary, drop everything, if you can, and do a flop.

Lie down, close your eyes, lock the door of your mind against worrisome or unpleasant thoughts. Take long, slow breaths. Tell yourself to be a good girl and be quiet so your energy motors can pick up, get started again. If you can snatch forty winks, that's fine and dandy. You will go at the job with new interest, greater courage, more spirit.

Lovelies of the stage and screen such as Leslie Brooks know that make-up and good features aren't the whole story. They have learned how to live wisely and know what they should eat. They manage to get sufficient sleep and proper exercise.

After all, health is the foundation upon which the temple of beauty is built. Without it there cannot be animation or graceful, alert movements. It's senseless to depend too much upon beauty aids. They help. But they are not the whole story.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She's in The Hospital—Her Husband Betrayed Her in Many Ways

When Miss X met and fell in love with Mr. Y., she didn't know he was married and the father of four children. When she found it out, he told her he had been afraid he would lose her if she knew the truth.

Later, while in the army, Mr. Y. divorced his wife, who had left him for another man. Then he married Miss X., who, in the meantime, had broken down under the strain of what seemed a hopeless love affair and was in a hospital. There she has been for the last two or three years, with what illness she does not say, but one guesses tuberculosis.

During her illness her husband has been wonderful to her, she says. Yet after a while she began to sense something was wrong. When she wrote me a long and pathetic letter, she had found out two things that were very wrong indeed. One of them was that he had forged her name and drawn out, and spent, all her savings. The other was that, since their marriage, he had been intimate with her own sister on a number of occasions.

Concering the money he told her he took it "for a worthy cause," to keep her from worrying. He said if she had only trusted him, she would have found everything in order when she came out of the hospital and he would then have told her all about it. And he denied—"savagely," she says—that he ever was intimated with her sister, even thought it was the sister herself who confessed it.

Now this wife wants to know if I think her marriage has any "future." She still loves her husband; "madly," she declares. She's sure she'll always love him, no matter what he's done. And she insists that he loves her deeply. What she isn't so sure of is whether or not she'll ever be able to forget these things he did while she was lying helpless in the hospital. But, she asks, "should I wait until I make my home with him before I pass judgment?"

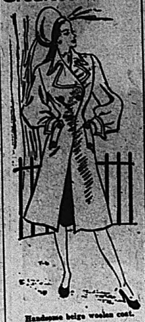
Since this unhappy woman is so certain—or is she just trying to make herself believe she is?—that she still loves this man, I don't believe she'll ever be satisfied until she has actually lived with him. Even though her heart may not yet be willing to "pass judgment" on him, it is quite evident that her mind has done so and has told her that this is not a man she can ever trust, or with whom she can ever be happy. Yet, because she evidently realizes that her prolonged stay in the hospital was hard on him—"Do you think I was wrong," she asks, "in telling him to go out with girls if he wanted to, and to take my sister to dinner or a show?"—she clings to the desperate hope that, once they are together in a home of their own, everything will be all right.

But I am afraid this hope is a slim one indeed. I'll go even further and say I believe it is doomed to be dashed to smithereens in a short time. For I do not believe this man will ever justify the faith his wife is trying to keep alive. On the contrary, I think he will crush it to a pulp.

From the very beginning, when he encouraged her to fall in love with him without telling her he was already married, he has piled one betrayal on top of another. The chances are that the "worthy cause" for which he stole her money had to do with getting him out of some jam with a girl. And there is little likelihood, to say the least, that any girl would tell her sister he had been intimate with her husband if it were not true, however "savagely" he may deny it.

If this wife wants to come out of the hospital and take an emotional beating that will probably put her right back into it again. there is nothing to stop her. However, I can see nothing but sheer foolhardiness in doing any such thing.

Grand Greatcoat



Handsome beige woolen coat.

Handsome beige woolen coat

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

THE fitted coat, cut of fine fabric, on good lines, a sort of softened greatcoat, is a major fashion this year. There's a new, crisp look about this handsome coat of beige woolen. It uses contrasting black in the guise of gleaming jet centred buttons, three in triangular effect to close the coat, and two at either end of the pocket bands. When really cold weather arrives, its revers may be buttoned up. The sleeves are full with cuffed wrists. There is a half-belt in back above the slit skirt.

Eye Hygiene Pays Dividends

Lovely screen star Hillary Brooke knows the value of eye hygiene.

By HELEN FOLLETT

AYE, AYE, the eyes have it. With a fine pair of peepers a girl is pretty well qualified to stand in the pulchritude line. They are the most interesting feature if they are expressive. What do you do with yours? Animation will turn the lights on but good health is important.

Eye hygiene means little trouble or bother, if the soul orbs are in a healthy condition. They should be bathed twice a day, first with warm water, then with cold. A good eye lotion applied with an eye cup is helpful for this. Nature has provided them with their own washing and oiling systems.

Sight is Precious

Of all the senses, that of sight is undoubtedly the most precious, and that is why the eyes should not be abused by reading or sewing in a dim light. When a woman finds that she cannot thread a needle quickly, she can be pretty sure that it is time to see about glasses. Vanity may lead her to postpone the day but if she does she will regret it. Impaired eyesight can cause headaches. It has a deplorable effect upon the nervous system, because the weakened optics are constantly endeavoring to adjust themselves.

Impaired eyesight causes squinting. Squinting means that one will soon have a flock of crowsfeet, or turkey tracks, call them what you will, they are just as dreadful. If they have already appeared, the tissues can be toned to a certain extent, by daily treatment.

At bed time, apply a heavy massage cream, sweeping the finger from the inner corner of the upper lid outward, coming back under the eye to the starting point. Every morning apply cold water.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Demountable Hair

False hair is terrible only when you need it. It isn't called false hair any more, nor should it ever have been, since once it grew upon some woman's head. The beauty uses the term "extra pieces"—sounds nicer.

You may have wondered when your short-haired friend suddenly appeared with heavy coils and braids atop her pate, or a chignon at the nape line. Even if she had put her mind upon the project she couldn't have grown tresses that fast. She has been beauty shopping. A large portion of her hair-do is demountable. How dull life would be without beauticians and cosmetic chemists! They supply all the good-looks needs of the human sorority.

It is pleasantly exciting to have a change of hair-do. Even the best-looking woman may get a bit tired of her face now and then. A softly-rolled bun, lifted high, will give a woman a new kind of dignity after years of flowing, shoulder-length tresses. It is easy to arrange. It dispenses with the permanent, if one desires to be free of that expense, though curled ends give the hair more body, make rolls appear fatter and larger. There is no danger then of sprouting ends that mar sleek surfaces.

If your hair is short, and you have a yen to line up with the longies, be sure to purchase what is called first-quality hair. Second grade is coarse, may lose coloring. You'll have to have a sharp eye out to see that the falsies match the home-grown thatch. Patronize a reliable beauty shop and you'll not be disappointed. It has been many years since detachable locks were sought by the cash customers, and pulchritude purveyors are pretty pleased about the revival of this commodity. Time was when it was the most profitable of all their offerings in the way of goods and treatments.

You may soon hear about six-strand bracelets—not designed to wear on the wrist, but as a supplementary motif to attach to the crown of your noble head. It is composed of six strands of hair, braided, with ends arranged in small curls, very flat.

The girl who has trouble keeping her short hair in curl, and who has sudden need of ringlets when the phone brings a call to a party, can buy a row of ringlets dangling from a band of artificial flowers of prim design. The flowers are attached to a comb or a long, thin, metal barette that is slipped into the growth to which one is naturally attached. A lovely makeshift, a blessing when one has no opportunity to cure the ends of the hair!

It is pleasantly exciting to have a change of hair-do

GOOD MANNERS

Proper to Send Anniversary Card?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper to send a wedding anniversary card to a woman whose husband is dead? (I have seen some cards with verses that do not make any reference to the married couple.) Her Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary is next month.

C. R.

It seems to me that it would be very poor taste to send a greeting card to this woman on this anniversary day..quite inconsiderate of what her feelings doubtless would be. However, if she is a very dear friend of yours, you might write her a note, a sentence or two, telling her that "I wanted you to know that I am thinking of you on this day so cherished in your heart and in you memories, and I am sending you my dearest love and every devoted wish."

Bride's Sister, Maid of Honor, To Give Shower?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Will you please settle an argument for us? "A" says that it is proper for a sister, when she is the maid of honor, to give a shower for the bride-to-be, or at least share in the expenses of a shower. "B" says it is incorrect under all circumstances for a sister to have anything to do with the shower, except, of course, to attend.

2. Also is it necessary to send a wedding invitation to the bridegroom's parents? And to each member of the bridal party?

J. F.

1. There are really no definite rules about the giving of showers, and so the procedure must be based on good taste and good judgment. And it is not considered good taste for a member of the bride's family, even a sister who is to be her chief attendant, either to give the shower or to share in the expenses. Wouldn't this give the unattractive impression that the maid of honor were "in cahoots" with the bride and the rest of her family to put on a gift-promotion?

2. Yes, an invitation should be sent to the bridegroom's parents ..this invitation, as a matter of fact, is the most important of all the invitations, since the bridegroom's parents are the guests of honor at the wedding. And also each member of the wedding party should be sent an invitation.

The Guest of Honor Unwraps Her Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to give a shower for my dearest friend. Who should be asked to help the bride-to-be unwrap her shower gifts?

E. A.

No one should help the guest of honor unwrap her shower gifts. This part of the shower is the feature of the party, and there shouldn't be any attempt made to "hasten" the procedure..the presentation, unwrapping, and thanking for the gifts should be unhurried, festive, with time for the surprise-element, and the oh's and ah's of the guests.

Needn't Send Wedding Present

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

My husband and I have been invited to a wedding and reception, but we will not be able to attend. The people who sent us the invitation are not close friends of ours; in fact, I have seen them only once in five years.

M. J.

Since it is obvious that you have no wish to send a wedding present, I see no reason why you should send one.

Some Helpful Beauty Hints For the Care of Dry Skin

By HELEN FOLLETT

THE cultivation of good looks is a part time occupation—to some of us it may be a diversion—that calls for patience and persistence. Stop and go systems won't get you any place. You must do a certain amount of beauty chores every day of your life, rain or shine. This rule applies particularly to the care of the dry skin, which becomes more and more annoying as the winter season advances.

Why does the cutaneous coat start this suicidal policy? Beauticians claim that it is not only a low-fat diet that causes this condition, but lack of water. The skin is thirsty, so it gets arid. If it happens that you belong to the dry cult, better down your six glasses of water a day. Start breakfast with a glass of orange juice.

A dry atmosphere will sometimes raise the dickens with even a normal skin. That means that, when winter comes, there should be water containers on every radiator. And, do you know, that walking in the rain is helpful? Sounds silly, but it isn't. The flesh gets into a glow from exercise; the moist air brings an even greater reaction of the blood streams.

There is no such thing as feeding too much oil to the dry surface. Use a thin cream for removing make up. Let it remain on when using soap and water. Rinse with warm water, dry, apply a heavy cream. Massage it in well. As it disappears, pile on more.

More fat in the diet will awaken sebaceous glands that have gone on strike. Two or three slices of bacon for breakfast will help, as will more butter on your toast.

Uce a cream rouge instead of a compact. Find a powder with an olly base; it will spread on evenly, will adhere longer than a dry powder.

Problems of Women's Hospital Aids Of Ontario Discussed at Convention

Mrs. W. L. Langlois Gives Reports of Sessions Recently Held in Toronto

The following is a report of the Convention of Women's Hospital Aids of Ontario which took place recently at the Royal York Hotel, in Toronto. The report was submitted to the Local Hospital Auxiliary meeting Nov. 19th, by Mrs. W. L. Langlois, the auxiliaries delegate to the convention.

The convention opened at 8 o'clock with a breakfast meeting at which Mrs. Oliver W. Rhynas presided. Mrs. Rhynas retired this year but will continue in an advisory capacity in the matter of public relations. She was also named representative to the Canadian Hospital Council. In her welcoming address she said, "These are unusually serious readjusting and rebuilding times. We must cease to be echoes, but live uprightly, work constructively if we are to play our part in restoring order out of the chaotic world. We must get down to realities and fashion a pattern of life to be woven on a broad loom taking in all races, classes, colors and creeds, binding this fabric with the warp and woof of Canadian living, making possible a new united world wherein people may live in a peaceful Christian brotherhood, blotting out fear hate, distrust and greed."

Personal Service Needed

Throughout the whole convention Mrs. Rhynas reiterated the hope that each delegate would stress to her auxiliary the necessity not only of raising money, but of giving ourselves, of giving our quota of personality towards making our community a better place in which to live.

Greetings were brought by Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern of Chicago, chief director of the American College of Surgeons, who paid tribute to the associations for their great service to hospitals not only for what they accomplish but also for their influencing the public to co-operate. Special guests at the breakfast were Dr. W. J. Routley of the Canadian Red Cross Dr. Harvey Agnew president of the Canadian Hospital Council, Father John G. Fullerton, president of the Ontario Hospital Association, all of whom spoke briefly.

Mrs. Ryland New, national regent of the I. O. D. E. brought greetings from that organization and Lady Eaton told us briefly with charm and tact that "If we women of Canada considered there was much wrong with it we really had only ourselves to blame—because if we would but fully realize the extent of our power and then exercise it—particularly with the franchise, there is nothing we could not accomplish." She said, "we are a very favored people and that if we would keep abreast of the times, no government could withstand us."

Women Need To Be United

The piece de resistance at breakfast was in the inimatable Mrs. Kate Aitken. Her talk was based on a survey which she made this summer at the request of the government—taking in all of Canada beginning at the east coast, continuing right across to the west. To carry out the survey, she chose the plan of singling out a typical middle class family in each province and making a study of its problems from every angle. She spoke particularly of her findings from a health point of view.

She stated that of the nine housewives she came to know (one in each province) five had had operations for either malignant or fibroid growths out of 9. She said, "These mothers are being mowed down by preventable disease and a bed in a public ward is not good enough for them." She urged everyone to push ahead to extend health services to get on with preventive measures and research.

She stated that we spend 85 per cent of the country's money, that we control 3-5 of savings bank accounts, that we collect 4-5 of all the insurance issued and above all that we have 51 per cent of the vote." She declared, "our power is colossal, particularly our control over public opinion—all we lack is a common and coherent purpose with perseverance in seeing it through." As she says, "you save money, you spend money, now all get together and borrow money—start preventive measures and research to cure your own ills—the ills of women of the homes. If women the world over do not organize and work for a safe and enduring peace we will most surely be working again when the time is ripe for another big war."

She urged us all as Canadian women to take our part in making Canada not a land to be happy to die for but rather a country to live for and enjoy. I was interested to learn from Mrs. Aitken that of our nine provinces, Saskatchewan is the only one with a cancer clinic. Hospitalization is your right in Saskatchewan you pay for it regularly in your taxes, so it is free to you.

Problems Discussed

After conclusion of breakfast the Aids Association met separately from the Ontario Hospitl Association and the sesions of the first day, morning, afternoon and evening were devoted mostly to the reading of reports and discussions of problems evoked by them. To me the most interesting discussions were 1 means of raising money, 2. ways of spending it. In both cases these are legion but I shall mention some highlights.

To begin with $88,000 is the the combined hospital aids last recorded spending strength of in session. Last year $66,000 of this was spent in equipment. Some auxiliaries supply lines, some equip libraries and provide current periodicals. Then there is the furnishing of nurses' residences and providing for scholarships. In some hospitals a tuck shop on wheels pushed through wards and private rooms is meeting a real need and proving a financial success. One delegate reported that last year her tuck shop sold over 39,000 articles! Some groups like ourselves have teas, bridges, tag days and tea rooms run right in the hospital.

In Peterborough a house-to-house canvass for members takes place each year organized by ctiy blocks. Their fee is 25c and they have approximately 2500 members. One of their yearly projects—a penny sale—lasts 2 weeks. and nets over $1900. In one town a gift shop is maintained in hospital—selling gifts suitable for new babies and bed patients—open during visiting hours manned in turn by members of the auxiliary. One aid reported having $8,000 in bonds towards building a new hospital.

Standing Committees

Some groups have standing committees such as linen committee, membership, emergency and visiting committees. The St. Catharines group from whom the entire provincial executive is chosen reported their visiting committee made over 3,000 visits to hospital patients last year. In some towns the members buy fruit and do canning in enormous quantities right in the hospital.

In Chatham a yearly event is a large tea always well attended nd put on restrictedly by the men of the hospital board. On that board there are always three women members. Miss Phyllis Campbell, superintendent of nurses at Chatham is the new president of Ontario Hospital Association. They have four separate hospital aids there—so Chatham is definitely hospital minded. In the country, just north of Chatham a rural aid has been formed. This small group raise a sum each year generous enough to keep a hospital room perpetually supplied with linen and last year they donated new tea and coffee urns for the kitchens as well. In Orillia hospital free hospitalization and treatment for veterans of World War I is offered during three months of every year.

Convalescent Homes Recommended

During morning session of the second day the resolutions committee brought in a resolution which was unanimously approved and passed. This was that each aid should write the department of health, and welfare recommending more convalescent homes for the aged—particularly in rural districts where the need is so great.

Mrs. Rhynas as I have already said, feels that we should all realize the importance of hospital mindedness, or public relations in our community. She believes this is more important than money—that we should make ourselves responsible for moulding public opinion into a correct attitude towards our hospital. To this end she has suggested that we print a small pamphlet that will convey to all in a concise form advantages, services and needs of our hospital. For example: 1. Its bed capacity. 2. Its services—blood bank X-ray, clinics etc. 3. How long it has served. 4. Its nursery equipment.

She urged us as ambassadors to advertise and boost the capabilities of our hospital. The president also suggested that because of the great benefit and inspiration derived by the auxiliary delegates in convention together a convention fund should be set aside in each group.

Presentations Made

Tuesday afternoon presentations were made to several retiring officers. Mrs. Rhynas was given a beautiful wrist watch—Mrs. Houston a handsome amethyst and gold lapel pin and Miss Theo. McKelcan of Hamilton a string of pearls. Those gifts were greatly appreciated and suitably acknowledged.

The New National Executive is chosen from the St. Catharines auxiliary which is the senior aid in the province. It was felt that because of their wealth of experience, their proximity to each other and their central geographical location in the province—they were best suited for the executive. These officers are Mrs. Graham Harkness—President; Mrs. J. R. Christie—secretary; Mrs. Chas. Sim—treasurer; Mrs. Chas. Taylor—treasurer of the Memorial Flower Fund. Mrs. Mikel of this city is a vice president of the Hospital Aids Association and she is also on the Directorship of the Ontario Hospital Association.

Visit Military Hospital

Monday afternoon all delegates wishing it were conveyed by bus to Sunnybrook Military Hospital There we were shown every detail of this vast organization which now houses 150 men but will eventually house 1500. In the lounges, game rooms, sun rooms, baths, kitchens and wards themselves no item has been ommitted which would cure the illness and aid the convalescence and adjustment of our returned men—whether their illness be mental or physical or both.

During the luncheon meetings each day Stanley St. John supplied music and entertainment. The highlight of Monday's luncheon was the presence of Lt. Col. the Reverend Sidney Lambert who has been Dominion president of the amps since 1920, and who spoke of those men on occasion. The Woman's Hospital Aids Association presented Padre Lambert with $600 for the purchase of swimming equipment for the new memorial centre for the Amps Association. The gift was the balance of our war services fund through which we ourselves sent during the war over 400,000 boxes and over $1,000 worth of sports equipment. Of the $500,000 necessary for this building $475,000 is already realized.

Speaks of Trip to Europe

Luncheon Tuesday featured DR. A.V. Douglas, Dean of Women at Queens'. Dr. Douglas has already spoken in Belleville this autumn. Her story was of her experiences during a trip to Europe last spring where she was a representative at the Council of the World Federation of University women. Time and space do not permit repetition of her findings in England, France, Holland and the other countries. Poland under the Russians is far from perfect but immensely better than under the Germans.

All the horrors perpetrated by Germany, of which we have read, are more than true—the evidence is everywhere throughout Europe. Devastation in Germany beggars description but almost none of the people feel any personal guilt. They hate their conquerors and long for revenge. At any rate we owe a last debt to the Europeans who bore the brunt of the Germans. We must never grow weary of watching Germany—we must ever continue our patrol—because the moment we relax our vigilence that moment they will begin replanning conquest.

Talk of G. Friesen

At luncheon the third day Mr. G. Friesen gave a most interesting resume of his experiences in Germany which was received with great enthusiasm. The banquet Tuesday evening was a suitable culmination to events of the joint conventions. The head table presented such notables as Reverend John G. Fullerton who acted as chairman, Dr. Fred Routley, the Hon. Russel L. T. Kelly of Hamilton provincial Health Minister, Dr. John Phair and two representatives of the Cape Provincial Government of South Africa, directors of hospital services there. These two men had just completed a tour of Europe, United States and Canada. They were inspecting hospitals and hospital administration in preparation for hospital extension in South Africa. The food was sumptuous, the music and floor show by Stanley St. John most enjoyable. I wish to thank the Association for having chosen me as delegate —the whole convention was both an inspiration and a revelation to me.

RUPTURED

READ THIS MAN'S EXPERIENCE:

R.R. No. 6, Picton, Ont.

J. L. Armstrong, Esq.,
Specialist, Ottawa, Ont.
Dear Sir:

For some time past it has been my intention to write you in appreciation of what your appliance has done for me.

Ruptured in early childhood, cause unknown, the hernia eventually descended into the scrotum, and at times caused me considerable inconvenience, pain and anxiety, in later years greatly interfering with my work. Upon reaching manhood I wore trusses for several years but they could not hold my rupture. Your patented appliance being highly recommended, I had you adjust one. It fitted perfectly, held securely and was very comfortable to wear. IT CAUSED A COMPLETE CURE OF THAT LONG-STANDING RUPTURE IN LESS THAN SEVEN MONTHS. I have not worn it or any other support for over 10 years now and there is not any sign of rupture whatever. As I was ruptured for over 25 years, one can readily appreciate what a cure has meant to me. I am now 45 years of age, still actively engaged in farming.

I do strongly recommend your patented appliance to any who are ruptured. I know of others who have worn it with entire satisfaction. You may use this letter if you wish to.

Yours faithfully,
ERASTUS JESSUP.

Abortive Alcatraz Break Last May Aired in Court

San Francisco, Nov. 28—(AP) —The abortive Alcatraz break of last May was recalled by two survivors as a horror more stark and bloody than Hollywood's bullet-punctured escape dramas.

The two, guard Bert Burch and kitchen superintendent Robert Bristow, testified yesterday in the trial of three Alcatraz life-term prisoners charged with murder in the death of William A. Miller, one of two guards slain in the escape attempt. Three convicts also were killed.

Bristow implicated two of the accused convicts in the break, Clarence Carnes and Sam R. Shockley. He said he did not see the third, Miran E. Thompson.

Bristow walked unwittingly into the cell block where the escape attempt was centred, he said, and was met by Carnes.

"He put his right arm around my shoulder and a sharp instrument at my throat," related Bristow. "He said 'move over.' I moved over."

Then Carnes and Joe (Dutch) Cretzer, one of the three convicts later killed, placed Bristow in a cell with other guards.

Although bullets sprayed the cell, killing Miller, Bristow was unhurt and feigned death for 9 hours before being rescued.

The kitchen supervisor said that when Cretzer demurred at shooting a guard because he was his friend, Shockley shouted:

"Friend, hell, he'll go to court and spill his guts."

Cretzer then shot the guard, said Bristow, the bullet creasing the man's cheek.

Burch, a gun-gallery guard, told how he was overpowered, bound and gagged by Bernard Coy, another of the convicts killed in the uprising, as the attempted break began.

7 Arab States Protest Against Jew Immigration

Cairo, Nov. 28 — (AP) — An Arab League conference today issued a statement declaring that "the seven Arab states protest against continuation of Jewish immigration to Palestine." The Arab League believed "all Jews immigrating to Palestine must return to the places where they belong."

The newspaper Al Mokattan quoted Al Said Fadel El Gamaly, Iraq Foreign Minister and representative at the Arab League as saying the Iraq government "warned America that it will cancel her aviation privilege granted to the American government in Iraq if America continued supporting Zionists."

The newspaper added that Fadel El Gamaly told President Truman's special representative in the Middle East great harm would come to American interests of the United States does not change its attitude toward Palestine.

No Premeditated Attempt to Kill Is View of Police

New York, Nov. 28 (AP). — State Secretary Byrnes today rejejcted a charge by Foreign Minister Dmitri Manuilsky of the Soviet Ukraine that a deliberate effort was made to kill two members of his United Nations delegation here on Nov. 21.

Gregory Stadnik was shot in the hip when he and Alexis Voina entered a delicatessen on 58th street shortly after midnight on Nov. 21. The bullet was fired by one of two unknown men who police said were robbing the store.

Mr. Byrnes officially notified Manuilsky of this police view, expressing regret at the shooting of Stadnik and declared that police had assured him they "are doing everything in their power to apprehend the perpetrators of this crime".

"While we deeply regret that a delegate to the general assembly should have been the victim of this crime, I know you will be glad to learn that in the opinion of the police commissioner, based upon the evidence of the eyewitnesses, it was not, as you feared, a premeditated attempt to kill two members of your delegation," Mr. Byrnes said.

"The police authorities are of the opinion that had the criminals intended killing Mr. Stadnik and Mr. Voina, it is more probable that they would have waylaid the two delegates on the street between the hotel and the store where the shooting occurred, instead of waiting for them in a store where there were bright lights and where there were several persons to witness the shooting."

REVERSES PROCEDURE

It has usually been the war bride who has followed her husband to his home and country after he has been discharged, but William Graham, former R.A.F. aircrew, has reversed the order. He is shown at Central Station, Montreal, after reaching there on one of the Canadian National Railways' boat specials operated for passengers of the S. S. Samaria, which docked at Halifax earlier in the week. He was on his way from his home in Ashington, Northumberland, to join his Canadian bride, Jessie, at Dundas, Ont. He met and married the Ontario girl while training in Canada with the R.A.F. and plans to become a citizen of this country, living and working at Dundas. The couple were married in 1943.

Premier Pasha Warmly Defends Revised Treaty

Cairo, Nov. 28—(AP)—Premier Ismail Sidky Pasha, in a letter to the Arabic language newspaper Al Ahram, warmly defended today the revised treaty with Britain which his government is expected to sign shortly despite popular demonstrations against the terms of the pact.

Making public his views for the first time since the outbreak of violent student riots last Saturday, Premier Sidky Pasha declared that the 33-month-period which the treaty would allow British troops to withdraw from Egypt was based on Britain's insistance that this period was needed to build bases elsewhere.

He said, however, that Egyptian military experts had suggested themselves that at least two years should be allowed for the evacuation.

The premier denied his critics' contention that the treaty clause providing for establishment of a joint defence committee would give Britain an excuse to reoccupy the country. He said the committee would be advisory only. British troops would not be able to return to Egypt under the terms of the treaty unless the Egyptian government consented.

The proposed treaty would achieve the unity of Egypt and the Sudan under the Egyptian crown and would outline future relations between Egypt, Britain and the Sudan.

The Egyptian government last night shut down the universities at Cairo and Alexandria, as well as three secondary schools in Cairo, after five days of student riots in protest against the proposed treaty.

Police said three students had been killed and a policeman fatally injured during the disorders.

Says Franco Regime Uses "Savage Tortures"

London, Nov. 28 —(AP)— F. Ganivet, secretary of the Spanish Republican Government headquarters here, said last night that Generalissimo Franco's regime was using "the most savage tortures," which range from "flogging with staves to the application of electric current," against Spaniards who oppose him. A spokesman for the Spanish embassy replied that "all this is a fabrication of lies," and said the accusations all could be "dismissed as propaganda" by the Republicans against the Franco regime.

More Salmon HasBeenPromised To Canadians

Ottawa, Nov. 28 (CP).—Housewives who have been scratching through grocery store shelves in search of scarce canned salmon for several years had good news today from the Fisheries Department.

The word was that more tinned salmon would go on the domestic market from this year's pack than in any recent year. The allocation for the Canadian householder will be 500,000 cases, against 300,000 last year and much less than that in several earlier years.

The enlargement in the Canadian allocation has been brought about despite a 400,000-case drop in British Columbia's pack for this year. While canning operations for the year have not been completed in British Columbia, the department says it is a safe bet the pack will not be much more than 1,300,000 cases, as against slightly more than 1,700,000 last year.

As the western catch dwindled, it was feared for a time that Canada's own consumption of the fish would have to be slashed further. But the situation was met by reducing shipments to other countries.

The big drop in British Columbia output was caused by a mysterious diminution in the numbers of "pinks"—one of five varieties taken on the Pacific coast. Last year, the pack of pinks was 825,000 cases. But up until this month, the canneries had put up only 117,000 cases in 1946, and the final count probably won't go over 125,000.

Lama Hearing Begins on Friday

Cornwall, Nov. 28 — (CP) — Preliminary hearing of William Earl (Bowser) Lama, 49, on charges of stabbing to death his wife and small daughter at their farm home at nearby Harrison's Corners last Aug. 16, is scheduled to start tomorrow.

Police said C. P. Hope of the Attorney-General's Department in Toronto will act as special prosecutor and that Lama's two sons, Frederick and Daniel, who discovered the bodies, will be among the 14 to 17 witnesses.

Immediately after discovery of the bodies, slashed with a pig-sticking knife, police sought Lama for questioning. Their early efforts unsuccessful, they soon launched one of the biggest manhunts Eastern Ontario ever has seen.

Using woodsman's lore and his intimate knowledge of the district, Lama eluded police 71 days. When he finally was captured, he said he never went beyond his home area a few miles northeast of Cornwall. He claimed he received no assistance from residents of the area but managed to obtain enough food to keep him alive.

Once he spent a week in a vacant house in the heart of the little village of Moulinette but shuffled off into the woods as soon as he was discovered.

Searching for food in the cellar of a house whose occupants were away for the day led to his capture Oct. 26 in the same village. County Constable William Seymour, attracted by the glimmer of a light, spotted Lama lighting matches in a search for food.

300 JAP DANCE GIRLS PETITION FOR TAX RELIEF

Tokyo, Nov. 28 — (AP)—Japan's stern-faced parliament members turned today from momentous decisions to receive a visit from 300 dance hall girls petitioning for tax relief.

The girls wanted the Diet to make the purchasers of dance tickets liable to the tax, instead of taking a cut of their revenue.

Windsor, Nov. 28 — (CP) — Three men, John Owad, Angus Robinson, and Michael Kosowan, all of Windsor will appear before Magistrate J. A. Hanrahan in County Magistrate's Court today charged with the $4,000 armed robbery of Mrs. Bertha Thomas, proprietor of Edgewater Inn, Riverside Drive.

Mrs. Thomas told police three masked men, one carrying a sawed-off shotgun and the others revolvers, climbed a ladder to her bedroom window early Monday and forced their way into the room as she tried to beat them off with a chair. Then they compelled her to hand over the money in an office safe and fled in an automobile in which a fourth man waited.

THE HOUSTON COMPANY LIMITED CELEBRATES 60 YEARS IN BUSINESS

'EVERYTHING FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF A BUILDING' BUSINESS MOTTO OF HOUSTON COMPANY OF BELLEVILLE

Founded in Small Sawmill In Tweed, Firm Has Enjoyed 60 Years of Steady Progress

Factory Is Well Equipped With Modern Machinery

In the builders' supply business for the past 60 years and having the latest word in manufacturing and merchandising equipment, the Houston Company Limited, of Belleville, takes great pride in its recognized motto of selling "everything for the construction of a building".

From the raw cement which goes into the foundation to the last nail and shingle that goes onto the roof, the potential builder can obtain his every requirement from this firm which has enjoyed an ever-widening circle of business operations since its inauguration just 60 years ago. The business was founded in Tweed back in April, 1886, by the late Robert F. Houston and A. M. Vandusen, then prominent men of Tweed village.

Leader In Municipal Affairs.

One of the county's most prominent men in his day, R. F. Houston served as reeve of Tweed village, took part in all affairs on community welfare and was considered a man whose word was "as good as his bond". That same business principle characterizes the officials of the Houston Company today.

The wide range of business conducted by the Houston firm today saw as its beginning a small steam sawmill on Stoco Lake which the founders of the firm purchased and moved to Tweed where the firm of Houston and Vandusen commenced turning out lumber in various sizes. The partnership continued until 1889 when Mr. Houston became the sole owner, operated the business alone until 1900 and then took in his eldest son John F. Houston as partner. The business then became known as "R. F. Houston and Company".

Ten years later the present Houston Company was incorporated and became known as the Houston Company Limited. Present officers of the company are: President, R. E. "Bert" Houston; Secretary, Dorland Houston; and Harry Rollins as treasurer.

Moved To City In 1927.

Following an honored business career, the founder of the business died in 1919 and later years saw his sons upholding the reputation and traditions of the organization. Expanding operations throughout South Hastings and Prince Edward Counties necessitated a more central headquarters and in 1927 the firm moved to Belleville.

Ten acres of land and six buildings owned by the Steel Company of Canada were acquired and gradually the planing and woodworking plant of the Houston firm was transferred to Belleville. The firm then added considerable new machinery in their enlarged quarters and branched out further in building products activities.

In Tweed the Houston Company operated a brick plant and also carried on construction work, but since removing to Belleville, this particular phase of operations has been discontinued, the firm now furnishing supplies to building contractors, in which a large business has been built up.

Plant Layout.

The Houston plant in Belleville is well equipped and to minimize the fire hazard every building is installed with a water sprinkler system, a move which reduced insurance premiums by $1,500 per year.

At the north-east section of the yard is a large building, 168 x 51 feet with convenient appointment and mezzanine floors. The west portion of the building houses modern offices and a display room. The remainder of the space accommodates proper storage for all kinds of builders' hardware, paint, sash, doors, mouldings and trim, dressed lumber and hardwood flooring.

To the east of the above structure is a large warehouse 200 x 52 feet housing asphalt roofing and shingles, cement, lime, plaster, plywood and further supplies of dressed and matched lumber.

South of these two buildings is a complete factory shed approximately 400 x 52 feet housing an up-to-date carpenter shop 45 x 31 feet with a filing room 14 x 31 feet. The machine shop includes matcher, rip saws, planer, stickers, cut off saws, lathe, two complete sets of sash and door machines, drum sander and other smaller yet important machines to make up the complete wood-working plant. The glass storage and glazing equipment is of the latest type. A dry storage shed houses the manufactured lumber ready for shipment while another covered shed protects lumber ready for manufacture in the shop. For the convenience and safety of the employees there is an up-to-date washroom, also a first-aid room with qualified attendant.

The heating system which was installed two years ago is of the latest type. A shavings burner supplies the necessary steam for heating purposes and operation of the new dry kiln.

New Moore Dry Kiln.

The Houston Company Limited is the proud possessor of a new modern Moore dry kiln capable of drying 40,000 feet of lumber in 36 hours. Ready for operation shortly after the first of the year, this kiln will be one of the finest for hundreds of miles around.

In a lumber yard fire is one of the great hazards especially when there is a large quantity of shavings. To control this, every corner of the Houston plant is protected with an automatic sprinkler system. The instant fire breaks out in one of the buildings not only is water automatically sprayed on the dangerous spot but a fire alarm system warns those concerned of the danger.

Certain kinds of lumber must be stored under cover while others can be stored in the open. The latter class includes rough structural timber and sheathing. Outside storage at the Houston plant is very adequate. The property consists of some ten acres bordering on St. Paul street and running to the Bay. Lumber to be dried is piled out here with piling sticks between to allow free air circulation. After this lumber is considered safely seasoned it is then taken to the shop by means of a modern motorized tractor and trailer system.

Officers Of Company.

It was the misfortune of the Company in 1938 to lose the president, Mr. J. F. Houston, Mr. F. E. Houston then succeeded to the presidency, having previously filled the department of buyer and office manager. However in 1939 the Company again due to the death of Mr. F. E. Houston found it necessary to elect another president and R. E. Houston rose to the office in 1940 as president and managing director.

The remaining officers of the Houston Company Limited includes H. C. Martin as vice-president, W. H. Rollins as treasurer, and Dorland Houston as secretary. With 60 years of steady progress as a background it is the earnest desire of all concerned with the Houston firm to continue the above policy for many more anniversaries.

150 Deputies Pass Vote of Confidence In Egypt's Govt.

Alexandria, Egypt, Nov. 28 — (Reuters)—Twelve students were injured Wednesday when police opened fire with buckshot on a mob in front of King Farouk University of Law and Engineering, which was under heavy guard.

The students threw two hand grenades, which exploded without causing casualties, and stoned and clubbed police officers.

Armored cars and Bren gun carriers had been out since dawn and there were heavy police guards at all strategic points.

Reports from Cairo and Zagazig, Lower Egypt, also showed that attempts by students to demonstrate had been curbed by exceptionally severe security measures.

Meanwhile, political observers considered the situation clarified by last night's government victory in the Lower Chamber when 159 deputies voted confidence in the government.

Testator Did Not Want Beneficiaries To Smoke, Drink

Brantford, Nov. 28 — (CP) — Provision in a will that certain beneficiaries must abstain from tobacco and alcoholic drinks or receive only the sum of $1, was referred Wednesday to Chief Justice J. C. McRuer in Supreme Court here.

W. Ross MacDonald, administrator of the estate so far as its Canadian assets are concerned, asked Chief Justice McRuer for direction on certain questions concerning the will — that of the late George Arthur Campbell.

A former resident of this district, Mr. Campbell died in Florida on June 13, 1943.

A clause in the will contains this proviso: "Provided, however, that if any of said grandchildren use tobacco habitually in any form, or drink beer or other alcoholic drinks as beverages, then and in that event, such of said grandchildren as use tobacco or liquor, shall receive the sum of only one dollar ($1.00) each, and the remainder of my residue of estate be divided among those grandchildren who do not smoke tobacco or drink alcoholic beverages."

The administrator asked for a ruling whether this proviso related to the Canadian assets and, if so, whether the proviso was valid and effectual.

If the proviso is valid, the administrator asked, how was he to determine whether any of the beneficiaries had contravened it. In view of a question regarding unborn grandchildren being raised, Chief Justice McRuer appointed E. R. Read to represent them.

Creamery Association Passes Resolution

Niagara Falls, Nov. 27—(CP)—The Ontario Creamery Association, in final sessions of its convention here adopted a resolution requesting the Federal government immediately to establish a price parity as the first step toward the de-control of butter, to end the butter shortage in Canada.

The resolution termed the government's policy of maintaining a depressed price for butter in relation to other dairy products an injustice to the 77,000 cream producers in Ontario. Unless some change in policy is made, the resolution continued, an indefinite shortage of butter will result.

DETAINED AFTER SLAYING

Montreal, Nov. 28—(CP) — A 49-year-old woman who, according to police said she grasped a knife when her husband threatened to beat her Tuesday night was held at detective headquarters as a material witness to the fatal stabbing of Ernest Bean, 44. Police found Bean's body sprawled on the floor of his home in the Pointe St. Charles waterfront district. A deep gash was opened above his heart and a blood-stained knife lay on the floor.

1 STORY, 6 ROOMS

BY MARION CLYDE McCARROLL

Here's another home of the one-storey type for which so many young couples are looking today.

This one was designed for a narrow lot, so that the greatest amount of space is at the back in a long wing. The front door opens into a large living room which gives access to a porch, a library, the dining room, at left of the entrance, and a long hallway leading to the bedrooms at the very back of the house.

The picture and the plan are taken from a book titled "The Key to Your New Home," by Lewis Storrs, Jr., which has much to offer the family planning to build or to remodel.

Calling itself "A Primer of Liveable and Practical Houses," the book covers, for the most part in pictures with ample captions, "the many details that can make a house both liveable and practical," as the author puts it. "The successful home," he goes on to explain, "is created by making careful provision, first of all, for the small points that cater to the needs and pleasures of the owner. Next, the items that develop the individuality of the site). must be taken into account. Then all of these factors must be co-ordinated into a practical and unified building that will be a thing of beauty."

Having established this basic philosophy of creating "a successful home," he then shows you how to go at it from the practical standpoint by taking up, one by one, the three chief points to be considered: the exterior of your house; adequate provision for the outdoor living which forms so large a part of the modern program, and the interior of your home. In a fourth section of the book, many individual houses of different architectural types are presented with their plans.

Laminated Roof New in Building

Fabricated rafters, bent to desired shape, will be used in the construction of a warehouse that is planned for Havelock, Ont. This is said to be the first time this type of construction will be used in Ontario.

The rafters are of laminated fir strips about half an inch thick that are glued and formed to the roof contour. Supporting framework is eliminated, the rafters being bolted to a top ridge.

The exterior can be covered with wood sheathing, or siding and roofing or galvanized iron, according to the type of building and its special use.

Cost of construction is about 60 per cent of the conventional buildings. The rafters are set two-feet apart, stoutly anchored at the ground level. One of the advantages is the clear open interior.

These rafters are made in Seattle, and some of the buildings of which they are the skeletons have now been in use seven years.—Canadian Lumberman.

Science of "Cold 70" Explains "Chilly" Feeling

When the thermometer says 70 degrees indoors on a cold day, do you nevertheless feel "chilly"? You may be experiencing what heating men term "cold 70." So states the Canadian Chapter, National Warm Air Heating and Air Conditioning Association.

On a winter day, the inside wall surface is invariably colder than the room temperature. As a result, about 60 per cent of the heat being lost from the human body (for the body is continually losing heat) is being radiated to the cold surfaces at too fast a rate. If this degree of heat loss were not taking place, or in other words, if the inside walls were 70 degrees, it would be comfortable with a much lower room temperature.

Your house is also losing heat; and approximately four times as much through single windows as through walls. This window loss may be reduced as much as sixty per cent by using storm windows. Insulation may reduce the building heat loss another twenty per cent. Insulated houses reduce the load on existing heating plants and permit the installation of smaller units.

The Canadian Chapter suggests that home owners consult their local heating contractor or furnace dealer to ensure efficient, economical "Indoor Comfort."

1946 Forest Fire Toll Not Excessive

Careless campers and negligent smokers are still the chief firebugs in Canadian forests, altho' emphasis on fire prevention campaigns has showed good results in many provinces this year.

A Canadian Press survey has revealed that with the exception of New Brunswick and Ontario, forest fires were not as bad as last year. The greatest number of fires was reported from Ontario, with 1,368 different blazes by mid-August. Probably the largest single blaze was in New Brunswick when between 40,000 and 50,000 acres were burned near Moncton.

Quebec officials reported that province had the smallest number of fires recorded in the country. They claim that is due to the anti-forest campaign which has been carried on for 20 years in Quebec. Ontario had 422 more forest fires than in 1945, but officials said less good timber was destroyed because many of the fires were in scrub and berry-bush country. The largest fire was at Pantagruel Creek, near Nipigon, where lightning started a blaze that destroyed 7,800 acres of bushland. Bull-dozers, planes and the educational campaign noticeably helped the battle against the fires.

In Ontario the usual spring hazard did not develop to any extent this year, but the summer hazard developed in the latter part of July, and was heavy by the middle of August. Besides the Pantagruel Creek blaze, there was a fire over 5,000 acres near Minaki and another 5,000-acre fire near Blind River. Manitoba forests were in reasonably good condition, with no big fires so far. Saskatchewan almost tripled her expenditure on fire prevention this year, spending $80,000 on air patrols, advertising, radio talks and other preventive measures. There were no major outbreaks. Alberta also was able to report no serious fires. British Columbia had hot weather all summer, but rain fell at opportune times. Cause of most B.C. fires this summer was said to be brush—clearing, rather than tourists. B.C.'s biggest blazes this summer were at Campbell River on Vancouver Island blamed on a cigarette and one near Chilliwack in the Fraser Valley.—Canadian Lumberman.

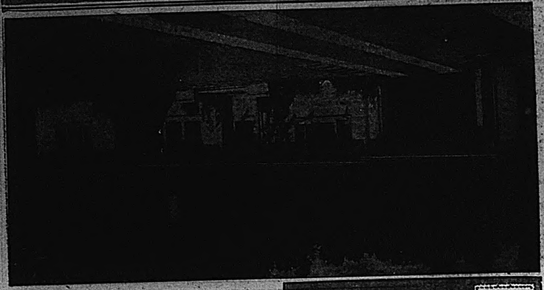
★ Simple and Smart ★



FOR THE FAMILY WHOSE NEEDS can be adequately met by a five-room house, this good-looking modern bungalow, with its trim, simple lines, should be appealing. If the family grows in size, its added space requirements might be taken care of with an extra bedroom at back.

By MARION CLYDE McCARROLL

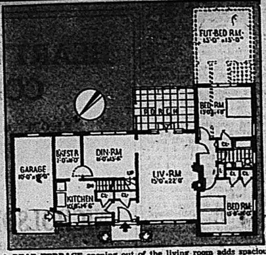
Every year, it seems, there is an increasing demand for smaller homes, and particularly the bungalow type of house which does away with the necessity for stair-climbing.

Part of the demand comes about because of the domestic help shortage. The housewife who finds herself unable to get servants, and, as a consequence, is forced to do a large part of her housework herself, wants to make the whole thing as simple as possible. With everything on one floor, it cuts down on the number of steps she has to take, and the number of places she has to look after and keep clean.

The rest of the demand comes from young married couples not yet faced with the problem of a growing family whose needs require only a minimum of space, or from couples whose children have grown up and left home, and so a large house becomes a burden rather than an absolute necessity.

Because of all this, architectural interest in the house that is all on the one floor has broadened in the last few years to keep pace with public demand, with the result that the family which wants a bungalow or the one desiring a basic house which can grow as the need develops, now has far greater variety of plan to choose from than ever before.

Pictured here is a simple, but very smart house of this type, comfortable and convenient for the family that needs no more than two bedrooms, yet capable of expanding in case requirements change and a larger home is needed.



A REAR TERRACE opening out of the living room adds spaciousness to the general appearance of the house and a place for outdoor dining.

Yugoslavia Adds To Forces Along Greek Frontier

By L. S. CHAKALES

Athens, Nov. 28 (AP). — The Foreign Ministry announced today the Yugoslav government had informed the Greek minister in Belgrade that Yugoslavia was strengthening her forces along the frontier because large numbers of Greeks were "seeking refuge from terror" in Northern Greece.

The announcement coincided with dispatches from Salonika which said a new battle had broken out in Macedonia. Greek third army headquarters said 600 members of a "Communist" band from newly established Leftist headquarters on Mount Jena had occupied the villages of Mavron and Mandhalon, 10 miles northeast of Edessa.

This action was from 20 to 25 miles southwest of the scene of recent clashes on the Skra-Notia front, not far from the Yugoslav border. Reinforcements were being moved in from Edessa and planes were thrown into the mounting battle, the army said.

Associated Press correspondents Joseph C. Goodwin reported from Salonika that the Partisans controlled both Mavron and Mandahalon, after an all-day fight, and that the fate of two Greek platoons in Mavron was unknown.

Other press dispatches in Athens said some armed villagers resisting the attack were mistaken for guerillas and machine-gunned by Greek fighter planes.

13,000 Maritime Coal Miners Want Increased Wages

Glace Bay, N.S., Nov. 28 (CP). —Spokesmen for 13,000 Maritime coal miners will enter wage negotiations tomorrow armed with a strike mandate for the first time since the United Mine Workers of America attained recognition in Nova Scotia in 1917.

The authority to call a strike if deemed necessary to obtain Canadian Congress of Labor-affiliated union in a pit-head plebiscite in coal-mining areas of eastern Nova Scotia and New Brunswick yesterday.

District President Freeman Jenkins said results available indicated an overwhelming majority in favor of giving the union board authority to take strike action.

Chief demand which the union will make in negotiations with mining subsidiaries of Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation tomorrow will be for an increase of 27 cents an hour, raising basic pit wages to $1 and adding an estimated $7,000,000 to the industry's annual wage bill.

The union is seeking to have its demands embodied in a contract to become effective next Feb. 1, the day after expiry of the current agreement.

A new demand which will enter the negotiations is that of a royalty of 15 cents a ton on all coal mined. This would be used for establishing a pension scheme.

Miners, now working a 44-hour week, have also announced intentions to ask for time and a half for work over 40 hours weekly or eight hours daily.

Jinnah and Khan Going to London With Lord Wavell

New Delhi, India, Nov. 28 (AP). —An authoritative informant said today that MMohammed Ali Jinnah and Liaquat Ali Khan, president and secretary, respectively, of the Moslem League, would accompany the Viceroy, Viscount Wavell, to London next week for Indian political talks.

Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, ranking member of the Indian cabinet, said members of the predominantly Hindu Congress party "probably would not" go to London. He indicated, however ,that the decision was not final.

Cigaret Smoking Among Women Not Approved

Kitchener, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP). — Cigaret smoking often causes friction between English wives of Canadian war veterans and their in-laws. That theory came today from Mrs. James H. Evans, president of the Kitchener-Waterloo Overseas Wives' Club, who reported that six English wives have already gone home from this area and about a dozen more are planning to do so. There were some 60 war brides in this area.

Mrs. Evans, who hails from Yorkshire, said many mothers-in-law don't approve of women smoking. "They don't seem to realize that much of the cigaret smoking was brought on by war conditions. The war was awfully hard on the girls' nerves."

$35,732,825 Contracts Given for Shipbuilding For French Govt.

Ottawa, Nov 27 (AP)—Contracts have been completed for the construction in Canada of $35,732,825 worth of shipping for the French government in the next two years, it was announced today.

Six building yards in Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia will construct 13 cargo vessels and 14 barges under the contracts. Most of the tonnage is to be completed by the close of St. Lawrence River navigation in 1947, with five of the cargo ships to be delivered in 1948.

A HALL that PAYS its WAY

THIS CENTER HALLWAY COMBINES to perfection those twin delights of the housewife—charm and practicalness. Spacious, airy and homelike, it also has two novel features which enhance its usefulness. The bookshelves are one; for the other, watch the panels and look below!

If you're among the many people who love the air of gracious welcome that a wide centre hall gives to a house, then here is something you'll want to cut and file away for the day when you're building your new home.

It's a central hall that pays its way in efficiency instead of being merely an expensive luxury—a use of space unjustified by any service performed, as is the case in many of the halls typical of large Colonial houses.

How does it justify itself?

Well, in the first place, the space under the stairs has been put to work in a novel way. Instead of the single inadequate closet that usually occupies this space, three commodious slide-out compartments hide behind three large panels, providing places to put umbrellas, overshoes, sports equipment and all the other miscellany the family generally piles haphazardly into the closet. At the rear of these panels, under the landing, is the closet itself, ready to hold coats, hats, sweaters and rainy day gear without crowding.

And then, in the second place, this hallway pays an extra dividen in space by providing room along the side wall for extra bookshelves, a feature that is not only extremely useful, but that adds to the attractiveness of the scene that meets the eye of a person jus entering the front door.

The color scheme of this particular hall, predominantly ivory and black, is a happy choice, increasing the sense of spaciousness while being, at the same time, thoroughly practical. Walls, ceiling and woodwork, being painted an ivory shade, are readily cleanable, as is the black marbleized linoleum with its white inset design.

All in all, this is a hall that is a delight from every point of view.

Wardens Inspect 1,891 Licences To Hunt Deer

Peterborough, Nov. 28 (CP).—More than 2,000 deer were taken out of the counties of Victoria, Haliburton and Peterborough in the season which ended last Tuesday—according to an estimate made by Assistant Forester Alf Hodgson yesterday. 1,891 hunters produced licenses when stopped by game wardens on highways 35 and 28. Patrols were stationed at two main arteries coming from the hunting areas, he stated, one to the north of Norland an highway No. 35 and the other to the south of Apsley. 576 deer were counted coming through at Norland and 579 at Apsley. Mr. Hodgson points out there are several other roads and highways leading from Haliburton and the northern part of Peterborough county, so many deer would be shot that were never tabulated.

Habeas Corpus Decision Deferred On 3,370 Jews

Jerusalem, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Palestine Supreme Court deferred a decision today on a Habeas Corpus action seeking to prevent removal of about 3,370 Jews who reached Haifa harbor aboard the 2,000-ton Hameri Haivra (Lochita) without immigration certificates.

Two of the Jews were fatally injured yesterday in a riotous battle with British troops transferring them to transports, official sources in Haifa said. The transports remained anchored in Haifa Bay outside the city harbor, awaiting the Supreme Court ruling.

The court action left in force an earlier order under which it was ruled the immigrants must remain available for return to Palestine, even if they should be deported to Cyprus.

Official sources said one soldier, missing and believed dead after being struck by a five-lb. can of beef hash hurled by a Jew, made his way to shore safely.

Merchants Want Noranda Opened By Christmas

Noranda, Que., Nov. 28 (CP).—Noranda mine strikers today entered the sixth day of their walkout amid reports that merchants of Rouyn, Noranda's northwestern Quebec twin town, were planning to get the company and union together to have the mine operating for the Christmas season.

Support to these reports was added by the arrival today of Real Caouette, Union des Electeurs de Pontiac member of parliament, who is familiar with all phases of the strike.

Members of Local 688, International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C.I.O.), workers struck for an hourly wage increase of 16 cents, retroactive to Feb. 8, shift wage differentials and a union checkoff.

The Toronto-directed company has replied with a 10 cents increase retroactive to Nov. 1 but no union checkoff.

Observers are looking forward to a resumption of union-company negotiations last held Nov. 21.

H. L. Roscoe, vice-president and general manager of Noranda Mines Limited, is expected here today from Toronto where he conferred with company executives.

James Y. Murdoch, company president, has said efforts will be made to continue production at the mine.

The union claims a membership of 597 out of the 1,147 company employees.

Lumbermen Ready to Assume Their Own Control

Lumbermen are putting a real punch into their appeals to Ottawa urging that controls be removed from domestic trading in lumber. Many resolutions have been forwarded to Hon. C. D. Howe, representing the convictions of those associations actively identified with the various branches of lumbering and all co-operating in the Canada-wide proposal to have the lumber industry restored, with its free-trading opportunities, to the lumbermen.

At the same time there has emerged another well-supported suggestion that the Government should get out of the building business. So far as Ottawa-sponsored wartime housing is concerned, the view is held by lumbermen that the homes so built can be in no sense considered permanent, that they, too soon, will have served their emergency purpose and that the time is not far distant when they may no longer be considered as contributing to desirable standards of living. To maintain these would, it seems reasonable to conclude, only add to taxation costs.

There is a feeling that this type of housing does not conform with those modern peacetime conditions upon which happy homes are built and that they discourage local investment initiative. This is awaiting an opportunity to undertake a type of construction that would be permanent, attractive and creditable. Municipalities fear that undesirable slum conditions may arise in connection with poorly housed communities.

Brigadier T. F. Flahiff, the Timber Controller, has made a good impression in his contacts with lumbermen. There is reason to believe that he favors decontrol and that his report to the government, based on his interviews with lumbermen east and west, will so recommend. Recently he relinquished one of his dual positions, that of co-ordinator of housing. Reports in that connection probably led to another, quite erroneous, that he also had resigned as timber controller. It can only be surmised just what may happen if domestic controls are completely removed. There would remain the export end of the industry to be administered. This and other problems of the industry would require. Mr. Flahiff's attention, but any suggestion as to the new setup can only be described as out-and-out speculation.

Flahiff seems to have a quiet way with him, but behind it is a reputation for getting things done. Daily press comments indicate that he found it impossible to "expedite" housing under present governmental policy of maintaining brakes in the form of price controls whereby production of desirable materials is hampered while black markets thrive. It is suggested that the present situation calls for an expediter, or co-ordinator as in the United States. Lumberman, however, maintains that if trading in lumber and other materials were restored to normal channels, the situation soon would right itself and confidence be restored.

Lumbermen are ready to take over this business of running their own affairs. They are prepared to meet with a united front any temporary situation that may result from de-control. They are optimistic as to the future and what it holds for the good of the industry and of the country as a whole.—Canadian Lumberman.

AIRY CORNER WINDOWS and plenty of cross-ventilation make this well-planned bungalow a cheerful and comfortable place to live. Designed for those sections of the country where mild temperatures prevail, a basement would have to be added if built in areas having cold winters.

By MARION CLYDE McCARROLL

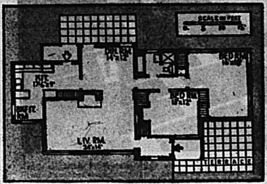
In fact, the basic idea behind its architectural design was to produce a house with as many airy corner windows, and as much cross-ventilation, as possible. Having set himself this problem, the architect solved it by turning out a house with "L" shaped rooms.

Anyone who fancies such a plan as this, however, must keep in mind the fact that to build a house with rooms of this shape adds considerably to its cost. In this particular design, there are sixteen right-angle turns in the interior wall of the house, and each turn adds just that much more expense.

Two terraces, one in front and the other in the back of the house, make their own contribution to the general feeling of spaciousness and airiness the house presents. Either of them is large enough to provide comfortable space for outdoor dining.

Designed without a basement, for living in mild sections of the country, the plans would have to be adapted to include a cellar if used in areas with cold winters.



NUMEROUS RIGHT-ANGLE turns in exterior wall of bungalow were made necessary to achieve "L" shaped rooms with a maximum of light, air.

Now is the Time To Make Plans For A Rumpus Room

Now that summer is definitely gone and chilly air cramps outdoor spare-time activities, it might be a good time to fill out those half formed plans you had about doing something to change the basement from a dusty, unattractive catch-all into a cosy winter retreat or playroom.

The family lucky enough to possess such an underground castle is usually the envy of friends and neighbors; and yet any family in a house with a basement can have a warm, gay rumpus room at comparatively little cost. A well- done playroom soon becomes the most popular place in the home, and saves wear and tear on the rest of the house.

Material Needs Not Great

Admittedly, paint and lumber are in short supply these days—and without them you can accomplish little— but actually the amounts needed are so small and the results are so decided that it is well worth the trouble of looking around until you get what you want. And now is the time to start, if you are in search of a winter hobby that pays off in achievement and enjoyment.

The work can be done gradually too, depending on the time you have to spare for it, and the money available. That's one glory of working in the basement—you don't have to rush the job because it doesn't involve any upsetting of the rest of the house. The Cost can be considerable or it can be minor, depending on just what you have and what you want.

There are, of course, many directions in which you can go with the decoration of this salvaged home space. If you are in need of a playroom for the children on rainy days and in the winter-time you would be guided by their likes and dislikes in the decoration, and the paint job would run to splashes of gay coloring—for instance, to gaily-stencilled animals on a background of wall-paint of natural shade.

Quiet Retreat

If the studious members of your family crave a quiet retreat away from the chatter of the rest of the family and their favorite radio programs the underground castle would likely take on a more dignified air, the bookcases and shelves against walls done in soft, pastel shades. If the room is to become a hobby centre, the decoration would be designed to accentuate the hobby and the treasured accessories pertaining to it.

Most rumpus rooms, however will be turned into fun rooms for the whole family and with gaiety as the keynote the color schemes that suggest themselves for such usage are many and varied. It is all a matter of individual taste, and without a doubt your own taste in paint shades is as good as that of anybody else.

Building Activity Shows Increase

Construction awards in Canada during October showed a considerable gain over the September volume, according to MacClean Building Reports, Limited. The value of awards in October amounted to $73,307,700, a gain of $28.5 millions over September and a gain of $43.8 millions over October last year. The total value of awards during the first ten months of 1946 amounted to $578.8 millions as against $338.3 million for he comparable period of 1945.

Awards for housing led other classes of construction work during October, with a value of $21.5 millions. Housing was followed by engineering construction awards which amounted to $19 millions. Factory awards were next, with a value of $16.9 millions, while business building awards amounted to $15.8 millions.

The greatest volume of awards was registered by the Province of Quebec, where the total was $38.6 millions or over half of all Canadian awards in October, and $28.3 above that province's figure for October last year. Ontario also showed a large volume for the month of October, with awards amounting to $22.7 millions, a figure which more than doubled the amount for the same month last year. Several large awards for individual projects, amounting to over $1 million each, were made in both Quebec and Ontario.

Union Checkoff Seen as Chief Stumbling Block

Noranda, Que., Nov. 28—(CP)—The union checkoff appears the greatest stumbling block in settlement of the Noranda Mine strike today entered its seventh day with idle workers doubtful of an early settlement.

The Union, Local 688, International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C.I.O.), claims a membership of 597 of the company's 1,147 employees. The strike was called Friday to obtain union demands of a 16-cent hourly wage increase, retroactive to Feb. 1, shift wage differentials and a Union checkoff.

In return, the company offered a 10-cents wage increase, retroactive to Nov. 1, but no union checkoff.

Joe Rankin, union official, expressed the opinion that the company, with headquarters in Toronto, would grant the wage demands but refuse the union check off, a point the union is determined to obtain.

Meanwhile, reports that merchants of nearby Rouyn, Noranda's twin northwestern Quebec mining town, were planning to get Union and Company officials together to settle the strike before the Christmas season still have to materialize.

Merchants are anxious to have the mine producing and the men at work by that time so as to avoid heavy losses which would be incurred due to failure to sell large quantities of Christmas stock.

U.S. Could Report To Russia it Has No Atomic Bombs

By ELTON C. FAY

Washington, Nov. 28—(AP)—The United States presumably could report truthfully to Russia or the United Nations that it hasn't any atom bombs.

The Russian proposal at the U. N. Assembly that information on military strength of the powers also include information on atomic weapons raised an interesting point:

There is every reason to believe that the United States has no stock pile of completed atom bombs into which it might reach at a moment's notice and produce one for use.

Unless the system as it existed up to last July has been changed, the government's atom bomb manufacturing department has on hand only the components for making bombs—the nuclear fissionable metallic parts which when brought together, the casing for the bombs and, of course, aircraft capable of carrying and dropping them.

To store a bomb, even without the trigger mechanism, therefore could be highly hazardous. An explosion of one atom bomb, with its accompanying radio-activity, could be far more disastrous than the explosion of an ordinary ammunition dump.

The two bombs dropped on Japan were assembled at the air base from which the carrying planes took off. At the Bikini atom bomb tests last July, both bombs were assembled near the scene of the tests.

How long does it take to put together the bomb? Only a handful of people know the answer to that secret.

Property Owners Demand Right To Evict Tenants

Toronto, Nov. 28—(CP)—Present regulations which purport to give landlords relief in cases of obnoxious tenants "are ineffective and should be revised to give the relief obviously intended," the Ontario Property Owners' Association declared in a resolution at its annual meeting.

Landlords should be allowed to evict tenants and repossess homes needed by themselves or their immediate relatives, the association said yesterday in criticising what it called "bureaucracy" and "controls" in the government's handling of property issues.

One resolution said the association did not believe such an emergency existed as to require continued exercise of extraordinary powers by the Dominion Government.

Maj.-Gen. Hugh A. Young, the president of Wartime Housing Limited and vice-president of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, told the association that, human nature being what it is, a "chaotic" situation would follow complete removal of controls.

Gen. Young's corporation came in for criticism when a resolution passed by the meeting declared: "Wartime Housing should not be placed in a preferred position either as regards obtaining building materials or by special tax agreements."

The resolution added:

"Agreements now extending special tax limitations to Wartime Housing should be cancelled and all special tax privileges of tenants of such accommodation should be terminated as no longer justifiable on any grounds."

Tokyo, Nov. 28 — (AP)—Fifteen thousand Japanese, mainly students, gathered in a Tokyo stadium today for a "Thanksgiving to America" service at which speakers urged the quick establishment of democracy in Japan. Representatives of the leading political parties thanked the Allies for alleviating the food crisis the past year.

140 Radio Owners Convicted

Toronto, Nov. 28 — (CP)—The six Transport Department investigators who check on Torontonians neglecting to buy their radio licences brought 149 radio-owners to court yesterday and obtained 140 convictions. The inspectors said they expected to have reminded 4,000 householders of the advisability of buying their licences by the end of the licence year, April 1.

Russian Embassy Presents Charges

Nanking, Nov. 28—(AP)—The Russian embassy charged today, in a sharply-worded statement handed to newspapermen, that the Chinese army and police at Mukden had participated in "beatings and other lawless acts" against Russian employees of the Changchun Railway in Manchuria.

Chinese authorities, the statement said, had during the past few months created "unbearable conditions not only for work but even for their stay in Mukden."

It charged that Chinese civic and army officials had looted the Russian workers of private property and generally created such conditions in Mukden that their further stay "became impossible."

All Russian railway workers the statement said, would be leaving for the U.S.S.R. within a few days.

There was no indication whether official representations would be made to the Chinese government on the matter.

Switzerland Has Superboom

(By Paul Gygax, Zurich, In "U. S. A.—Switzerland", Basle).

Since shortly after the end of the Second World War, we have had in this country a boom of unprecedented proportions.

The Swiss federal government took up the problem of postwar economy as early as 1940, and worked out a whole range of possible measures and proposals for the prevention of crisis through provision of work. Fortunately, this large scale plan for the prevention of unemployment was never needed however, it can be kept in reserve for years of crisis which will certainly come sooner or later.

All things point to the continuance of the superboom for a long time in Switzerland. In the war, Switzerland recorded, generally speaking, a satisfactory and partly even favorable economic trend, despite the fact that her foreign trade was greatly handicapped by the blockade.

The effects of the superboom are manifested in Switzerland, as in other countries, mainly in the following trends: a big increase in foreign demands, very great domestic requirements and an enlivened investment activity. The drawbacks are essentially these: Swollen wages, an increase in prices and costs, the exodus of labor from small industry and agriculture, as the big industries can offer much better pay. High wages prove a great attraction to the building trade, and the increased building costs will later have their effects on rentals.

Labor Members Called to Caucus

London, Nov. 28 (AP)—Labor members of the Commons today were summoned to a caucus at which party leaders were expected to deal out a stern rebuke for the recent "revolt" against Foreign Secretary Bevin's foreign policy.

Labor leadership was understood to be particularly incensed that some 94 Labor members—almost a quarter of the party's membership in the House—had abstained from participating in the vote of confidence accorded Mr. Bevin on Nov. 18.

The "abstainers" included 57 who signed a resolution urging that the Labor Government's foreign policy be recast on a "socialist" basis charting a middle course between Russia and the United States.

The national executive of the Labor Party considered the situation last night and was reported to have sent a "stern" recommendation to today's meeting.

Most political observers doubted that the party would go to the extreme length of suspending or expelling "rebels" who absented themselves or remained seated while the opposition joined the rest of the party to give Mr. Bevin a 353 to 0 vote of confidence. The abstentions technically did not violate party discipline relaxed since Labor's overwhelming victory in the 1945 general elections.

However, it was generally predicted that restoration of "standing orders" requiring a strict hewing to the party line in debate would be an almost certain result of the caucus.

Australians Face Another Austerity Christmas Season

By J. D. HOLDSWORTH

(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 28 — (CP)— Australians face another austerity Christmas with scarcity of hams, puddings, cakes and other good things of the season.

A drop in coal output may bring rationing o fhousehold electricity supplies and gas and ordinary tram and train services may be reduced.

Supplies of bottled beer and wines, favorite Australian beverages, are short and meat is scarce and retailing at prices up to six cents a pound more than last year.

Poultry will be plentiful and many imported items such as English toys, chinaware, crystal and French perfumes will make their first appearance since the war. Some nylon stockings from the United States may be on sale for the first time.

But in general Christmas is expected to remain below the prewar standard of plenty.

Christmas in Australia is not the traditional "white" season. It comes in mid-summer and many spend part of the day on the beach swimming and sun-bathing.

Despite the heat, turkey and plum pudding dinner is the rule in a large number of homes but there is a trend toward salad lunches with old style dinner when evening comes and the weather cools a bit.

Christmas tree and gift tradition remains strong and in thousands of homes there are family reunions. Some families take the opportunity of the holiday for visits to resorts.

The Mink Coat Dynasty

Right Fur Classifies a Woman as Member of Today's Ruling Caste. — Never Has So Much Mink Been Afforded by So Many. — Mink Not a Fur But a Symbol.

(By Anita Daniel in New York Times Magazine)

I know a little girl sixteen months old whose first words were "mummy" and "mink." For most of her short life she had heard her mother pleading for a mink coat and finally rejoicing over it. Mink naturally became the second word in her vocabulary. "Daddy" had to wait his turn.

The saga of mink is practically sung to little girls in their cradles. It becomes part of the golden ladder of their dreams. For mink is not just a fur; it is a symbol. More than a coat, it is almost a coat of arms.

A mink coat classifies a woman, projects her automatically into a higher sphere. With a mink coat thrown casually over her shoulders she becomes a member of an acknowledged cast. She belongs to the Mink Dynasty.

It would seem that you don't need much else as long as you have a mink coat. Any dress is transformed the moment it's covered by mink. Any sports suit takes on a flair of distinction when worn under mink. Some women even think slacks are smart under a mink coat.

• • •

The sale of mink coats has increased fantastically in the past few months. Never has so much mink been afforded by so many. It is a phenomenon that amazes the chroniclers of our time. It is also an impressive proof of true democracy to see working girls lunching at sandwich counters wrapped in the glamorous furs of queens.

The secret of the extraordinary attraction of mink is basically simple. Mink ranks next to sable in color, quality and the mysterious power to glorify women. In the line of precious furs there is none as flattering, as warm and as practical as mink. And oh, so soft to the touch! Its glamorizing effects bring near the realization of every woman's dream: to feel herself a queen of beauty.

A fine seal, beaver or Persian lamb coat of the best quality costs more than a second-rate mink; but there is no symbolism attached to them.

The other day a friend of mine who was wearing a beautiful Persian lamb coat was discussing politics with a taxi driver. He voiced the opinion that everything that was wrong was the result of class injustice and added, "I don't mean people of your kind. You're not wearing a mink coat!"

Mink is kin to the weasel; it is said to be "the most bloodthirsty and cruel of all weasels, full of nervous energy and possessed by a tireless activity." Can it be that this restlessness and agitation are transferred to the wearer of a mink coat?

In the light of fabulous prices paid for mink and the passionate female craving for this fur, it is rather astonishing to learn that there is plenty of mink in America. The finest mink of all comes from Labrador and the north shore of Quebec. Northern Maine, New England and New York pelts rank next in quality. Louisiana has more minks than any other state, but they are of the cheaper kind. Still, such a "Louisiana Purchase" makes many girls happy. Just as long as it's mink!

A silky quality and the luster of the hair are tests of fine mink; color varies from pale brown to deep dark brown. Wild Labrador is the most coveted of all, and advertisements of such furs read like lyric poems. So do the price tags—from $7,000 up for a coat. Ranch mink, bred and raised in captivity, has its merits, too, and can be had from $2,500 up.

The very latest fashion is "nutotion mink," or silver blue mink. It is so exclusively different that it hardly looks like mink. A single skin costs about $200; a silver-blue coat ranges in price from $13,000 to $16,000.

Mink dreams sometimes come true through the medium of the institution known as the thrift shop. Here second-hand mink coats are offered at $400 to $800, and they sell like fresh rolls.

A girl who walks wrapped in the mirage of mink—whether it comes from a thrift shop or is a family heirloom weather-beaten by generations of wear — feels like a queen. It takes a tremendous amount of work to make a fine mink coat. A good furrier has to be more than a skilled artisan; he must be an artist as well. First 100 to 110 skins have to be matched to perfection as to color. Then they are cut into small pieces, carefully fitted together, and stretched and pinned on cardboard according to the coat's pattern. Now they are nailed and left to dry for two days. It is this artful nailing, as well as the cutting, that makes the difference between a fur coat and a smart fur coat.

After drying, the sections are sewed together, finished, glazed, ironed, combed, beaten and finally scrutinized for utter perfection.

Though most dreams of mink are realized through the installment plan, or asiduous savings, or second-hand fur shops, there is still another possibility—rabbits.

• • •

Not enough can be said in praise of rabbits. Rabbits are not only charming, abundant, useful and cheap; they can double for mink, chinchilla and sable. The glamour stars of fur fairy dreams. Yet the rabbit remains modest through all its metamorphoses. The highest rank it can achieve is "sable-dyed cony" or "mink-dyed cony," selling for $250 to $300.

The only thing that can be said against cony fur is that it's cheap, because rabbits believe in having large families.

The cony copy looks and feels so much like the highbrow original that if it is wrapped around a pretty girl a mere man can hardly tell it from the real thing. With women, of course, it's different. They know—fur better, fur worse. Still, mink-dyed rabbit helps a lot. To misses minus means, it's mink.

Canadians Must Improve Quality Cheddar Cheese

Ottawa, Nov. 28 —(CP)— Improvement in the quality of Canadian Cheddar cheese made for export is needed if Canada hopes to hold Britain's quality cheese market, W. C. Cameron of hte Dominion Agriculture Department's marketing service said in an address prepared for delivery here Wednesday.

Speaking before the annual convention of the Eastern Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, Mr. Cameron told of the results of a recent inspection trip made in Britain, and reported that Canadian cheese was regarded there as being of good quality.

"But what it is desired to emphasize," he said, "is that there is a market in Great Britain which requires nothing but select cheese of uniformly high quality, for which a premium will be paid.

"This market is of sufficient size to absorb readily a quantity of cheese at least equal to, if not greater than, that which is exported from Canada. At the present time, Canada has a better opportunity of securing this market than any other country which exports Cheddar cheese, because there are no Cheddar cheese produced anywhere better than the best Canadian Cheddar."

However, there still were too many cheese exported from Canada which did not qualify for the select trade and this prevented Canadian cheese from reaping the full benefit of the premium which this trade would pay for uniformly high quality.

"The problem then, for the cheese industry of Canada, is to make as much as possible of the Canadian cheese equal in quality to the best now being produced," said Mr. Cameron.

International Student Service have disclosed their budget for world student relief is set at $2,125,000 for the urgent needs of 400,000 students around the world.

WHEN will I get A NEW CAR!
THIS IS A QUESTION WE ARE ASKED MANY TIMES EACH DAY. WE WISH AS MUCH AS YOU DO THAT WE COULD ANSWER IT!
YOU KNOW THAT
that we have done the best we could, but the con tinuous series of strikes which have affected the automobile industry, have made it impossible fo r us to make deliveries of new cars. HERE ARE SOME FACTS you should know.
DO NOT BECOME A VICTIM OF THE IDEA that after disposing of your used car you can simply take the cash and obtain immediate delivery of a new car.
DO NOT RUSH TO DISPOSE OF YOUR PRESENT CAR UNTIL YOU CHECK WITH A NEW CAR DEALER as to when you may expect delivery of a new car. If you do trade in your Used Car to one of the local dealers you may rest assured that it will be made available to some returned veteran or a local resident who urgently needs a car.

Canadiens Share Top Spot With Leafs in N.H.L. Race; Toronto Loses to Chicago 5-2

Habitants Wallop Detroit 6-1 While Boston Takes N. Y. Rangers by 5-2

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Even after a six weeks of this topsy-turvy National Hockey League season, the surprises tumble out with an abundance that makes the bag seem bottomless.

The sight of the renovated young Toronto Maple Leafs up at the summit even though forced today to share the lead with the champion Montreal Canadiens, still occasions a "double" take from some quarters.

For one thing, there was the upset victory of the last-place Chicago Black Hawks over these same Maple Leafs, a 5-2 triumph that marked the first Chicago win in four starts against Toronto and played the biggest part in tightening the six-team race.

Canadiens upset an even better-established precedent by whipping Red Wings at Detroit 6-1, for this victory marked the first by Montreal on Detroit ice since Feb. 4, 1945.

Bruins Now Third

But the prize package of the evening was opened at Boston. There, the Hometown Bruins walloped New York Rangers 5-2, to climb over Detroit into third place in the standings. The victory over the fifth-place Rangers in itself came as no surprise but the sight of Coach Aubrey (Dit) Clapper participating in it certainly did.

That game marked the first appearance of his 20th active N.H.L. season for Dit, who has stepped into the breach only occasionally during the last few years.

Given Fine Ovation

Dit played no part in the scoring. Bill Cowley, the old Smoothie at centre and Chunky Bobby Bauer of the Kitchener line each fired a brace of goals, with Veteran Woody Dumart scoring the other and big Milt Schmidt picking up two assists.

Rangers started off on the right foot with a goal by Church Russell but were unable to score again until Alf Pike's third-period counter.

Black Hawks, with two recent additions from Kansas City Plamors in their lineup, broke a three-game losing streak by beating Toronto before a Windy City crowd of 16,892. Jack Jackson, a defenceman, joined young Bill Gadsby whom Hawks brought up from their farm club earlier.

Mosienko Replaced

The other Chicago socres were George Gee and Cline Smith while Ted Kennedy and Bud Polle bagged Toronto's two counters.

Canadiens poured in five goals in the last period to break a 1-1 tie for their first win in nine games on Detroit ice. Little Billy Reay turned the hat trick while Maurice Richard Toe Blake and Rookie Leo Gravelle each tallied one. Captain Sid Abel got Detroit's only score.

Had Pain in Shoulder; Poor Appetite—Tired; Rundown

"Couldn't Sleep Very Well, Had No Energy," Says This Man — Tells How Syntona Helped Him.

If you feel tired, worn-out and nerves are on edge; if bowels are constipated and you suffer with indigestion, gas, headaches or dizzy spells; if you have backache or sore, aching joints and muscles, try a short treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound and the chances are that you, too, will find this well-known medicine may be just what you need to make you feel like yourself again.

"My right shoulder was so stiff and sore with rheumatic pain it was hard for me to raise my arm. My appetite was very poor. I couldn't sleep very well at night and my entire system seemed to be run down. I was troubled a lot with constipation and would get tired out so easily. It just seemed that I had no energy.

"After reading how Syntona was helping other men and women right here in Hamilton, I got some of this medicine and began taking it. I'm certainly glad I did, because it is surprising how different I feel now. My appetite has come back, the pain is gone out of my shoulder and I am now able to get more sound, restful sleep at night. I have more energy and I don't get tired as I did before. You can say that Syntona has made me feel like a different person and that I will recommend it to any one."

BARONS REGAIN LEADERSHIP OF WEST DIVISION

Capitals Within a Point of Second Place by Defeating Providence

(By The Canadian Press)

Cleveland Barons have regained leadership of the American hockey league's western division, having broken a deadlock for first place with Pittsburgh by taking the Hornets into camp.

But while Barons were defeating Pittsburgh 4-2 at Cleveland last night, the third-place Indianapolis Capitals pulled up to within a point of second place by hanging a 4-2 defeat on Providence Reds.

Winger Hank Goldup notched two of Cleveland's goals, his first tally giving Barons an early lead. Armand Lemieux tied up the count with a Pittsburgh goal before the period ended. Barons went ahead in the second stanza and Hornets never caught up.

Caps scored a goal in each of the first two periods and two in the third to gain their second victory in a week on Providence ice. Tony Bukovich led the scoring with a goal in the first period and another in the final.

Hugh Miller and Jim Conacher scored the other Cap goals while Billy Whittet and Whitey Prokop were the Red scorers.

In the other league game of the club of the Western Division, night St. Louis Flyers, last-place handed Philadelphia Rockets their 17th defeat in 19 games. Flyers won 7-5 at Philadelphia.

Sports Roundup

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 28. (CP)—Over a hilly cross-country course in the Bronx, a lanky, sweat-shirted figure who used to be an artillery captain at Okinawa patiently plods a four-mile routine three days a week, "winding up" for another try at the sweat and strain of the indoor tracks. . . When he entered the United States Army 2 1-2 years ago, long John Woodruff left behind him a world's 800-metre and 800-yard indoor record and a 1,000-yard at floor world mark. . . . Today, at 31, he's "just curious" to see if he can come back, this time in mile events.

Cinder-Fella

Woodruff didnt run competitively while in the army, but he caught up on his walking by not using a jeep unless he had to. . . In a few weeks he'll switch his training grind to the outdoor boards in an effort to be ready for action by February. . . One of his opponents may be 27-year-old Gil Dodds, the plank-pounding parson who abandoned his athletic career two years ago to make a "Youth for Christ" lecture tour. . . Dodds, who sizzled a record 4:06.4 mile in 1944 and now is studying for a Master's Degree in religion at Wheaton, Ill., says "there is a chance" he will return to the Boards this winter.

Something in Common

Highest price for a brood mare at the Lexington, Ky., Fall sales was the ??? ? ? Greentree Stable paid for Gossip, foaled in France and a high-class racer in 1938. Maybe sentiment had something to do with the sale because gossip was captured by the Germans during the war, and so was John Hay Whitney, co-owner of Greentree, but both made it back home safely. . . So far this year about one-fifth of the 1945 foal crop has been sold for a total figure of $7,471,906, which would indicate that the 6,000-odd foals bred in the United States each year have a market value of $35,000,000 at yearling time, using current prices as a guide.

The New York Racing season closed with a three-day charity program and appropriately two of the events were named the "Faith" and the "Hope" . . . Manager-Coach Frank Boucher of New York's hockey Rangers is said to be interested in Melvin (Pee Wee) Reed, the stocky, dipsy-doodling forward with New Haven Ramblers. Pee Wee formerly played in St. Hyacinthe, Que.

IT'S IN THE FAMILY

Melbourne, Australia (CP) — Winston Churchill's gift for repartee apparently extends to a cousin the Dorrigo Country of New South Wales. Told by a collector of ration tickets that he would do well to shave his beard, Mr. Churchill's Australian relative replied that the collector should grow a beard—"it would hide some of your cheek."

BOMBERS ARRIVE FOR FOOTBALL TITLE BATTLE

Western Team Will Have Couple of Workouts Before Saturday's Game

Toronto, Nov. 28—(CP)—Blue Bombers rode into town today crisp as a western wind, scoffing at all crepe hangers and in a town beset by doleful propaganda about Bombers chances it was refreshing just to see Jack West and his men.

All along theirs has been fighting talk for their Saturday football game against Toronto Argonauts, the outfit that whipped them in the east-west a year ago 35-0.

Here there appeared at least shades of wonder. The fact the wails are from the sidelines, from the west itself or western emigres in Old Ontario appeared to have set the footballing east to thinking.

No sharp young team such as Bombers can be as poor as the advance notices, certainly no team that has one win over Montreal Alouettes even if it was a pre-season clash.

All this is not to suggest the east's faith in the Argos has been shaken by arrival of the Bombers; rather a realization that Coach Jack West's remarks about his forward passer Wally Dobler, even if only half borne out, indicate a stiffer tussle than a year ago.

Winnipeg money remained very scarce in Toronto where to western expatriates sentiment ruled against betting against Bombers while the odds made them long shots.

It was a cinch Varsity Stadium would be packed to its 19,000 capacity, even come the colder weather that is promised.

While Coach Tedder Morris promised his arch passer Joe Krol would throw the east's share of forwards young Dobler came into town labelled as a forward passer of renown with every indication a duel might develop between King Joe and the man from North Dakota.

Fifteen of the 24 men greying Jack West brought with him have been here before. Inside wing Bill Ceretti played on the 1935 edition of Bombers which took the title home for the first time. The team's schedule called for at least a brief workout today.

Vice President, Pittsburgh Club, Has Left Team

(By The Canadian Press)

Resignation yesterday of Sam Watters as vice-president and treasurer of the Pittsburgh Pirates, removed from the baseball scene one of its real oldtimers. Sam was taken out of a Pittsburg theatre, where he was assistant treasurer, by the late Barney Dreyfuss, in 1907. He worked his way up from a member of the Pittsburgh ticket staff to the vice-presidency, but the job he liked best was that of travelling secretary, where he formed close associations with players and officials around the circuit

Last of the Dreyfuss regime, he saw 11 Pirate managers come and go plus the never ending stream of players.

Willie Pep of Hartford, Conn, at 130 pounds looked sharp in a third round knockout victory over Chalky Wright of Los Angeles at Milwaukee last night. The featherweight champion scored the KO five seconds after the third round was underway. Wright weighed 132 3-4.

In Kalamazoo, Mich., bout last night, Marty Marshall, Detroit light heavyweight, scored the second straight K.O. of a brief pro career over John Hernandez of Mexico City. Marshall went into the ring at 171 and Hernandez at 178.

At New Haven yesterday, Coach Lynn Patrick of the New Haven Ramblers said Jean Paul Denis, forward for New York Rovers of the Eastern United States League, would substitute for Joe Levandoski, against Indianapolis Capitals in an American Hockey League game tonight. Levandoski, from Cobalt, was injured in a practice session.

A report from London yesterday states the British Lawn Tennis Council will seek repeal of an International federation regulation which bars players who are professionals in any other branch of the sport, from competing as amateurs in Tennis

Four U.S. Imports Make All-Eastern Football Squad In First Year in Canada

Wagner, Trawyck, Gnup and Steck Named by Sports Writers

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 28 (CP)—In this first season of the "two-year import plan", the impact of United States invaders on the Canadian football scene was shown today in selection of four from their ranks to first-team status on the 1946 all-eastern squad.

The fact that Canadians captured the other 20 positions on the two teams selected for The Canadian Press by football writers and coaches in eight eastern cities, reaffirmed that some home brews could step with the imported talent, just as the all-Canadian Toronto Argonauts proved on their way to the eastern title. But the value of the Americans in adding color seemed established.

The four all-star status were middles Herb Trawyck of Montreal Alouettes and Hank Christman of Ottawa Rough Riders; Virgil Wegner, Alouettes' high-scoring half, and playing Coach Frank Gnup of Hamilton Wildcats. In all, 17 Americans came north under the Canadian Rugby Union's decision to permit each team five imports for a two-year trial period.

Gnup, Turner From O.R.F.U.

The stocky Gnup was one of two Ontario Union players awarded a first team berth in the vote, weighted to give equal voting strength to each city. The other was Doug Turner, hard-hitting snapback of Toronto Balmy Beach. The remaining 10 positions went to Big Four teams—Three each to Argos, Rough Riders and Alouettes and one to Hamilton Tigers.

Three of the first-team halfline of 1945 were chosen again for their positions—Ken Charlton of Rough Riders and Joe Krol and Royal Copeland, Argonaut gold-dust twins. Outside Dick Groom, only Tiger chosen, was a fourth repeater.

The Intercollegiate Union gained second-team recognition for four players, Rudy Grass of University of Toronto and three members of the University of Western Ontario's undefeated champions—halves Don and Bob McFarlane and outside George Turnbull.

Remainder of the second team was made up of two each from Balmy Beach and Wildcats and one player apiece from Argos, Rough Riders, Toronto Indians and Windsor Rockets.

First team: Flying Wing, Ken Charlton, Riders; Half, Joe Krol, Argos; Half, Royal Copeland, Argos; Half, (secondary) Virgil Wagner, Alouettes; Quarter Frank Gnup, Wildcats; Snap, Doug Turner, Beaches; Inside, Bill Zock, Argos; Inside, Benny Steck, Alouettes; Middle, Herb Trawyck, Alouettes; Middle, Hank Christman, Riders; Outside, Dick Groom, Tigers; Outside, Bert Haigh, Riders.

HORSE AND DOG RACING LIKELY TO BE HIT BY TAX

Dalton Sees New Source of Revenue to Help Balance British Budget

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 28 (CP)—Economist Hugh Dalton is stretching a tentative finger toward the horse and greyhound racing tracks as a source of new revenue to help balance Britain's budget.

As chancellor of the exchequer he is toying with the idea of a tax on betting. If he decides to try one he'll probably apply it in next April's budget.

Winston Churchill tried about 20 years ago but had to admit defeat. The tax ran three years and in its biggest year brought in only £2,669,242 ($10,677,000).

But that was before the totalisator was working at the tracks and football pools, now a multi-million dollar business, were just starting. While Churchill had to get his revenue from the bookies, Dalton has a fair chance to collect without undue trouble.

Britain's betting bill has been estimated at £500,000,000 a year with $240,000,000 changing hands on the dogs, £14,000,000 in shillings, half-crowns and pounds on the football pools and a mere £120,000,000 on the ponies, erstwhile "sport of kings."

Even a five-per-cent tax would yield something like £25,000,000 ($100,000,000)—enough, perhaps to permit some reduction in the country's staggering income tax.

This compares with an estimated $2,188,000 which the Canadian tax on betting yielded during the fiscal year of 1945-46.

Under Churchill's unsuccessful scheme, a standard impost of 3 1-2 per cent was charged on off-course betting and two per cent on the track. The tax should have yielded £6,000,000; actually collections were less than half that much.

About the only contact between government and organized betting is the racecourse betting control board, set up in 1928.

Dog-track managements can take six per cent from the tote to meet expenses. So well have they been doing that their dividends have been at record levels. One London track recently declared a dividend of 225 per cent.

Eye Injury May End Wes Mouzon's Ring Career

Philadelphia, Nov. 28—(AP)—An eye injury may end Wes Mouzon's ring career after his unsuccessful quest for the lightweight title.

Mouzon was knocked out by Bob Montgomery, recognized in New York and Pennsylvania as lightweight king, in the eighth round of their title bout Tuesday night.

Dr. Ralph Lanciano, State Athletic Commission eye specialist, diagnosed the condition as a possible detachment of the retina in the right eye. He required Mouzon to remain in bed for two weeks.

He could not say whether Mouzon will be able to fight again. It may be necessary, he said, to operate on the eye to restore Mouzon's sight.

Meanwhile, the 27-year-old champion, who received $24,802 from the $85,414 gate, said he was hoping he might be permitted to remain out of the ring until the new year.

But the campaign to rematch the Bobcat with Ike Williams, N. B. A. lightweight titlist, already was getting under way. Montgomery knocked out Williams in the 12th round of a previous nin-title bout.

LAST NIGHT'S STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Bill Reay, Montreal, with three goals and an assist as Canadiens laced Detroit Red Wings 6-1.

Leo Gravelle, Montreal, who scored once and assisted twice in the same game.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

One of Belleville's better young athletes dropped in the office out of the figurative blue sky, yesterday. The dark, good-looking youngster, none other than Dick Fitzpatrick, hockey, football and baseball star of this district, is now a full-fledged freshman at Clarkson College of Technology at Potsdam, N.Y.

• • •

College life apparently agrees with Dick, although he has but sipped the top of the university cup. He has the same clean look, the modest manner that approaches the borderline of shyness at times that always characterized him, yet the youngster, faced with one of the more serious challenges of his life has developed a more pronounced sincerity of purpose and a determination that augurs well for his college future of the next four years.

• • •

Dick, with Jerry Moher, another outstanding produce of Belleville sports fields and hockey cushions, is standing on the threshold of an athletic and academic career that has been the goal of many an athletic serious-minded youngster.

Thrust by force of post-war circumstances into the maelstrom of college which formerly housed 300 students but now caters to something like 1,300 (non-coed) the two youngsters are gazing at a new world; one that holds something that should be richly beneficial to both.

• • •

The athletic ability of both boys paved the way to a scholarship at Clarkson Tech. During the next four years, both will go out their in the Green and Gold to "die for dear old Clarkson." But their college life won't be a continuous roar of cheers from crowd-packed stadia hockey arenas, and basketboll courts. After all, there is a serious group of men at the head of things, that comprise the faculty, And they have something to say about the matter.

• • •

Much as they love sport, both Dick and Jerry are serious about their studies. Both are taking general engineering in their freshman year and will specialize when they become sophomores. In the meantime they are learning "how to study" and fitting themselves for the more serious aspect of their life of the immediate future.

• • •

They like the life. They like the college and they like the environment. In the sleepy little town of Potsdam, that in the "educational season" seethes with college activity, they are entering a new era. And they are taking it in their stride. The future looks bright for them and they can be depended upon to take the fullest advantage of what it has to offer from an academic as well as an athletic standpoint.

• • •

Dick and Jerry are "out" for the varsity hockey squad. Dick will go out for baseball and if he can make the American grade will try for the varsity football team next year, although he sighed "Those college football players look awfully big to me."

• • •

Fitz will try for the goalie position on the team but expects to have tough opposition from a freshman from Ottawa. As a matter of fact, he says, the varsity squad will be composed of almost entirely Canadian players with a sprinkling of Yanks. Jerry will go out for a front line position and should make the grade. The team will play intercollegiate games with Toronto, Queens, Dartmouth, Yale, Princeton, and other American college teams.

• • •

Strangely enough the town of Potsdam depends almost entirely on its educational centres for its existence. Besides Clarkson Tech, located downtown, it has the State Teachers College, housing some six hundred pretty potential American school marms and a large high school with its quota of bobby-soxers. Not that Dick and Jerry are romance-minded — but, well — a fella has to have a little relaxation at times.

• • •

Fitz has a full day. He goes to an eight o'clock class three times a week. After the afternoon classroom huddles, he turns out for strenuous workouts with a basketball squad "just to keep in shape, then goes to his room in the Knights of Columbus House near the college, eats, does his homework and then goes to a part-time job from 7:30 to 10:30 which nets him something more than spending money.

• • •

The boys are home for the next day or so due to the American Thanksgiving holiday, and although they like their new life and all its strange attractions, the village nestling on the banks of the Moira "looked mighty good" to them.

• • •

Those Golden Boys of the wrestling ring, the Sharpe Brothers, are as keen as their name for the forthcoming team match against those rough toughies, Olaf Olsen and Strangler Bob Wagner tomorrow night at the Hume Arena. The "Razor's Edge" twins who look alike as a chorine's earrings have been practicing some secret holds that should open the eyes of the faithful. Also Glamor Lad Vic Christie is anxious to turn the tables on the Kruel Krippler, Karl Davis in the second main bout of the card. In the opener, popular Pat Flanagan will attempt to subdue the crafty Al "Krusher" Korman.

ATTENTION INTERMEDIATES

Manager Frank Butler of the Army, Navy, Air Force Intermediate hockey team requests all players past, present and future to report to the Armouries at eight o'clock Friday night where the first physical training of the season will get under way. Wear old pants and sweatshirts and come prepared for a tough preliminary. After that the team will work out in gymnastics and other conditioning exercises at the Armouries every Wednesday and Friday night at 8 until ice is available. It is important that all players report at the Armouries tomorrow night.

HAMILTON PATS TIED FOR SECOND IN SENIOR RACE

Defeat Owen Sound 3-2 While St. Mikes Continue on Winning Ways

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Pats got themselves a piece of second place in the five-team O.H.A. Senior "A" in Hamilton last night but they had to come from behind twice against the Owen Sound Mohawks and only managed to win then a long, lazy shot from rookie Ted Hoyle drifted past the Mohawk goalie to give them a 3-2 victory.

The Pats blew a dozen good scoring chances before Hoyle came through in his debut in a Hamilton uniform. Doug Gillespie had rocked them on their heels with the only first-period goal and it took them until near the end of the second frame to even things up.

Then Pollock put the Mohawks in front for the second time early in the third stanza, only to have Pats tie it up less than a minute later with Grasser the pay-off man on a three-man passing play. Hoyle's clincher came five minutes later.

Toronto St. Michael's College won their 10th straight and Stratford Kroehlers took undisputed possession of second place behind the Irish as a result of the two junior games played.

The Irish had little trouble with Oshawa Generals at Maple Leaf Gardens, defeating Generals by a score of 8-3 in a game more notable for the players' supreme disregard for the recent O.H.A. edict against rough play than for any excitement in the play itself.

20 Penalties Handed Out

A total of 20 penalties were meted out, including majors to Eric Pogue and Bobby Lowe of the Generals in a melee that saw five men parked in the box during the third period.

Fleming McKell the league's leading scorer, added two goals to his total to lead the Irish attack. Ed Sandford, Ed Harrison, Benny Woit, Rudy Ceresino, Eric Pogue and Blair were the Oshawa scorers.

The scoring was even more lop-sided in Stratford where the Kroelers gained ample revenge for an earlier 6-5 defeat in Hamilton by trouncing the Szabos 14-2. There were few potential Lady Byng trophy winners in evidence with 18 penalties being awarded.

Nick Mickoski, Mickey Roth and Billy Flick had three goals apiece in the rout. Kullman and Wharton got two and Casonato had a singleton. Davidson and Barnes notched the Hamilton counters.

RELEASED FROM PRISON

Boston, Nov. 28 — (AP) — Barnett Welansky, owner of the Coconut Grove nightclub where nearly 500 persons perished in a holocause in 1942, was freed from prison last night—told by doctors that he had less than nine months to live.

Governor Maurice J. Tobin pardoned the 50-year-old former nightclub owner who served little more than three years of a 12-to-15 year sentence for manslaughter charges growing out of the fire.

Edmonton, Nov. 28—(CP)—It's beginning to look like Edmonton, perennial ruler of Alberta junior hockey circles, may have to stage a grim battle to retain its laurels this season. Both Calgary, Lethbridge and Drumheller are icing potent clubs in an attempt to wrest the junior crown from the capital city.

Lethbridge Native Sons startled Memorial Cup hopefuls throughout Western Canada early this season as they uncovered a sizzling power attack in a series of exhibition contests on their home ice to rout some of the strongest junior sextets in the west.

Edmonton Canadians, western finalists last year, came off on the short end of a 4-3 score, then Lethbridge chalked up a win and tie against the Saskatchewan champions, Moose Jaw Canucks, and finished off by walloping Notre Dame Hounds from Wilcox, Sask., in two successive tilts.

Calgary Buffaloes, who will play in a Southern Alberta junior circuit with Lethbridge and Drumheller, are flashing a lineup of nine players good enough to attract the attention of National Hockey League clubs.

Detroit Red Wings have strings on defencemen Hube Lundmark and Coal Oughton and forwards Bob Hunt and Bruce McDonald, while Chicago Black Hawks have spoken for goalie Stew Henry, defenceman Al Purvis and forwards Bob Rutter, Ernie Kline and Ed Ingleson.

Buffalo coach Timmins is having a little trouble straightening out the "Bob's" trying to catch a place on his Calgary junior club. He has five of them — Bob Hunt, Bob Rutter, Bob Carlson, Bob Appleton and Bob Schmied.

Edmonton Flyers are claiming something of a record in western puck circles this season with almost a complete lineup of home-brew talent developed in the city's junior ranks. Bob Solinger of Prince Albert, Sask., is the only player who didn't learn most of his hockey in Alberta's capital city.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

A credible reason is always in season. You have read here that a takeout is forcing for one round when an assist is not. No doubt you know why. But many new readers would like to be told.

The order of choice of bids is T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. Just because I say so does not make it so. There must be proof. If some other would be better, this would not be a good enough rule.

A takeout refers to a bid in some suit not named by partner. It must be in a suit that is at least biddable. Such a suit is offered as a possible trump selection by the pair.

The purpose of having a takeout as first choice seems apparent. Partners must be given opportunities to show all the suits they can. This enables them to decide on their best available final trump suit.

So, a takeout is first choice until all possible suits are aired as candidates for trump. And while a player takes out, he may have an assist. He is entitled to a chance for showing his assists.

On the other hand, suppose he assists at once without making a takeout. He has thus refused to select the first choice. He denies having a takeout suit. So, he needs no chance to show one.

Times are when information about all suits may be dispensed with. But no pair knows in advance which deals they are. And even then they can takeout and still end in their desired suit.

South opens with a heart when north has this hand:

♠A J 9 3
♥K J 8 4
♦Q 6 2
♣7 4

North should takeout to one spade. The heart assist looks good. But the takeout forces south to bid again. Any bid next made by him will permit north to show his heart support.

If north first assisted to two hearts, south may never learn of the north biddable spade suit. Who is there to say it is advice that south may not heed? Don't all speak at once.

BURNED FINGERS

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 8

Radio music poured through the place intermittently, records were also played, and occasional dancing took place in the parlors and the halls. Meanwhile a long table and several square small tables were being embellished in the dining room; they had long been laid with forks and knives, glassware and china; now olives and nuts and candy were added, plates of round butterballs, water glasses filled, pitchers of milk and bowls of cube sugar set handily about. Presently a general stir of announcement went about from group to group, big Joe Evans, who had been dancing, released Jennifer's pink ruffles from his arms, and everyone went into the dining room.

By no means was every member of the company young. Several quite elderly persons had arrived: two shriveled little old ladies in black with cameo pins and shoulder shawls, one magnificent old man some six feet four in height with a lion's mane of silver hair, tow or three stout, middle-aged matrons and their husbands, all of these addressed by everyone as "Uncle" or "Aunt."

Jennifer was the only stranger. Between all the others a relationship of deep affection and familiarity existed; they knew each other's jokes and weaknesses likes and dislikes; the long table was in a constant uproar of laughter and shouting, and girls and boys relegated to the side tables were constantly coming over to squeeze themselves in among their seniors. There was a tremendous amount of food; Jennifer, accustomed to the limitations of Betty's table, was deeply impressed, but then she had been dazzled and impressed by the whole scene from the moment of her arrival.

Beside the platters of cold beef and tongue there was an immense chicken pie baked in a milk pan, and an enormous ham studded with cloves and shining with crisped brown sugar. There were mountains of fried potatoes, hot biscuits, a bowl of milky canned sweet corn, another of stewed tomatoes, scalloped cauliflower bubbling and brown under a cheese blanket, a very regiment of layer cakes—most of the women visitors having brought one at least—white and pink ice cream, and five separate drinks: tea, coffee, beer, milk, hot chocolate. Sticky glasses multiplied beside every plate; the short-stemmed roses Mollie had arranged as a centerpiece fell over with their heads on the table and their stems in the air; the white tablecloth was rumpled and spotted and strewn with crumbs. Young hands moved the candlesticks about; chairs were jerked to all angles; boys, flushed with food and drink, leaned elbows on the table and became earnest and incoherent in confidences to the young girls nearest them.

Suddenly Michael Evans rose to his feet, and it was to be seen that his daughter Mollie was standing within the circle of his big left arm. Mollie's face was all roses as her father, knocking on his beer glass with the handle of his knife, imposed silence upon the company.

"As you know," said the man of the house in a loud clear voice that was evidently employing its own reasonnances to the mull, "this middle girl of mine has had her eye on a young man for lo, these many years. Their plans were disrupted temporarily by the death of that same young man's father two years gone now, God rest his soul!"

"Amen!" said all the older men and women solemnly.

"However, having settled his father's affairs, he is now free," the speaker continued in relished and well-rounded phrases, "to turn to his own happiness. The heart of that happiness, I learn to me extreme surprise, is Mary Victoria Stella Evans. You'll all understand why I fell unconscious from the shock upon hearing this truly edifying bit of information. She's been a good daughter; she'll make a good wife, will Mollie. 'Twas against my advice but now without my permission that she took a job a year ago—just why I don't know, for her mother tells me it's her and I will pay all the bills for the trousseau. Maybe Mollie expects to support her young man in the manner to which he has been accustomed; that I couldn't tell you. But anyway, I give you them both, and anyone who doesn't stand to drink to them I'll dress down seself so that he'll stand for some time to come. I give you the two of them, Mollie and Daniel Francis Moore, God bless them!"

The speech, brief as it was, had been interrupted a dozen times by uproarious laughter, cheers, anticipatory comment. Now the blessing was echoed on all sides as in a general shouting and upsetting of chairs the company rose and the cries of "Good by, Dan" and "Good luck, Mollie darling!" echoed back from the ceiling and walls.

Her arm drawn through his, Mollie's father escorted her about the table to the spot where the beaming Dan stood beside her mother. Mrs. Evans closed her stout arms about Mollie and wept a little on her shoulders; Dan met his prospective father-in-law's "Take her, my boy," with a fernventt "Thank you, sir; I'll try to be worthy of her!" and, led off by the older man's frank wiping of his eyes and blowing of his nose, there was general weeping, kissing, and laughter for several minutes.

* * *

By this time the rooms were very hot. Jennifer, dancing incessantly and being handed from one pair of strong young muscular arms to another, was glad when there were brief intervals when she and her partner, whoever he might be, found themselves out on the broad balcony reached from the parlor's french windows that hung high above the city.

Below this balcony the ground fell away so precipitously that nothing of the hill immediately below it could be seen at all. Standing there, breathing hard and fanned by the vagrant little night breeze from the bay, Jennifer could see the slopes and hills and valleys of the city, the corona of lights that circled the dark bay and the warm, indeterminate glow that was Market Street, slanting through the other lights. Above it all was spread the winter night of stars, glowing and throbbing in the velvet blackness.

"How old did you think I was?" asked Eugene Evans.

"How'd you knw I thought you were—just a kid about?" Jennifer countered, her hands deep in the pockets of his big coat, its warmth about her. He had gone to get it before they came out of doors, warning her that she was too warm from dancing to risk the cold night air.

"Oh, you called Joe 'Mr. Evans' and started right in on 'Eugene' with me. And you told me that your stepmother had two little girls, seven and six, as if I might be more or less contemporaneous!"

"Well, I didn't think you were that young!" Jennifer countered, laughing and a little confused; "but I thought you might be—oh, eighteen or nineteen maybe."

"I'm twenty-eight. I'm older than Mollie. I passed my bar exams this year and go in with my uncle Cody next montht."

"Oh!" Jennifer's eyes moved obliquely to his; he caught their glitter in the dappled lights that streamed out from the parlor. "So you want me to call you 'Mr. Evans', is that it?" she queried.

"That is not it. Remember that I majored in philosophy; you'll get the worst of it if you try any sophistry on me," Eugene said. He was short and slight, had fair hair, light eyelashes, and cheeks as smooth as those of a girl, but there was authority in his pleasant, deep voice, and she had noticed a certain respect for him evidenced by his family and friends.

"I'll not try any sophistry, for I haven't the slightest idea of what it is," Jennifer promised him meekly.

"That's a good girl. Not cold now?" He took one of her hands in his.

"No. Not in this warm coat. What is sophistry?" Jennifer asked.

"True statements to prove lies," Eugene said with a little laugh; "or at least that's near enough."

"Is philosophy terribly hard to study, Mr. Evans?"

"If you're talking to my father or to my brother Joe, they're out of hearing. If it's to me you're speaking there are ways of shutting that pretty mouth of yours that might surprise you," observed Eugene dispassionately. Jennifer laughed joyfully.

"Why did you study philosophy, Eugene? I thought it was just something—something that meant when you — well, you couldn't bear a thing it helped you to bear it," Jennifer floundered.

"It does that too. But more than that. It helped me to see that if ever this old world is to get out of its darkness it has to have superterrestrial help—it has to have an attitude of mind and soul on the part of us—us human beings. We have to see the one essential thing."

Her round eyes were fixed upon his expectantly; he lightly touched the tip of her chin and laughed apologetically, as if a little startled at realizing that he had been betrayed by his own interest into a conversation too deep for her.

"What darkness?" she asked. "Not—another war?"

"Nothing so immediate. Darkness that has lasted for centuries, Jennifer. Darkness coming down from father to son. The little mistake, the little vanity, swelling in the next generation, turning into a bigger mistake, a more fatal vanity . . ."

"You mean," she asked as he paused, "you mean we're all wrong, all of us, just stumbling on and on into worse and worse things?"

"Exactly! Somebody hundreds of years ago got off the track. We had the answer, you know — we were shown the way."

"What answer?"

"The Sermon on the Mount," he said simply.

"Oh." She recognized a familiar phrase but she had no idea what the Sermon on the Mount was. There was a moment's silence. "So what is the one thing you said we had to see, Eugene?" she asked. "Is it so—so philosophical that I couldn't understand it?"

"You have some endearing traits," Eugene stated briefly. "No," he added after a moment, "it isn't hard to understand. It's hard to do. It's simply to be good."

"And what?"

"Nothing more. Just that. To be good. Everyone's got to be good. Humble. Truthful. Helping his neighbor. Not cheating, not wanting more than the plainest, fewest things. Everyone." He was talking as if to himself now and looking off toward the stars that shone above Berkeley's looped bracelet of lights.

"But . . . you mean everyone? How could you do that? I mean—Chinamen in China and bandits in Italy and black people in the jungles," Jennifer began, feeling for words. "How could you make them all be—just good?"

"You couldn't make them be anything. It would have to come from themselves — inside themselves," he said.

"But, Eugene," she warned him, childishly grave, "they will never all be good."

"No," he agreed, "but all the more reason for everyone who can to be good, to be better. To tell the truth—even at the telephone," he went on with a little sly look and laugh. "To forgive. To make one's own life perfect, and hope to hand that perfection on to new lives; just one little nucleus in this hot bad world but presently to join others — to spread. Mustard seed."

"Mustard seed!" Jennifer ejaculated, amazed into involuntary speech.

"How well do you know the Evangelists?" he asked.

"I don't know them at all. They aren't those colored people who sing Wednesday nights at the hall at our corner?"

"No, they are not." Eugene laughed deep within himself, and she sensed the laughter under his voice when he spoke again. "Tell me about yourself. What church were you raised in, that you don't know the Evangelists?"

"No church at all. And you'd think that bad?" Jennifer surmised anxiously.

"I don't know that I would dare to call anything bad," the man answered slowly. "It would depend upon intention, responsibility, so many things that probably would have nothing to do with you. But I feel sorry for anyone who hasn't had the personal experience of—of finding God." He added the last words hurriedly, in a low tone. Immediately his manner changed. "This is queer talk to go on with a girl as sweet as you are, ot one of my mother's rumpuses," he said. "You're wanting to dance again, and I don't dance. I took you away from Joe because I was afraid you'd get a cold out here so soon after dancing. I—I want to say to you—this is a very strange thing for me to say. . . ." He stopped short, and Jennifer looked at him in surprise without speaking. "You will misunderstand me," Eugene went on almost angrily. "I was watching you through dinner, I admit it. But not as you think. There is nothing carnal in what I felt—and feel. This is no declaration of passion, no matter what you make of it. No such thought ever crossed my mind. Believe me."

"I—I wouldn't think it had! I do believe you," Jennifer stammered, stupefied by his quick rush of words and his harsh manner.

"This," he went on swiftly and breathlessly, "is not one more scalp—one more triumph for you to count up as girls count these things!" And he gave a scornful laugh.

"How could you think that I would ever think so!" she said, quickly, roused now in her turn. "How can you say such things! Why, I only met you tonight!"

"This is the first time I have ever realized," Eugene went on, "what a man feels when he—when he desires a woman in marriage. I don't mean myself! I am speaking for other men. I can see what they feel—what they experience. . . . We'll go back."

The last words were said abruptly and with a movement as abrupt he led her back to the parlor. Jennifer was completely bewildered; she looked for him as her dance partners whirled her this way and that; she did not see him again that evening.

But his words remained with her; he had been telling her he liked her whether he knew it or not. It was flattering, it was pleasant to have anyone as good as Eugene select her for his attentions, awkward and apparently reluctant as he had been in paying them. Eugene was good; he wanted everyone to be good.

Mollie came late to her room; Ellen Flowers and Jennifer had taken possession of the couch and bed respectively when she finally joined them. Dan had lingered after the other guests, stealing a magic half hour with his promised wife in the disordered parlor when everyone else was gone.

Interlocking System Operating To Find 8,000 Older Veterans Of Two Great Wars a Job

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 28. (CP)—In March, 1946, thousands of veterans of two great wars were seemingly trapped in an economic wilderness because of their age. Many could find no work because they were 45 or 50 years of age or older.

Six months later, 8,000 of them had jobs. Six months from now, the chances are that total will be considerably larger.

There is a story here, already a story worth telling.

Briefly, it may be said that those 8,000 men were put to work because an interlocked system is operating now to find them work.

The Department of Veterans' Affairs tackled the problem last Spring when it was confronted, first, by the swollen and swelling numbers of unemployed older veterans and, second, by the seemingly deep inclination on the part of employers to hire youth for any job and every job.

Slashes Swollen Statistics

A thrice-wounded, twice-decorated First Great War infantryman, a full-fledged colonel in the Second Great War, Percy J. Philpott, O.B.E., M.C., D.C.M., of Saskatoon and Montreal, was given the job. Basically, his job was to slash those swollen statistics.

A wartime survey indicated that roughly 48,000 veterans of the First Great War served again in the Second, 18,000 of them in the Veterans' Guard. Of that total roughly 50 per cent were due for employment difficulties on discharge.

In March, more than 12,000 older veterans were registered as out of work and within the next six months the Veterans' Guard discharged another 3,000 men.

Col. Philpott based his argument on simple logic:

Canada must either put these men to work or pension them off at a cost of millions of dollars a year. The problem for the employer was either to hire them or keep them by paying heavier taxes.

Act As Messengers

He argued, too, that there is no reason why men over 45 can't be bank messengers, doormen, elevator operators, chauffeurs, guards, hall porters, janitors, store detectives.

The Federal government was tackled as the first major objective.

In August, the Treasury Board authorized government departments to enter into contracts with the Canadian Corps of Commissionaires to fill such positions as those mentioned, outside the provisions of the Civil Service. In consequence, the uniformed commissionaries have taken over the job of guarding 35 public buildings in Ottawa, replacing the R.C.M.P., have become chauffeurs at naval headquarters, guards elsewhere.

One of the corps' chief arguments is that it contracts for the job itself and solves the employer's problem of selection of a man. When one commissionaire leaves the particular job, another takes over. In six months its list of employees has jumped from 1,200 to 6,000 and it is gunning for 10,000.

In Toronto recently, within half an hour, R. W. Barton, veterans employment adviser of the National Employment service convinced a bank it should hire six older veterans rather than girls to act as messengers, and then got another six of these veterans jobs as car park attendants.

Oragnizations Co-operate

In Montreal, three organizations are co-operating. They are the Montreal Employers Council, the Senior Citizens Association of Canada and the 40 Plus Club. They are all interested in the same objective and are stressing the problems of the white collar class.

The 40 plus club was launched by W. E. Paxton once a man obtains a job through the club, he joins it himself and tries to help others.

One of the obstacles to the success of the overall plan is the fact that in some cases it means that a young veteran is put out of work.

Here, too, Col. Philpott's answer is blunt and simple: Young veterans shouldn't be in such dead end jobs or eventually they, too, will become economically insolvent in their old age. He argued that the state has established broad facilities to train and rehabilitate those men and that such jobs cannot be construed as effective rehabilitation.

White's District

White's District.—The sympathy of the community is extended to Mr. J. Megginson in the loss of his sister, Mrs. H. McCutcheon, who passed away in Stirling, on Sunday afternoon in her 82nd year.

The men and ladies of the community are very busy making preparations for the New England Style dinner at White's Church on Wednesday evening.

On Wednesday afternoon, the children of Bayside and Quinte View schools were treated to a picture of Robinson Crusoe through kindness of Inspector R. H. Macklem.

Sunday School was held on Sunday morning at White's Church with church service in the evening conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. C. McCallum.

A few of the farmers in this community are still busy with Fall ploughing. The wintry weekend has given way to milder weather and this is much appreciated by the busy farmers.

The children of the community are beginning their practice for Christmas entertainments and the smaller children especially are looking forward to the visit of Old Saint Nicholas with keen anticipation.

W. A. Quilting

Mrs. George Bilham opened her home on Thursday for a quilting for White's W.A. The ladies took their lunches and tea was served by the hostess. Following refreshments the President, Mrs. W. Jones, presided for the meeting. Plans were made for the dinner at White's church. Mrs. George Clapp offered her home for the annual meeting in December.

CHRYSLER PRODUCTS UP

Detroit, Nov. 28 — (AP)—Price increases ranging from $8 to $104 in Plymouth, Dodge, Desoto and Chrysler automobiles were announced Tuesday by Chrysler Corporation. The increases generally were in line with others announced in recent weeks by leading manufacturers.

Little Benny's Note Book

There wasn't any noise at breakfist except the sounds of talking and eating, on account of the radio having stopped werking, and pop was drinking his coffee and eating his soft boiled egg and ma said, It seems terribly strange, William.

Oh, really I thought it seemed unusually fresh, pop said.

Meening the egg, and ma said, I mean this breakfist room radio being out of order. We cant even listen to the 8 o'clock news. It seems as if we were shut up on some desert island cut off from the whole outside werld, she said.

The morning paper is here as usual, pop said, and ma said I know, but who can you compare lifeless headlines to the sound of Roy Prescott's familiar voice?

I can compare them very favorbly, personly, pop said, and ma said, The Fluffed Oatsies Breakfist Club program is going full blast, with music and jollity and loud laffter, but we cant even hear a whisper of it. t's hard to imagine, she said.

It's easy to take, pop said, and ma said, In half an hour the Cutting Family will be on, and millions of impatient listeners will find out whether Mrs. Cutting had the courage to tell Gloria that she is not her rightful dawter, while I'll still be in the dark no wiser than before. Really, William, I mean really, it's like living on another planet when the radio suddenly goes out of your life. And yet I must admit there's a certain strange blissful feeling of quiet calm in the experience, she said.

Now you're talking, pop said. Do you mean you wont bother having it fixed for a while? he said, and ma said, Why William, such a suggestion, are you out of your mind?

No, Just practically out of the house, pop said.

And he folded his paper and left for his office.

LEWIS TO STAND TRIAL ON CONTEMPT CHARGES

Lama Threatened To Kill Wife, Says Son at Hearing

Evidence Tells of Constant Arguing for About 5 Years

Lama, 49-year-old farmer, is charged with the murder of his wife Mary Jane Lama, 39, with a pig-sticking knife at her home at nearby Harrison's Corners last Aug. 16. He is also charged with murdering his nine - year - old daughter, Mary Elizabeth, on the same day.

Frederick Lama was the second witness heard as the preliminary hearing of the man who eluded a police hunt for 71 days got under way before a capacity crowd of 200 spectators.

Lama's alleged threat was said to have taken place three or four days before Mrs. Lama, her two sons and her daughter left the Hall farm, on Windfall Road, where they were living with the accused man, and returned to their tin-covered home a few miles away.

'Did Not Get Along Very Good'

Frederick Lama testified that his father and mother "did not get along very good," and said they had been having constant arguments for about five years. Witness testified that he didn't get on with his father either.

He said "Dad put me out" in September, 1945. He went to work in Ottawa, and when he returned his family had moved from their Harrison's Corners home to the farm on Windfall Road. He came back in June, 1946.

He testified that shortly after his return his father and mother got into further quarrels, and his mother said if his father "kept on the way he was, she was going to leave."

The witness swore that he had heard his father threaten to kill his mother "several times."

After his mother, his sister, brother and himself had returned to the Harrison's Corners home, Frederick Lama testified he saw his father about once a month. The last time was three or four days before the killings, he said. The accused came to the farm to get some wagon parts, and there had been further arguments, during which Mrs. Lama had said that if her husband didn't get off the property, she would put him off.

Frederick Lama swore he had left his home about seven o'clock on the morning of Aug. 16, and had gone with his brother to cut cedar on a farm about two miles away. They had remained there all day, he testified, and quit to come home about 4.45 o'clock.

Finding of Mother's Body

When he got there, he found his mother's body in the front yard of the home.

Frederick Lama was the second witness to be called. The first was Leonard Stidwell, civil engineer, who identified a plan he had drawn of the murder scene.

Special Crown Prosecutor is C. P. Hope, K.C. of Toronto. Defence counsel is John S. Latchford, of Cornwall. The case is being heard before Magistrate P. C. Bergeron.

Lama entered the court with a township police constable. He was wearing the same wine-colored windbreaker and blue work trousers he wore when captured Oct. 26. He followed the evidence closely, from time to time leaning over to whisper to his counsel or to pore over the engineer's map spread out in front of him.

He had shaved off the heavy moustache he sported at the time of his capture.

Georges Bidault Resigns Office

Paris, Nov. 28. (CP)—Georges Bidault, head of the Mouvement Republicain Populaire, resigned today as chief of the French Interim Government in a constitutional step to pave the way for formation of a new cabinet.

The only announced candidate for his post is Maurice Thorez, Communist leader, who is opposed by the M.R.P., the Radical Socialists and the P.R.I. (Party of Republican Liberty.) None of these has put forth a candidate of its own.

M. Bidault's move came after Socialist Leader Leon Blum challenged the Communist Party's bid for leadership.

In an open letter to the newspaper Le Populaire, M. Blum asserted that no party has the right to demand the premiership "just because it happens to be the largest party." The Communists, he said, had only the right to demand the premiership "just because it happens to be the largest party." The Communists, he said, had only the right to take the initiative in negotiations for formation of the new government.

All-Out Production Unhampered by Strikes Will be Recommended

Brantford, Nov. 29 (CP) — George Burt of Windsor, Ont., Canadian Director of the United Automobile Workers of America, (C.I.O.), said today in an interview that he was prepared to recommend to the union district council meeting in Toronto Dec. 14 and 15 a policy of all-out production unhampered by strikes.

Collapse of price control machinery in the United States already had wiped out union wage gains there and the C.I.O. had started a second round of wage demands, he said.

"We in Canada should fight to retain the wage concession we have already won and should at the same time try to hold prices down instead of starting a second round of wage negotiations with the possibility of more strikes."

He said he thought his union should direct its policy toward full production as another means of keeping prices under control.

"I think not only the public but also the unions and the companies are tired of strikes," he said. "I am not saying there will not be any more strikes, but I do say there should be none until we get into full production."

Veteran Seeks Police Aid to Serve Order Restraining Child's Removal

Hamilton, Nov. 29 — (CP)—A bewildered war veteran—Ellison Guinter, 40, — returned to his job today wondering what his next move would be. He holds a court order, believed first of its kind in Canada, restraining his war bride and her mother from taking her three-year-old child back to England.

After obtaining the court order yesterday, Guinter sought the aid of police and United States immigration authorities to serve it on his 30-year-old wife, formerly Dorothy Fox of Morden, Surrey, Eng.

However, Guinter said he learned from a reliable source that she may have sailed from either Halifax or New York today.

Referring to the possible sailing, William Schreiber, Guinter's solicitor said: "If that's the case there is nothing we can do about it. The court order was good only in Ontario."

"It's all mother-in-law trouble" said the war veteran who was invalided home in 1944. "We were getting along fine until my wife's mother arrived from England last June. Then came a strike where I worked. I was on picket duty and they were not satisfied when I brought home picket welfare vouchers.

"I went out of town for a couple of days to try and find extra work to help out. When I returned I was charged with desertion."

A welfare worker, Jean McTaggart, said today that Guinter was served with a summons sworn out by his wife but that it was dismissed in court.

First intimation that Guinter received of his wife's departure was yesterday when a neighbor telephoned him at work to tell him a coal truck with the name covered was hauling articles away from his home.

PALESTINE COURT REJECTS ACTION FOR IMMIGRANTS

Rules Against Effort To Stop Deportation Of Some 4,000 Jewish Refugees to Cyprus

By CARTER L. DAVIDSON

Jerusalem, Nov. 29—(AP)—The Palestine government's high court rejected today an attempt to prevent deportation of nearly 4,000 uncertified Jewish immigrants to Cyprus, and it was announced officially that three British troopships would leave immediately with the refugees.

Speculation arose that the court decision might cause underground violence, dormant for 10 days, to flare anew. A Jewish agency spokesman, denouncing the ruling as "legal absolutism," said it had caused rising tension in Palestine.

The Jewish Community Council in Jerusalem appealed to Jews to keep three minutes of silence at 3 p.m., halting all business and traffic, in sympathy with the deportees.

Jerusalem, Nov. 29. (AP)—The Palestine Government's High Court ruled today against an effort to prevent deportation to Cyprus of nearly 4,000 Jewish refugees, and speculation promptly arose that the ruling might provoke a renewal of underground violence, dormant for 10 days.

The court discharged a habeas corpus writ granted Monday to Jewish lawyers, who had filed an action demanding that the Palestine government show cause why the refugees should be deported.

The Jews arrived off Palestine without immigration certificates, aboard the rickety freighter Lochita. Two of them were killed in an hours riot at Haifa Jetty Monday incidental to their transfer to three British ships, which since have been cruising in territorial waters. These ships now are expected to take the refugees to Cyprus, where 6,000 passengers of five previous refugee ships are detained.

May Cause Uprising

Usually moderate Jewish sources said todays ruling, while "perfectly legal," might couse extremist elements of Irgun Zvai Leumi and the so-called stern gang to "take matters into their own hands again."

They pointed out that a truce in underground operations had been apparent for the last 10 days but added that new deportations "could provide a spark that will set the terror off again." Jewish lawyer who filed the habeas corpus plea, said he contemplated no further legal action in Palestine now "because it is useless." He could not say whether the case might go to the Privy Council in London.

No Illegal Intention

The court's decision, read by Chief Justice Sir William Fitzgerald ,said the Jewish attorneys who filed the petition failed to prove that detention of the refugees on the ships was illegal or that there was any illegal intention on the part of the Palestine Government to detain them on Cyprus.

Australia Demands Controls, Inspection Be Not Subject to Veto

By LARRY HAUCK

Lake Success, N.Y., Nov. 29 — (AP)—Australia today challenged Russia's arms-reduction proposal with a demand for assurance that any system of United Nations controls and inspection would not be subject to veto by the Soviet and the other great powers.

Delegate Norman J. O. Makin, leading off the reaction to Foreign Minister Molotov's surprise agreement to international inspections, warned the 54-member political committee that under present wording "the whole system of control could be made subject to the will of any permanent member of the Security Council." The permanent members are the United States, Britain, Russia, France and China.

Mr. Makin made it clear that this condition also would have to cover any broader arms- reduction program.

Makin Asks Explanation

Mr. Makin repeatedly asked Mr. Molotov for a clear explanation of the Russian proposal and cautioned that no steps should be taken to sidetrack or abolish the U.N. Atomic Energy Commission now working on how to control the bomb.

"Any proposal to abandon the work of the commission must be guarded against," he said.

Commenting on Mr. Molotov's suggestion for setting up of control commissions on arms and atom bombs under the Security Council. Mr. Makin said the system could well function under the assembly instead.

Denmark, Norway and Belgium quickly endorsed the principle of arms reduction. Denmark declared the Soviet initiative might prove to be the foundation stone of coming international agreement.

Britain's views were made clear yesterday by Sir Hartley Shawcross who declared the proposed system of controls and inspections. "must not be affected by any veto." It appeared from

REPORT FIGHTING BREAKS OUT ANEW IN INDONESIA

Dutch Army Spokesman Declares No Truth in Indonesian Reports

By STANLEY SWINTON

Batavia, Java, Nov. 29 (AP)—Britain fulfilled today her pledge to withdraw all occupation forces from Indonesia before Nov. 30, even while new fighting was reported to have broken out between Dutch forces and Indonesian Republican troops.

The last British and Indian soldiers of an army which once numbered 92,000 sailed this afternoon from Batsvia and Padang, Sumatra.

The occupation, which began when a naval party landed Sept. 15, 1945, cost Britain 600 killed, 1,320 wounded, 320 missing and 600 deserters. The troops disarmed and repatriated 270,000 Japanese and evacuated 110,000 Allied prisoners of war, internees and displaced persons.

Lt.-Gen. Siem Spoor, Dutch Commander-in-Chief, said the military situation in the islands was "steadily deteriorating."

The Indonesion information ministry said hostilities, begun yesterday, were under way on all fronts and threatened to become large scale. Dutch tanks are moving toward Bekassi, 15 miles southeast of here, the announcement said, and the army of the Indonesian republic has cancelled all leaves.

The clashes were reported to have been touched off by Indonesian refusal to accept a Dutch army ruling allowing no Republican soldiers within two kilometers (about one and a quarter miles) of Allied perimeters.

Normal Number of Minor Clashes.

A Dutch army spokesman, however, said that while the military situation in Java had gradually been deteriorating in the last two months there was no truth in the Indonesian reports that fighting had broken out on all fronts.

He said only the normal number of minor clashes had been reported in the last 24 hours and flatly denied the reports of fighting at Bekassi. He quoted a naval spokesman as denying Republican reports there had been an amphibious landing west of Batavia harbor.

The Indonesian information ministry, formally withdrew its earlier official statement that the Dutch had made an amphibious landing but affirmed its earlier report that small scale clashes had broken out along many Javanese perimeters and that Republican army leaves had been cancelled.

Ready to Submit Independence Agreement.

The reported renewal of hostilities came as The Hague government was preparing to submit the independence agreement for parliamentary agreement.

This agreement, announced Nov. 12 and initialed three days later, recognizes the republic's de facto authority over Java, Sumatra and Madoera and calls for establishment by Jan. 1, 1949, of a United States of Indonesia and a Dutch-Indonesian union for joint handling of foreign relations, defence and, "as far as necessary," finance.

HAROLD R. SCOTT NEW MINSTER OF LANDS, FORESTS

Peterborough Member of Legislature Replaces W. G. Thompson, Who Resigns

Toronto, Nov. 29. (CP)—Harold R. Scott, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario Legislature for Peterborough since 1943 is the new provincial minister of Lands and Forests—succeeding Hon. W. G. Thompson who remains in the House as private member for Kent East.

The resignation of Mr. Thompson, and swearing in of his successor, took place at a full cabinet meeting yesterday presided over by Premier Drew. Premier Drew announced that Mr. Thompson, one of the original members of the Drew Cabinet, was resigning because of "pressing business reasons," and added tribute to the expansion of the department since Mr. Thompson took it.

"As a result of his foresight and co-operation," said Premier Drew of the retiring minister, "there are at present under construction throughout Northern Ontario new forest product industries to a value of nearly $75,000,000. Together with existing mills these represent the basis of a solid period of expansion for which Mr. Thompson will always be entitled to a very large share of the credit."

Widespread reorganization of the Lands and Forests Department was carried out under Mr. Thompson's ministry, including assumption of the formerly separate department of Game and Fisheries. Mr. Thompson, a resident of Blenheim, has an extensive grain business in Southwestern Ontario.

The new minister, Mr. Scott, had been mentioned in Queen's Park circles as a likely Cabinet appointee in connection with the department of Travel and Publicity but that post, on its creation several months ago, was taken by Hon. Arthur Welsh.

Mr. Scott is president of a lumber company and has extensive knowledge of the lumber industry. A native of Shawbridge, Que., he served in the First Great War with the Forestry Corps, rising to rank of lieutenant. Now, at the age of 52, he retains rank of captain with the Peterborough Rangers. He is a trustee of the Canadian Legion Branch in Peterborough.

Later, Mr. Thompson said in a statement that during his term of office he had "enjoyed the utmost co-operation and support from the Prime Minister and my colleagues."

He added:

"I will always have pleasant memories of our associations together and wish the government continued success. I feel the prime minister is to be congratulated on his selection of Mr. Harold Scott of Peterboro as the new minister . . ."

Toronto, Nov. 29 — (CP) — Police Thursday arrested two men in suburban Leaside and charged them with theft of a half-ton of nails from a construction company.

SOVIET TROOPS MOVE ABOUT IN OCCUPATION ZONE

Movements So Great Transport Facilities Of Zone Are Taxed To Capacity

Berlin, Nov. 29 (AP)—Official United States and informed German sources here said today that Soviet troops are engaged in large-scale redeployment movements in the Russian occupation zone of Germany.

Maj.-Gen. Frank A. Keating, Acting American Deputy Military Governor, said Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, Russian Commanderin-Chief in Germany, had informed American commanders the troop movements were of such a scale as to utilize most of the Soviet zone's transport facilities.

There was no authoritative information available on the number of Russian troops involved in the movement.

"We believe that the Russians are moving some of their troops back to Russia as Marshal Sokolovsky informed Gen. Joseph T. McNarney," Gen Keating said.

A German correspondent recently returned from Thuringia said the Soviet troop movement there was "something terrific."

No Information

"However," he added, "the Russians haven't announced anything officially so nobody knows just what the new disposition will be."

There was no authoritative information here on whether Russian redeployment or demobilization of any considerable extent was occurring in territories east of Germany.

However, some Russian-controlled newspapers here today ran on their front pages a Soviet Agency Dispatch from Belgrade, reporting that Premier Marshal Tito had ordered a sizeable demobilization of Yugoslav forces.

Most American sources were inclined to associate reports of Soviet withdrawals with political developments in the Russian zone.

Split in Five States.

Berlin, Nov. 29 —(AP)— A spokesman of the German central administration of the Russian occupation zone said today the Soviet zone of Germany was being split into five states with separate provincial governments for each.

The policy of splitting the Russian zone into states, each with a government, represents a sharp change in Soviet policy for Germany and was interpreted in some quarters as indicating Moscow had swung over to the western view that Germany should have a government on "federal-state" lines instead of a strong central administration.

Until now the Russians have strongly opposed the view put forth by State Secretary Byrnes of the United States that the future German government should be along federal lines, with powers divided among the states in one hand a central machinery on the other.

The official spokesman said the fact of the establishment of the five states "would have to speak for itself."

If the Russian switch is fully carried out it would tend to solve one of the most difficult of the German questions. The French, British and Americans have all been opposed to a strong central German regime.

Elliott Roosevelt Finds Consuming Desire for Peace Among Russians

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow. Nov. 29 (AP)—Elliott Roosevelt said today that during the 16 days he has spent thus far in the Soviet Union he found "a consuming desire for peace and friendship with the United States" among Russian people and their officials.

"They want peace, they believe in peace," the son of the late President said in an interview. "And they also see no reason why our two systems of government cannot live in peace, side by side."

Mr. Roosevelt and his wife have talked, through interpreters, to hundreds of Soviet officials and citizens in Moscow, the Moscow vicinity and Leningrad.

During their trip back from Leningrad, Mr. Roosevelt said, he was handed a letter written in pencil on a plain piece of paper and signed by three generals and four of the best-known stage personalities in Russia. The letter said:

". . we are firmly confident your visit to the Soviet Union will increase the friendship of the American and Soviet peoples in peacetime in their joint struggle for peace and for the prosperity of all peoples desiring peace.

"It has become clear to all that peace in the world is possibly only on a basis of friendship among the peoples of great countries, and primarily between the peoples of the United States and the U.S.S.R."

Judge Upholds Court's Right To Enjoin Walkout

Defence Fails in Attempt To Have Action Dismissed

Washington, Nov. 29 —(AP)— Judge T.-Alan Goldsborough today ordered John L. Lewis to trial on contempt charges today and upheld the court's right to enjoin a walkout in the soft coal mines despite federal anti-injunction laws.

Overruling Mr. Lewis' motion for dismissal of the contempt action brought by the government, Judge Goldsborough declared:

"The Morris-La Guardia Act did not and does not apply, and the court has the same rights as it had prior to passage of the Norris-LaGuardia Act."

Judge Goldsborough said his court had the right to enjoin "a labor union which was about to do something against the good of the public and the union itself."

Say Act Nullified Order.

Mr. Lewis and his United Mine Workers contended that the Norris-La Guardia Act, curbing the use of restraining orders and injunctions in labor disputes, nullified Judge Goldsborough's restraining order of Nov. 18 and was grounds for dismissal of the whole contempt-of-court action, saying Lewis had the right to ignore it.

Government lawyers on the other hand contended the law did not apply where the government itself was acting as operator of the 3,300 soft coal mines seized during another crippling strike last spring.

Judge Goldsborough's ruling cut short a day and a half of argument by counsel for Mr. Lewis that the court lacked authority to restrain the U.M.W. from terminating its government contract. This notice by Mr. Lewis was followed by a walkout of 400,000 miners.

"The court repeats," Judge Goldsborough said, "that this proceeding was for the sole purpose of maintaining the status quo in this dispute."

Before handing down his decision, the Judge had remarked that Mr. Lewis in effect had "pleaded guilty" to contempt by refusing to obey the court's order to keep the coal contract in force.

Statement Challenged.

This was challenged by one of Mr. Lewis' lawyers, T. C. Townsend, who said:

"He hasn't entered any plea of guilty, Your Honor."

After some argument over legal technicalities, the Judge ruled:

"The motion to discharge and vacate the motion is overruled."

He then called a five-minute recess. John F. Sonnett, chief government counsel, announced that the government was ready to present its first witness against Mr. Lewis — Navy Capt. N. H. Collisson, federal coal mines administrator.

In his statement leading up to dismissal of the United Mine Workers motion, Judge Goldsborough declared that the court had a right to enjoin "a labor union which was about to do something against the good of the public and the union itself."

New Salary Schedule For Teachers Adopted At St. Catharines

St. Catharines, Nov. 29—(CP)—The Board of Education last night adopted a new salary schedule for public school and collegiate teachers which increases the minimum initial salary by $300 in both cases. The maximum salary level has been raised by varying amounts dependent upon classification, and ranges from a $300 increase for women public school teachers to $800 for male public school teachers and $800 for some grades of collegiate teachers.

The schedule rates call for a general $300 increase immediately to most teachers, but the actual value is reduced by cessation of the yearly cost-of-living bonus of $80 for single and $120 for married teachers which has been paid since 1944. The schedule is retroactive to Sept. 1, 1946, and also contains increases for caretakers, maintenance men and office employees.

The increased schedule brings St. Catharines into line with most Ontario cities except for Toronto and Hamilton.

AUSTRALIA

his remarks that he referred to both atomic weapons and other armaments.

Canada's Amendment.

Canada outlined a proposed amendment yesterday designed to make more specific a Russian proposal for world-wide arms control.

The Canadian spokesman, Dana Wilgress, told the political committee of the United Nations Assembly the amendment would substitute "purposes and principle" for "aims and principles" and an "early and general regulation and reduction" for a "general reduction" of arms in the first paragraph of the Russian proposal.

"To be successful," said Mr. Wilgress, "a system for the general regulation and reduction of armaments must be based on an international treaty or convention on the limitation of armaments accepted and implemented by virtually all nations."

Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia in advancing yesterday his new proposals for international inspections and controls did not mention the veto, but he specified that his plan for separate "organs of inspection" on atomic weapons and other classes of weapons must come "within the framework of the security council."

This was interpreted as meaning that any action of the two commissions would be subject to security council aproval and that any of the five permanent members of the council would be able to block action by the veto.

Dissatisfaction With Russ Proposals.

Australia as well as Canada, both members of the atomic commission, expressed dissatisfaction yesterday with M. Molotov's proposals and offered measures recommending controls be handled by a permanent international commission to be set up "under treaty or convention."

French delegate Alexandre Parodi, present chairman of the atomic commission, expressed hope that the disarmament discussions would not interrupt or stop the work of the atomic group, which he said was now making some progress and would make a report on its work next month.

LAMA

Shown a knife that was entered as an exhibit, Frederick Lama said, "That's my Dad's." He said he last saw it in the stable on the Hall farm the day he, his mother, brother and sister moved back to the other farm.

He also identified a grey peaked cap as "my Dad's" and said parts of an old clothes wringer had been in the woodshed at the Hall farm.

Dr. J. G. Cameron testified he had performed Aug. 16 the post mortem examination on Mrs. Lama, at the request of Dr. C. A. Stewart, coroner. The woman had then been dead about 12 hours. There were stab wounds on the left side of the neck, and in the back, and also cuts and lacerations on her face. There was a deep scalp wound on the front of the skull that might have been caused by a blunt instrument.

Shown the knife identified by Frederick Lama, Dr. Cameron said it was quite possible the neck wounds had been caused by it. When the club was shown to him, witness said the blow on the head might have been caused by it, but it would have to be a heavy blow, especially to cause such jagged lacerations."

Daniel Lama, 12-year-old son of the accused, was the next Crown witness. He told of seeing his father at his mother's home the morning of the day before the murders.

JUDGE

Today's session opened with a renewed defence attempt to win dismissal of the contempt action against Lewis, who as before, sat with jaw upthrust, rarely speaking to his 10-man legal battery.

Through Lawyer Edmund Burke, Lewis claimed the government's case actually is a criminal action instead of a civil proceeding, as designated, and therefore should be thrown out.

On this argument, too, the judge interrupted to say:

"The restraining order was not issued for the purpose of punishing a contempt of the Smith-Connally Act (which forbids strikes against the government), but for the purpose of letting the court decide whether the coal contract with the government could be terminated."

Rise Tide of Idle Workers.

As the paralyzing strike entered its ninth day, a rising tide of unemployment left at least 90,000 idle in other industries directly affected by the walkout, dimouts darkened cities in more than a score of States, and passenger service on coal-burning railroads was sharply curtailed.

Steel fabricators predicted wholesale layoffs of 100,000 employees within a week in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio.

He told a reported that if Mr. Lewis would call the 400,000 miners back to work, the owners of the federally-seized mines would be "very happy" to discuss contract terms with him.

"We are even willing to talk about a shorter work week," Mr. Burke said yesterday.

A reduction of the miners' present 54-hour week with no loss in pay has been reported to be one aim behind the determined United Mine Workers' stand against the government. Mr. Lewis has not said publicly what he wanted when he demanded that the government reopen its contract with the U.M.W.

Meanwhile Senator Elmer Thomas (Dem.-Okla.) proposed to President Truman a special session of Congress to enact legislation authorizing courts to seize all funds of labor and management where a strike threatens "public health and safety".

The Lecithin Company to Establish Plant Here for Processing Soy Bean Meal For Industrial Purposes

One of Belleville's newest industries is expected to be in operation shortly after the beginning of the new year, Mr. Don Whillans, city manager of the local branch of the Lecithin Company of New Brunswick, announced at the luncheon of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce directorate on Thursday.

The new plant will be located in the downtown area and at the start will employ a limited number of people, Mr. Whillans said.

The new industry will process the meal of the soy bean into the company's various products. After the oil has been extracted from the bean, the meal will be shipped direct to the Belleville plant where it will be washed, and blended with various company formulae, and made ready for use.

Lecithin, as the product is called, is used in bread dough, and other foods, chocolate bars, etc. It prevents rancidity and in general holds moisture in the commodities in which it is used.

It is also used in shoe polishes and paint and varnish. In the latter it assists in the dispersion of vehicles in the pigment.

"We are starting on a small scale here," Mr. Whillans said, "but we expect to expand as we go along and eventually build our own plant in Belleville."

Judging of 200 Cheese in British Empire Dairy Show Gets Under Way

With the two hundred cheese in position in the showroom of Riggs Motor Sales on Pinnacle Street, judging of the cheese to be shown at the British Empire Dairy Show scheduled for next Tuesday and Wednesday got underway this afternoon. Judging of the various entries will be completed some time on Saturday, it was stated by J. L. Irwin, honorary president.

Judges for the cheese will be Thomas J. Hicks, Senior Dairy Produce Grader, of Montreal, E. Quensel, also of Montreal; Garnet Bain of London and W. E. Brennan of Kemptville.

Boards to Discuss Restriction Of Age Limit for Members

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the Junior Board of Trade here will get together at a luncheon in the New Queens Hotel next Thursday to further discuss methods and suggestions of stronger co-operation between the two bodies, it was decided at the luncheon meeting of the Chamber on Thursday.

Present as guests at the function were Messrs. Bruce Lattimer and Tommy Carruthers of the Junior Board executive and Mr. Don Whillans, manager of the Belleville branch of the Lecithin Company of New Brunswick, which will start operations here in the near future.

The main theme of discussion between the Junior Board members and the Chamber was the restricting of the age limit to 35 years of members of the younger organization. After many suggestions had been aired and discussed, it was decided to have the full directorates of both organizations get together and try to arrive at a decision beneficial to both bodies.

More Co-operation Needed

Jamieson Bone of the Chamber was of the opinion that the two organizations working separately in large cities was a good idea but not in communities the size of Belleville. "This city needs more co-operation all round that will go to the building of the community. There are too many political cliques and small groups working against each other here. Any jealousies between the Chamber and the Junior Board of Trade would result in both being sunk."

Mr. Lattimer speaking for the Junior Board said the matter had been discussed by his organization but nothing definite had been arrived at. He felt personally, that since his organization had only been in existence here a year, the taking away of men over 35 years of age would remove some of the guiding spirits of the board.

"There are only roughly 15 men in the Junior Board of this age or over and if we take away some of the important figures, then we would have no organization," he said.

"If the Junior Board had been in operation for ten years or so, so that it would have young men of experience, it would be a different matter," he thought. "But if we pull out these men now we would be nowhere."

Suggests Meeting.

Director Jewell of the Chamber suggested that a committee of his organization be formed to meet a committee of the Junior Board to further discuss the matter. He further suggested that the Junior Board could lower its age limit one year at a time, and thus build up a stronger organization.

Secretary Tommy Carruthers of the Junior Board reminded the meeting that his organization was living up to the constitution of the Junior Chamber of Commerce with respect to the age limit of 35 years, but this, Mr. Lattimer added, was not compulsory.

President Lorne McDougall and his directors unanimously co-operated with the Junior Board representatives in their request for assistance and office space in their "Get-Out-And-Vote" campaign on December 9th. Secretarial services and other facilities of the Chamber, the president said, would be at the full disposal of the junior body.

Announces Broadcast.

He also announced that the first broadcast of the Chamber of Commerce, sponsored by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce would be aired over station CJBQ here tonight between 9 and 9.15.

Discussion pertaining to several suggestions for co-operation between the two organizations as laid down by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, will also be aired at the joint luncheon on Thursday next.

$150,000 Fire At Charlottetown One Man Killed

Charlottetown, Nov. 29 —(CP)—Overcome by fumes and smoke, Ivan Watters died in hospital today while fire was destroying most of the island cold storage plant operated by Davis and Fraser, Ltd., and causing damage unofficially estimated at $150,000.

More than six hours after the fire began, firefighters still were battling a blaze in the centre of the building.

Watters, believed to be native of Apohaqui, N.B., was understood to have been overcome while attempting to close a steel door separating the new section of the building from the old. An inquest was scheduled to be held later to day.

The spectacular fire, believed to have originated in the smoke room about 6 a.m., gutted more than half the plant destroying the office, shipping room, cutting floor and pickle cellar.

The fate of thousands of tons of stock in the freezer's basement could not be determined as firefighters managed to bring the blaze under control about five hours later.

The plant employed about 125 workers.

IN MEMORIAM

HOGLE— In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Ethel Hogle, who passed away November 29, 1945.

God knew that you were suffering,
He knew you were in pain,
He knew you never would get better
In this world again.
He saw the road was getting rough,
The hills were hard to climb,
So He closed your weary eyelids
And whispered "Peace be thine."
—Ever remembered by her loving husband, Bruce and family.

SILLS — In memory of Elton Sills who died five years ago today.

Dear Mother and Dad, I am keeping a tryst 'twixt thee and me.
In comp[illegible] with angles I guard and wa[illegible] with thee.
And although you miss the footfall, and feel I've gone away,
I still am close beside you, to help you through each day.
Let not the clouds of sorrow bedim your sight of me.
I would you'd catch the splendor of the home that is to be.
The God of Grace will hold you — secure within His care.
My star will ever glimmer to have you know I'm near.
My work on earth was finished; I heard the call—"Come home."
You would not grudge promotion to your "beloved"—your own.
Then hearken to the message borne on the wings of dawn;
God in His good season reunites His own.
Life's span is just a moment despite our count of years.
He has promised "life eternal" —and to wipe away all tears.
In the garden of tomorrow we shall walk and happy be.
Dear Mother and Dad, I am waiting— and shall keep the tryst with thee.
—Ever remembered by Mother, Dad, LeRoy, Donna and Grandparents.

HARROW — In loving memory of my dear grandfather, Alfred Harrow, who passed away eight years ago today, November 29th., 1938.

O happy hours we once enjoyed,
How sweet their memory still,
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.
—Sadly missed by Lila and great-grand-daughter Doreen.

HOGLE — In memory of a dear grandmother, Mrs. Bruce Hogle, who left one year ago today to spend her vacation in Heaven.

Just a thought of sweet remembrance,
Just a memory fond and true,
Just a token of affection,
And a heartache still for you.
More and more each day we miss you
Though our thoughts are not revealed.
Little do they know the sorrow
That lies within our hearts concealed.
One year has passed, dear Grandma,
Since you were called away.
But how well do we remember
That sad and weary day.
You bade no one a last farewell,
You said goodbye to none.
But Heaven's gates were opened wide,
A loving voice said: "come."
But some sweet day we'll meet again
Beyond the toil and strife,
And clasp each other's hands once more
In Heaven, that happy life.
No pen can write, no tongue can tell,
Our sad and bitter loss,
But God alone has helped so well
To bear our heavy cross.
We'll always miss you, Grandma, but your memory we'll always cherish.
—Grandchildren, Joyce, Ronald, Marilyn, Lois, Bruce and Wayne Elmy.

HOGLE — In memory of mother, Mrs. Bruce Hogle, too dearly loved to ever be forgotten, who departed suddenly from this life one year ago today.

A wonderful mother, woman and aid;
One who was better, God never made.
A wonderful worker, loyal and true,
One in a million, that Mother was you.
Just in your judgment, always right,
Honest and liberal, ever upright.
Loved by your friends and all you knew,
A wonderful mother, that mother, was you.
Through weary hours and days of pain
You were one who would never complain,
Your worries and troubled nights are through.
A wonderful Mother, that, Mother, was you.
—Sadly missed and ever remembered by Earle and Bernice Elmy.

Liquor Ration Upped to Eight Bottles Monthly

The individual monthly liquor ration in Ontario will be restored to its previous high of eight bottles or 208 ounces, beginning Dec. 1, Chief Liquor Commissioner William C. Griesinger announced Thursday.

The new ration is double that in effect this month and places it on a par with the July, August and September quota. Because of an acute bottle shortage, the ration was cut to a single bottle per permit on Oct. 1.

Col. Griesinger said the increase was possible as a result of the improved deliveries from distillers, following larger production by the bottle manufacturers. The manufacture of glass for bottles was stopped when the supply of soda ash was cut off because of a strike at the Brunner-Mond plant in Amherstburg.

On Half-Monthly Basis

The eight bottles will be obtainable on a half-monthly basis. Of the four bottles purchasable each half-month period, not more than two may be whisky, with the further proviso that during the whole month, only one bottle of imported whisky may be purchased.

"This means a maximum of four bottles of rum, gin, brandy, cocktails or liquers may be obtained on the individual permit, provided no whisky is purchased," explained Col. Griesinger.

The return to the original ration as soon as the distillers met their commitments to the board, was promised by the chief liquor commissioner when the cut first went into effect. At that time he ridiculed the suggestion that the reduction was made for the purpose of building up stocks for the opening of cocktail bars.

Police said the thief entered the mansion at night without waking a watch dog and stole the jewelry from a bedroom.

The Simpson sisters of Stanwood rendered two vocal duets. Springbrook church choir sang a number and the guest of honor, Rev. C. Cadigan of Marmora, gave a very interesting narrative reading entitled "Grandpa and the Musical Grindstone." At this juncture the boys who were to receive Bibles were called to the platform where Mr M. R. Neal, representing the officials of Springbrook charge made the presentation. Mr. Fred Hodge on behalf of the recipients, suitably replied.

Those receiving Bibles were Lorne C. Bateman, Harry Bateman, John M. Bronson, Elwood Cooper, Edward Galloway, Arthur Herrington, G. W. Morrison, Arthur McMullen, Ross Reid, Richard Reid, Ernest Runnalls, Douglas Rombough, Fred Hodge, Geo. Bateman.

Greek Premier To Lay Complaint Before Council

Athens, Nov. 29 (AP)—Premier Constantin Tsaldaris is scheduled to fly to New York Sunday with the presumed aim of laying before the United Nations a complaint that Greece's northern border has been violated in continuing fighting between leftist bands and Greek troops.

The Greek government has repeatedly asserted the bands have been supplied from within Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

The Greek information office in London said Monday that a formal complaint would be made to the U.N. Security Council.

In Sofia yesterday, Georgi Dimitrov, Bulgaria's new Communist Premier, told the Grand National Assembly his government "categorically rejects the slanderous accusations ... that bands from Bulgaria have penetrated Greek territory."

(He said he stood for "a just and worthy peace with the United Nations, sincere collaboration with all neighbors, including the Greek people" and "continuous friendship with the Soviet Union.")

Dispatches to Athens newspapers, meanwhile, said Greek troops had surrounded 250 guerillas in the Souphli district near the Turkish frontier and that the second and 14th Greek divisions had inflicted heavy casualties and taken several captives in a "major engagement" with a strong mountain band in the Larisa section.

In western Macedonia, Joseph C. Goodwin of The Associated Press reported troops had retaken Mandhalos and Mavros from a band which had held the towns 24 hours, killed 24 villagers and burned 40 buildings. He said the mayor of Mavros told Greek officers the band was composed of Serbs and Bulgars.

Official sources reported Leftist bands had destroyed or partly destroyed 11 villages, killed more than 100 inhabitants and burned 300 houses in northern Greece this month.

Early Shopping

Less than four weeks away is Christmas and it is not too early to do shopping for Yuletide which condenses an intense amount of planning and activity into a short space of time. No doubt very many people have done considerable thinking and many have been buying for the great annual event which in all times holds its interest.

Merchants have a good showing of gifts this year, there being many commodities which are especially sought at the festive season. Shop interiors are most attractive and show windows are making their irresistable appeal to the buyers.

The early purchaser has the advantage of having more time in which to make selections, and more attention and help in selecting than those who defer buying and wait until very late in the season. Early buyers have not the anxiety that the late buyer has in making choices because the former are themselves not so crowded with duties as purchasers in the final stage.

The season always brings a rush and that there will be a rush this year can be taken for granted when one considers the territory and public served by Belleville through its strategic position as the centre of a very progressive and enterprising district. There will be a heavy demand of course for there are more people in the district because of the presence of veterans who have returned this year, many veterans having been joined by their brides from Britain and other countries and by their children.

Belleville merchants are well prepared for the Christmas trade with goods and staffs and they look forward to an excellent Christmas season. Those who buy soon will help the businessmen and their staffs and as a result of buying early will help by having done their purchasing, so allowing more time for those who for some reason or other have not had time to do their buying before the last rush.

Cautious

With the variation of temperature about the boundary line of 32 degrees of freezing and thawing drivers of automobiles and pedestrians using sidewalks and crossings will wisely use extreme caution because a skid or a slip may be disastrous.

Ottawa Journal commenting on the natural hazards at this time of year says that on icy streets, "the speed limit doesn't mean anything to a cautious motorist. The only safe speed, in such circumstances, is that which permits the vehicle to be slowed or stopped without skidding—anything beyond that is dangerous."

The pedestrian knows how easy it is to slip, especially after snow has freshly fallen, and he will take no chances of slipping which may bring a strain or a broken limb or if he is at a crossing, he will go carefully and not make more hazardous and gruelling than necessary driving for motorists.

Cloud Made Into Snow

A three-mile cloud was turned into snow recently by dry ice dropped from an airplane in Western Massachusettes, it was announced by the General Electric Company. This followed the day after an announcement by the company that artificial ice had been successfully produced in laboratory tests.

A great deal of attention has naturally been drawn to the achievement of making a cloud into snow and to the possibilities that may follow such a successful experiment.

Numerous practical applications are expected to result, including storage of moisture in the winter for spring irrigation and water power programs, steering heavy falls of snow from large city areas, providing snow for winter resorts in parts where there are clouds which do not drop precipitation.

According to the statement the cloud was changed into snow at the 14,000-foot level. "Six pounds of dry ice pellets were dropped through the tract three miles long. It is estimated that one pellet dropping 2,000 feet through the air might produce enough ice nuclei to develop several tons of snow. "In a five-hour flight a single plane could generate hundreds of millions of tons of snow over a large area. However this would not mean a fall of more than a few inches of snow on the ground. There would have to be a continuous supply of moisture fed into the sky to produce a really heavy fall of snow," said Dr. Irving Langmuir, associate director of the G. E. laboratory.

Rhubarb Goes Aristocratic

Fruit and vegetables are in conflict again. This time the former is laying definite claim to rhubarb—a claim that a court has been asked to sustain. After a long period of controversy, the tomato was snatched from the vegetable family and set up as a fruit. Then along came the melon with a "me too" claim to whatever aristocracy may be attached to the fruit group, and apparently won out sufficiently to be given a fruit rating by Mr. Webster, says Christian Science Monitor.

Even the nut has gained recognition as a hard-shelled fruit, and one wonders what other desertions are facing the vegetable family. The poor squash that may lie in friendship alongside the melon in the garden apparently is destined to remain a vegetable. Likewise the ever-popular celery, the stem of which bears a striking resemblance to the somewhat larger stalk of rhubarb. But, come what may, whether vegetable or fruit, the rhubarb pie, with its strips of flaky crust across the top, still takes the cake.

New Birth Certificate

A new and modern form of birth certificate is now being issued in Ontario. This certificate measures approximately 3½ inches by 2½ inches, taking the place of the old certificate which measured 7 inches by 8½ inches, and required folding several times before it could be placed in the pocket. The certificate is designed for convenience and durability, and its size permits placing it in a wallet without folding. It is sealed in a transparent casing which is both water and perspiration proof. While the material will burn slowly, it will not flare up and disappear immediately as in the case of paper.

Through the Dominion-Provincial Conference on vital statistics it is hoped that all provinces will use a similar standard birth certificate.

The Ontario Registrar-General's Branch is making small films of every birth certificate registered, one of which will be filed with the Dominion Statistics Branch in Ottawa. It will take quite a number of years before all the work is completed, but when it is finished storage space will be reduced to a minimum, records will be easily located and instead of writing or typing out certificates, photostatic copies will be made.

Canadians will have more canned salmon next year, it has been announced, half a million cases in fact as against three hundred thousand of the past year. Tins of salmon have been a rarity for some years and the news of the greater total of canned goods will be welcomed by Canadian housewives.

"TO KNOW ALL"

Once a sage grown old and wise
Said: If men could only know
All that in behavior lies,
All behind the faults that show,
Then, throughout the years they live,
All with pity they'd forgive.

All the human eye can see
Is the deed and injury wrought.
None on earth so wise that he Knows the depths of mood and thought.
None can fully understand
What to evil stirs the hand.

Could we know what lies behind
All the folly that we see,
All the promptings of the mind,
Far more patient we should be.
We'd forgive, instead of scorn,
Those who seem to frailty born.

Nehru Will Go To London Talks On Indian Problem

New Delhi, Nov. 29 (AP) — A source close to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru said today the all-India Congress leader had changed his mind and accepted an invitation to attend British cabinet discussions of India's Hindu-Moslem stalemate.

(Reuters News Agency said in a New Delhi dispatch that "it was confirmed" that Nehru and Sardar Baldev Singh, Indian Defence Minister representing the Sikhs, would go to London.)

Previously Mohamed Ali Jinnah President of the Molsem League, and Liaquat Ali Khan, Secretary of the League and Fonance Minister of India's anterim government, had agreed to go to London with Viceroy Lord Wavell for the talks, to begin next Wednesday, but the Hindu-led Congress party and the Sikhs had turned down the Viceroy's invitation.

Hehru's office said today, however, that Nehru, former Conyrses Party President and leading minister of the government, and Sikh Defence Minister Sardar Baldev Singh, a Nehru nominee, would make the trip.

They were reported planning to leave Delhi tomorrow for Karachi, whence the party will take off for London Sunday.

Savagery in the Woods

(Peterborough Examiner)

A press report tells of three hunters in the Tobermory district who met a buck as they drove home from a dance; the animal was dazzled by the lights of the car, so one of these brave men grabbed it by a hindleg while another slit its throat; as they had already bagged two deer on their hunt they now have three—two shot and one done to death in the Chicago manner. A short time ago a report from Montreal told of a bear cub being knocked out of a tree and clubbed to death by supposedly civilized people. During the summer a man not far from Peterborough was found killing muskies with a garden rake. We have recently protested against brainless attacks on snowy owls and eagles. Reports reach us from time to time of hunters who, having killed deer, leave the carcasses in the woods because they think it too much trouble to bring their prizes home! What is happening to Canadian sportsmanship

• • •

Hunting is not sport unless it is done according to rules. Nobody who goes into the woods expensively equipped needs the meat he kills in order to feed himself and his family. He goes hunting for sport. His pleasure, presumably, lies in the fact that he is doing a difficult thing in a prescribed way, and not in shedding blood. But it appears that there are a good many hunters who are not sportsmen.

• • •

If they have no humane objections to killing animals with clubs, rakes and knives, ordinary self-interest ought to deter them from senseless slaughter. Canada is a great tourist playground, but it will only remain so if the standard of Canadian sportsmanship is high. If our visitors decide that we are a nation of savages, killing not from hunger but simply in order to shed blood, our valuable tourist trado will suffer. Not merely killing animals, but killing them in a particular way which gives the animal a chance to escape, is what makes sport and sportsmanship.

SPECIAL PERMITS NOT REQUIRED

Victoria, Nov. 29 — (CP) — Special permits for the purchase of explosives will no longer be required, Provincial Police headquarters were advised from Ottawa yesterday. Abolition of the wartime regulation removes restrictions on miners, construction workers, loggers and farmers who, since the beginning of the war, have been able to purchase explosives only on police permits.

Heaman were asked at a meeting if they would revert to the old salary if elected.

SKUNKS QUITE NUMEROUS

London, Nov. 29 (CP)—Skunks have become so numerous here that airline officials at London airport complain passengers remark on the "funny smell" even before they land, if the wind is right—or in this case, the wrong—direction.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

VITAMIN D AND CALCIUM

Vitamin D is essential for the normal metabolism of calcium—absorption, assimilation, utilization and retention — as a principle of physiology. As a principle of good nutrition, milk is the richest source of calcium (and phosphorus) and vitamin D. Just plain milk, preferably Grade A, Raw from tuberculin tested herd, Certified milk, any fresh milk scalded (boiled for one minute only), or, if none of these is available, then ordinary Pasteurized milk. Every child from eight to eighteen years of age should have not less than 1½ pints (three glassfuls) of milk daily as the indispensable basis of an adequate diet.

Millions of youngsters neglect proper care of their teeth (which only the dentist can give) under the spell of that absurd slogan—that "a clean tooth never decays."

Tooth decay, whether it is primarily due to nutritional deficiency or not, cannot fail to impair health and vite if it is not promptly treated by the dentist. Aside from the relation of tooth decay to infection (both focal or systemic infections and such respiratory infections as poliomyelis), damage or loss of one or more teeth from tooth decay cripples the important function of mastication, predisposes to development of chronic digestive troubles, spoils any pretensions of good looks the individuals may have had and, in my opinion, shortens life expectancy. Every day the child, youth or adult postpones needed dental treatment—filling of cavities, removal of tartar or other deposits that can't be brushed or washed away, installing suitable dentures to restore masticating efficiency where one or more teeth are missing—lowers vitality, efficiency and stamina, shortens life expectation and spoils good looks. In other words, a full complement of functionally efficient teeth (your own or your dentist's) is indispensable.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Lung Trouble

Member of my family has lung trouble, and on hot days I make him sit in the sun, but a trained nurse said this is the worst thing he could do.

(Mrs. F. E.)

Answer — If your relative has tuberculosis you should give him the benefit of medical advice—never mind what Mrs. Saireygamp says, but leave to the doctor's judgment all such questions.

Not Ben Terpin

I had a bad cough this past winter, tried everything and got no relief, until I read what one of your followers said about Ben Terpin Bydrate. I got two dozen capsules, each containing two grains, took one after food three times a day, and in a few days the cough was practically gone.

(A. V. E.)

Answer — Thank you, sir. The medicine is not Ben Terpin, but terpin hydrate, two grains in capsule, after food, three times a day, for obstinate chronic winter cough. If three dozen capsules fail to bring relief it is useless to continue taking the medicine.

B6

Please tell me what vitamin B is taken for.

(M. E. V.)

Answer — I wouldn't know. It is one of the entities of the vitamin B complex of which little is known, as yet.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why are peacock feathers considered unlucky?

Many people will not keep peacock feathers in their homes because they consider them unlucky.

The peacock, or more properly the peafowl, belongs to the pheasant family and is native to southwestern Asia. Among certain castes in India the peafowl is protected as a sacred bird.

Introduced into Europe in ancient times, it became sacred among both the Greeks and the Romans, by whom it was regarded as the favorite bird of Juno, guardian of the female sex and patroness of happy marriages.

Many of the ancients believed that Juno's anger was excited by plucking the peacock and that no suitor would call at a house where the sacred feathers were kept.

The superstition that associates peacock feathers with misfortune and bad luck is supposed to be based on an even more ancient mythological tale. According to the most usual version of a Greek myth, Jupiter fell in love with the beautiful Io, and to protect her from the wrath of his jealous wife Juno he transformed her into a white heifer; whereupon Juno, who saw through the trick, persuaded her husband to give her the heifer, which she placed under the surveillance of Argus, a fabulous being with a hundred eyes, fifty of which remained open even when Argus was asleep.

Jupiter, feeling sorry for poor Io, sent Mercury to slay Argus and deliver her, a task that Mercury accomplished by winning the confidence of Argus with stories and lulling his hundred eyes to sleep with soothing tunes on a lute. Juno, in memory of Argus, metamorphosed him into a peacock, her favorite bird, and transferred his eyes to its train, where they still form the beautifully colored discs. From this story Argus-eyed acquired the meaning of "jealousy watchful," and the peacock's train became the emblem of the evil eye. The superstition associating peacock feathers with misfortune is also probably based on this mythological story.

Contrary to the general notion, the train feathers of the peacock are not of many colors, but are plain black. The brilliant colors of the discs are produced by the refraction of light. There is also a variety of peafowl that is white. Five hundred years ago the knights of Steverden Castle in The Netherlands adopted white peacock feathers as their crest and until modern times several hundred white peafowls were kept at Steverden on the only white peafowl farm in Europe.

B.C. Quake Last June One of Most Severe Which Has Been Recorded In Canada Within Historic Times

Ottawa, Nov. 29 — (CP) — The earthquake which shook Vancouver Island and the nearby mainland of British Columbia last June 23 was "one of the most severe which has been recorded in Canada within historic times," it was stated today in the official report of the Dominion Seismological division.

The report followed correlation and study of seismograph records received at various points in Canada, the United States and Europe and a field study of the epicentral district by Dr. E. A. Hodgson, chief seismologist at the Dominion Observatory here.

The epicentre was tentatively located at lattitude 49 degrees, 9 minutes north, longitude 125 degrees, three minutes west, or a point about 10 miles south southwest of Campbell River, midway up the east coast of Vancouver Island.

Actually, however, the epicentre was not a point but rather, "a line extending along the eastern edge of Vancouver Island from Deep Bay, opposite the south end of Denman Island, to Campbell River, and parts of Quadra Island and Read Island are also affected."

Results of 'Quake

Damage and phenomena resulting from the quake, as mentioned in the report:

1. Deaths: one — Capt. Daniel Fiddler, drowned off Maple Guard Spit when his dinghy was overturned. In addition, a Seattle, Wash., man was reported to have died of a heart attack due to the shock, and a Kildonan packing plant employee, thrown from a wharf by the tremor, received a broken shoulder.

2. Property damage: Broken chimneys, damaged goods in stores, broken crockery and glassware, windows, etc., in various parts of the epicental district.

3. Marked changes in land were reported "particularly at Maple Guard Spit which flanks Deep Bay, at Goose Spit and Drew Harbor on the east side of Quadra Island and near Burdwood Bay on the east coast of the southern promontory of Read Island.

"Cracks many feet in depth and up to 18 inches in width opened up for lengths up to several hundred feet on the sand spits. An area of flat land, 15 to 20 acres in extent, was downdropped in level cultivated fields on Read Island. Some of the faces of the drops were as much as 20 to 30 feet deep."

4. Water spouts, some reaching a height of 30 feet, were seen in many places from Deep Bay along the coast to north of Campbell River. These left holes in the sand as large as five feet in diameter and 12 feet deep.

Increased in Depth

5. Coastal waters in many places were found to have increased in depth by measured amounts up to 100 feet. In some cases whole beaches disappeared. Apparently all the depth changes were increases.

6. Numerous landslides occurred on most of the lakes on Vancouver Island and even in the Fraser Valley, 40 miles east of Vancouver.

7. Local waves of some violence were reported, but general "tidal waves" did not result.

8. Damage was general on the island, and the tremors were felt as far south as Portland, Ore., and as far east as Kelowna in the Okanagan Valley.

9. In general experience, the quake was preceded by a "heavy, subterranean roar." At several places, however, "competent observers" said there was absolutely no sound until the heavy shock occurred at 10:13:19 a.m., P.D.T.

10. Except for a few light tremors, no aftershocks have so far been recorded.

11. The tremors continued for about 30 seconds.

The report recommended that steps be taken to improve seismograph equipment on the west coast, both at the present station — the Observatory at Victoria — and by establishment of a new station at Powell River.

Prohibitionists Say Liquor Fight Isn't Over Yet

Ottawa, Nov. 29 — (CP) — "The liquor people" won the first phase of a campaign to introduce sale of liquor by the glass in Ontario "but the fight isn't over yet," Rev. J. R. Mutchmor of Toronto said Thursday at a meeting of the Canadian Temperance Federation.

He charged that Premier Drew and Attorney General Blackwell introduced the Liquor Licencing Act in the dying moments of the last session of the provincial legislature. The Act has yet to be enforced.

The enemy temperance organizations fight was "a national one, if not a continental and hemispheric one." Two Canadian companies were among the four which held "a monopoly on 80 per cent of the hard liquor sales in North America."

"We are drinking too much financially — to say nothing of the morale waste."

Because the Liquor Licensing Act provided for no vote on cocktail bars in the five Ontario cities of more than 50,000 population — Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa, Windsor and London — "1,000,000 people will be disenfranchised."

The government had said in effect: "You don't need to vote; we have thought this out and decided to do this in your best interests."

Completed house is stuccoed, contains four rooms and a bath and was built in a month.

Ontario Refineries Capacity 76,450 Barrels Daily

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—Ontario's six petroleum refineries now have a capacity of 76,450 barrels daily, but in 1945 there was a decline in total value of provincial refinery products, R. B. Harkness reports in the 55th annual report of the Ontario Department of Mines dealing with natural gas and petroleum.

Decrease was $3,298,344, or 4 per cent below 1944, said the report, issued Thursday. However, it paid tribute to advances made in the industry during the last 20 years.

Total amount of crude oil distilled was 36,209,209 gallons more than in 1944 while the price per gallon was down nearly 0.13 cents. Production of straight grade declined 18,421,842 gallons, and cracked gasoline by 16,183,035 gallons, making net decreases of 15,923,305 gallons.

Natural gas production was 7,199,970,000 cubic feet in 1945, an increase of 17,461,000 cubic feet over 1944.

Tap Dead Whale And Get 500 Gallons of Oil

Lower Granville, N.S., Nov. 29 —(CP)—Here's a big one that couldn't get away, and as a result Albert Angers and a neighbor, Horace Johnson, expect to be about $500 richer.

The other day Angers found a dead 50-foot whale high and dry on the beach. He and Johnson are busy tapping the mammoth for about 500 gallons of oil.

BLINDED BY LIGHTS

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—Struck by an automobile Wednesday as he walked on highway leading north to Barrie, John Cherry, 81, of suburban North York Township died today in hospital. Police said the driver of the car told them he was blinded by lights of an oncoming car and did not see Mr. Cherry.

Nineteen Import Restrictions Have Been Removed

Ottawa, Nov. 29 —(CP)— Nineteen wartime and post-war orders-in-council limiting imports into Canada have been cleaned off the statute books at a single move, and the list of restricted articles has been boiled down to one order, it was disclosed yesterday.

However, the repeal action of cabinet will have no major effect on imports since it merely removed from the restricted list a number of commodities which already were being admitted freely under individual orders or for which general import permits were being granted.

"What it amounts to," said an official of the Trade Department, "is the clearing off of a lot of deadwood in the legislation. The articles now formally taken off the list had been entering without restriction."

The consolidated legislation shows that the only articles still requiring import permits are certain foodstuffs, textiles and rubber, both natural and synthetic in the crude state.

All limitations on metals, machinery and a wide variety of other articles have been taken off altogether.

The only textile still under import permit is cotton, and the bar applies only to finished goods made wholly or chiefly of this material.

Chief among the foods remaining are canned meats, cocoa, tea, coffee, some fresh fruits and vegetables, a few spices, honey, sugar candy, grapefruit juice, syrups containing sugar and canned fish of all kinds.

However, it was announced recently that for several varieties of canned fish, import licences are being granted freely on application.

JINNAH ACCEPTS INVITATION TO CONFER IN LONDON

Karachi, India, Nov. 29 (AP) —Mohammed Ali Jinnah, president of the Moslem League, formally announced Thursday his acceptanse of the British cabinet mission's invitation to confer in London on India's independence, and said he would leave for London Sunday.

The Hindu-dominated All-India Congress Party has been reported determined to turn down the invitation, described by British government sources as an eleventh hour bid to prevent civil war in India.

GERMANS MORE RESENTFUL

Munich, Nov. 29. (AP)—The Germans, expecting a long, cold winter, are voicing increased criticism and showing more "passive resistance" toward United States occupation authorities than at any time since the end of the war, officials' report said Wednesday. Growth of a discontented attitude toward American management by the German man in the street was reported in dozens of towns and cities.

Wants Count "Audited"

Russia's suggestion to the United Nations General Assembly that the big powers give figures on their troop numbers and dispositions within and without former enemy territory, was countered by Britain's Philip Noel-Baker (above) who demanded that the count include troops within a country's own borders—and that United Nations' "auditors" be permitted to check accuracy of the returns. Noel-Baker also turned down Russian demands that data on atom, jet-propelled, and other weapons be included in the returns, stating that Britain would be ready to give this information when general reduction in arms was an accomplished fact — not before.

WITHOUT ELECTRIC POWER

Kingston, Nov. 29 (CP) Wolfe Island residents are without electric power Wednesday, following a break of heavy cable which carries current from the mainland. Kingston Hydro Power district officials say two separate breaks have been located in the cable and several days' work will be required before the damage can be repaired.

FAST WORK, COOL THINKING SAVE FOUR LIVES IN FREAK ACCIDENT
ADRIEN BERGERON WINS Dow Award

THE DOW AWARD is a citation for outstanding heroism and includes, as a tangible expression of appreciation, a $100 Canada Savings Bond. Winners are selected by The Dow Award Committee, a group of editors of leading Montreal daily newspapers.

There were five people in the truck that sped along the highway near Lake St. John, Que. The road was in poor condition . . . and a sudden lurch sent the truck careening across the ditch completely out of control! Then, after turning over twice, it finally came to a stop, partially submerged, in a river. Adrien Bergeron was first out . . . and he quickly helped one passenger and her daughter to safety. But then the unexpected happened. The gasoline tank exploded . . . leaving the truck a mass of flames. A man and his daughter were still inside . . . and Bergeron had to work fast. After three attempts he rescued the girl . . . and then, breaking the windshield, he managed to get the unconscious man away from the flames . . . and to safety.

For his courage and presence of mind in saving four lives, we are proud to present The Dow Award to Adrien Bergeron of Arvida, Que.

Young People Of Holloway St. Church Entertain

The young people of Holloway St. United Church entertained the young people of the Alliance Tabernacle on Monday evening.

The meeting opened with Miss Rosslyn Robertson conducting a sing-song, assisted by Miss Isabel Richardson at the piano. Several sentence prayers were offered, after which Miss Maude Burke conducted the business period.

The worship service, under the capable guidance of Miss Ruth Plane, assisted by her group, was most effective. A worship centre consisted of an open Bible, lighted candles and a spray of silver leaves grouped against a background of draped dark velvet. The theme of the service was "Missions in India". Mrs. C. A. Perkins as guest speaker, emphasized the need of Christian workers in India, as she told about the habits and customs of these people. She said in part: "India has problems which are economical, political and religious, and these can only be solved through the knowledge of the love of God".

Miss Shirley Hitchon led in a recreational period, after which refreshments were served, and the meeting closed with the Friendship Circle and prayer by Rev. C. A. Perkins.

Austen Comedy "Pride and Prejudice" Presented with Skill and Precision

With the piquant charm and graciousness which characterized the manners of the eighteenth century, the youthful thespians of the Belleville Collegiate Institute Dramatic Club presented Jane Austen's romantic comedy "Pride and Prejudice" before a capacity audience on Thursday evening. In a period play of this type an important part of the interest centres in the costumes and stage-settings which create the atmosphere of that era, and a delightful effect was created by the lovely gowns worn so charmingly by the feminine members of the cast, while the authentic furnishings were arranged with care and good taste.

The leading players interpreted their parts with mature understanding, the supporting roles were uniformly good, and the amusing plot unfolds with smooth precision. While all parts were ably handled, the characterization of Mrs. Bennet by Lois Flindall deserves special mention. Broose Blatherwick as the marriageable parson, and Mary Lo and Elspeth Wishart also showed decided histrionic ability.

Miss N. P. Merry and Mrs. Elsie Reed directed the play which was dramatized by Helen Jerome.

The story deals with the three daughters of Mr. Bennet (ably played by Leo Marcus) and Mrs. Bennet (Lois Flindall) the scheming and highly nervous mother who has designs on every male person as a possible son-in-law. Elizabeth (Mary Lo Wishart) is the eldest daughter, but her beauty is handicapped by the fact that she has intelligence also, which served to lessen her value in the matrimonial market. Jane (Elspeth Wishart) falls in live with Mr. Bingley, (Edmund Waterhouse) but the happy culmination of her romance is almost circumvented by his interfering sister, Miss Bingley, (Joyce Cooper). Lydia (charmingly played by Marilyn Seldon), is the youngest of the daughters, but the first to get married when she elopes with Mr. Wickham (Thom Leslie), at the tender age of sixteen. Elizabeth has two suitors, Mr. Collins (Broose Blatherwick) who is a cringing and humble admirer and relative, and Mr. Darcy (Bob Ragsdale) into whose arms she finally succumbs as the curtain falls.

It all adds up to real entertainment value, and these talented students gave their version of this play reality and subtle humor.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Be Observing; You Will Avoid Beauty Pitfalls

The woman with the observing eye learns how not to dress, how not to talk, how not to act. Seeing the mistakes made by her sisters, she is able to avoid them. We benefit more by observing bad examples than good ones.

Can you walk along the street and take in a complete picture of each woman approaching you? How does she walk? What kind of facial expression has she? What about her make-up? Does her hat become her, or does it turn her into a caricature? It is fun playing this game. It is educating. We're all seeking good-looks, or the way to hang onto them. It is a natural instinct and a not unworthy one. Through observing other members of the rainbow-chasing sorority, we can see clearly that we should not "look like that."

In the course of time, one is able to look at oneself with critical, impersonal eyes. One can weigh good points against bad points. Almost every woman frets a bit now and then about some real or fancied physical defect. Let her pause and consider that there is no such thing as perfection. Possibly perfection of appearance would not be particularly interesting, even though it pleased the eye of the beholder. A little irregularity of features is no great handicap.

It is likely to be a woman's own fault that she doesn't look as well as she might. Regard the poor misguided dear whose make-up is thick and spotty, or whose over-rosied cheeks clash with a magenta hat. She lacks color sense, good taste, and the discriminating eye.

Consider the plump woman with the short neck, whose coat collar is too big and too fuzzy. A flat, tailored collar—or a coat with no collar at all—would be more appropriate, more becoming. This same woman, who has a moon-like face, will have her hair bunched up at the neck, making her neck appear shorter and fatter. You would think that her mirror would rebuke her. The hair and the collar overshadow whatever good lines of face and figure she may possess.

In every home there should be a full length mirror, so that women can see themselves all at once. Then there will be no mistakes made about the length of the skirt. With the aid of a small mirror, a woman can find out how she looks from a rear view. Thousands of women have no knowledge of the appearance of their backs. When having a frock or coat fitted, they may catch a fleeting glance, and that's all.

Self-study is the only way to create good-looks. It has turned many an ugly duckling into a swan.

Belted in Beauty

By ALICE ALDEN

THE EASIEST WAY to quick smartness in doing-over a dress is via the belt route. Criterion has done well by us this season with their belt designs that range from simple, narrow little affairs to great big bejewelled numbers. It's a simple trick to transform a basic black dress with this gold model, a seven-inch kidskin belt that drapes to one side in symmetric line with a side clasp. It is especially nice with side-draped skirts.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

You Certainly Are A "Third Party," Aren't You?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a woman of 35 and am in love with a married man who is ten years younger than I am. He claims that he feels the same toward me, but he refuses to leave his wife, as he respects her greatly.

Please advise me if I should stop seeing him.

"Third Party."

For a woman of 35, you certainly have an adolescent way of looking at things. Do you seriously believe that this man loves you? And, if so, why? I can't see any sound reason for your believing such a thing, and I am afraid you are just kidding yourself.

It seems hardly necessary for me even to suggest why I feel this way, but if you want it, here it is: He obviously never had any intention of leaving his wife for you. And however you may have regarded whatever has been between you, it is evident that he simply looked upon it as a passing fancy.

It is true that there are young men who develop infatuations for older women, but any older woman who takes such an infatuation as "love" ought to have her head examined.

I would say that if you don't stop seeing him, you are soon going to find that he stops seeing you. So why not beat him to it and definitely bow out as the "third party" in this silly triangle?

This Is An Easy Question to Answer

Dear Miss airfax:

I have been going with a girl for two months and she keeps brushing me off.

What would you do if you were in my place? "H. K."

I wish all the questions asked me were as easy as this one to answer. I would simply start brushing her off myself.

What do you want to let a girl shove you around for? Don't you know yet that nothing interests a girl more than to find a boy who won't take being shoved around?

Just because you let her see that you won't stand for that sort of treatment doesn't mean you have to lose your interest in her. Keep on liking her, if you want to, but give her a little "absent treatment" for a while and see if that doesn't bring her around. If she thinks you are losing interest in her, even though you aren't, she'll probably start being more friendly.

And, if she doesn't mend her ways, then I'd look around for another girl who is more approachable.

I Think This is a Lovely Idea

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Is it proper for a husband to buy his wife a friendship ring even if they have been married ten years? "E. G."

I can't think of anything lovelier than for a husband to buy his wife such a memento to mark the completion of ten years' happy married life. It seems to me that such a gift would mean almost more than the wedding ring itself, because a wedding ring is, after all, a symbol of hoped-for happiness, whereas a friendship ring, given at the end of ten years of life together, would signify that the hopes have been realized.

So go ahead and give your wife this beautiful and significant souvenir. I can't think of anything that she would like more.

"Don't Try to Rush Your Girl, "Puzzled"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a boy of 16 and I have been going with a girl for two years who is also 16. We have been seeing each other very constantly, but I have never told her, in seriousness, how much I love her. I have asked her to go steady, but she insists we are too young. She never goes out with anyone else, and I don't go out with any other girl, so, in my opinion, it is just like going steady.

At 17, I hope to enlist in the Marines and, after that, I won't be seeing her for quite some time. Could it be that she won't go steady because it is just a friendship which will vanish after I enlist? Should I tell her how much I love her, or just wait and see what becomes of our friendship after I enlist?

"Puzzled"

It seems just like "going steady" to me, too, "Puzzled". But, at the same time, I can see your girl's point of view, and I think it shows her to be a sensible young woman. Sixteen is pretty young to commit yourself definitely, and I think you'd be wiser not to try to tie yourselves up yet.

If I were you, I wouldn't urge her too hard to become engaged. Tell her that you love her if you like, and that you feel she is the girl you want to marry. Then see as much of her as you can before your enlistment, and after you go away write her often and let her see that you meant what you said. If you adopt such a plan of faithful waiting, and don't try to hurry her into a decision, I'm sure you will have better luck than if you crowd here.

Her Boyfriend's Religion is Different From Hers

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl in my early teens and am infatuated with a boy of another religion. My mother has always resented this and never allowed me to date him, although he comes from a prominent family in the town and was extremely popular. He was convinced I didn't want to date him and I never had a chance to explain this wasn't true.

A while ago, he called up to say goodby and told me that he was moving away. Even then I was made to cut our conversation short and hang up almost immediately.

I have tried to talk to my mother, but it's no use. She won't allow me to date him, even if he ever comes back here. Do you think I should get in touch with him through his friends and explain things, so that we can at least be friends?

"Winkey"

Yes, "Winkey," I think it would be perfectly all right, in spite of your mother's feeling, to send this boy a letter or a message, explaining the situation to him. I am always sorry to hear of a situation like this, where a parent is too intolerant to give a child the right to make his own friends.

While it is perfectly true that many difficulties present themselves when two people of opposite faiths fall in love, it is also true that such conditions can often be worked out happily. You and this boy have obviously not yet arrived at any relationship where your differences of religion present any such difficulties, and so I think all the more strongly that you have a perfect right to continue your friendship.

In any event, I think it would be unfair to both of you to let things rest on a misunderstanding. I am all for your getting in touch with this boy and setting things straight.

Pretty nightgown with puffed Sleeves

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Angelic is the proper descriptive adjective for this nightgown of appropriate heaven-blue crepe. The deep round neckline can be worn just above or just below the shoulders. The puffed sleeves are criss-crossed by set-in bands of satin ribbon. Encrusted satin leaves describe a garland around the upper seam of the form-fitting midriff. The skirt is gently gathered.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Announcing Their New-Home Address

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband (a veteran of five years' service) and I have been so fortunate as to find a home! We shall be moving in soon. I should like to send our relatives and friends some sort of notice of our new address. Would it be proper to send an engraved or printed card? And if so, how should it be worded? S. C.

Congratulations and felicitations! Very often an engraved or printed card (it's generally printed) is sent to announce the new address) and, (if it's also your good fortune)—the new telephone number:

After December 1, 1946
Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clark will be at
Two Home Place
Haven 2, Ohio
Telephone: Main 4-1234

But my suggestion is that you give a more friendly personality to your announcement by writing it on informals. Order your informals with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clark engraved i nthe centre of the first page, and, in smaller letters, your new address in the lower right corner. On the inside page you might write:

Dear Aunt Emily and Uncle Jim,

Here's the address of our new "home, sweet home"! Our telephone number is: Main 4-1234. And are we happy!

Dearest love to you both, from Tom and me.

Devotedly,
Sally

The Engagement Ring Given in Private

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have never been to an engagement-announcement party until about a month ago, and at this party the girls father rose to propose a toast to the couple (which "announced" the engagement), and then the girl's fiance, after he responded to the toast, put the engagement ring on her finger, with much ceremony. Although I don't know the proper procedure about the giving of the ring, I had always taken it for granted that the ring is given in private. A week ago I became engaged, I'm to have my ring soon, and then my parents plan to give an announcement party. Please tell us whether the ring should be given in private or at the party.

Louise

You are right..the engagement ring should be given in private, and when the engagement is to be announced at a party, the girl wears her ring at the party for the first time in public, putting it on before the party begins.

Receiving After the Recessional, At Back of Church

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When the bride and bridegroom stand in the rear of the church to greet the friends who attended the ceremony, what is the formation of the line?

I. E.

If there are many guests to be greeted in the back of the church, usually only the bride and bridegroom receive, the bride at the right of the bridegroom. If there were several members in the receiving-line (two sets of parents and bridal attendants), there undoubtedly would be too much time consumed in this procedure. But if there are only a few guests, and there is space and time enough, there may be the traditional receiving-line.

New Soapless VEL
Makes Suds Old Fashioned

by Frances Thompson
noted homemaking authority

Have you tried soapless VEL yet? It's the newest thing in washing helps. Over a million dollars have been spent in developing this new cleanser. It does everything that any good soap will do—yet it is not soap and doesn't act like soap.

OUTCLEANS— OUTLASTS SOAP SUDS

When you add warm—or even cool water to VEL, it forms light, billowy suds instantly. But just like a frothy drink, the bubbly foam soon subsides, leaving a clear solution that cuts grease and lifts out dirt in double-quick time.

WATER STAYS CLEAR

Unlike the cloudy, milky-white water which soap produces, VEL keeps the water almost transparent so that you can see what you are doing . . . see the things you are washing. A teaspoonful or so of VEL in the dishpan quickly dissolves grease making that inevitable chore of dishwashing less tedious. VEL contains no soap so leaves no soapy scum—makes china and glassware sparkle so that drying is unnecessary.

VEL LIFTS OUT DIRT

VEL literally lifts out the dirt from soiled clothes and deposits it at the bottom of basin or wash tub. Lack of suds has nothing to do with VEL's new and scientific cleansing action, so don't contrast it with soap products. You need have no fear of VEL's effect on colours or fabrics for it's a mild gentle cleanser which is as safe for woolens and nylons as it is for the weekly family wash.

WONDERFUL FOR FLOORS— WOODWORK

For the speedy removal of greasy dirt from floors, walls and woodwork, just put about a tablespoonful or two of soapless VEL in a pail and add hot or warm water. You'll find VEL makes hard rubbing and rinsing unnecessary.

THOROUGHLY TESTED

My own rigid tests with soapless VEL prove that it's foolish to cling to old-fashioned ideas about suds. And don't think VEL is just a temporary substitute for soap. It has a permanent place of its own in every home.

Thieves Take Six Tons of Sugar

Philadelphia, Nov. 29 — (AP) — Holding a watchman under pistol point four hours, thieves carted off six tons of sugar in a coal truck trailer from a chewing gum factory early today.

They would have taken even more at the Frank H. Fleer Corporation had it not been for a trick by the watchman, 42-year-old Raymond Hall.

Six times he was escorted to a watchman's courtyard box, pulling a signal which went to a protective agency. But in the excitement the thieves overlooked the 4:30 a.m. report.

Came a telephone call from the protective agency which Hall was forced to answer at pistol point. He held the hook down to continue the ring, claiming "I don't get a connection." The thieves fled as police converged on the place.

Londoners Urged To See Picture

London, Nov. 29 — (AP)—British reviewers urged Londoners to attend tonight's premiere of Jane Russell's motion picture "The Outlaw" — and take the children.

"It baffles me," said Leonard Moseley of the Daily Express in discussing the "whole fuss" about the low-cut, revealing bodice Miss Russell years in what he called a "good old horse opera." The film has had five years of censorship trouble in the United States.

"Miss Russell fully measures up to press agents' specifications," Moseley wrote, but he declared that British and French films "have shown just as much of a woman's superstructure, even though proportionately."

London county council inspectors were scheduled to decide before tonight's opening whether to make the London Pavilion owners splash a bit of concealing paint on a 30 by 60 foot poster outside the theatre, but censors already have passed the film itself, for children as well as adults.

Association Seeks 30 P. C. Increase In Insurance Rates

Toronto, Nov. 29 — (CP)—The Canadian Underwriters' Association is seeking an increase of 30 per cent in automobile insurance rates in Toronto, Hamilton and Windsor, to offset increased cost of handling claims, W. G. Butler, vice-president of the Association, said today. He estimated handling costs have gone up 40 per cent since 1939.

Butler said the rates were cut 30 per cent when gas rationing started and the number of accidents dropped.

"But since the lifting of gas rationing, the incidence of accidents has increased until now it is about where it was in 1939. Even if our rates go up to what they were that year, we will still be behind the eight-ball because of the higher cost of servicing claims."

It was predicted in Montreal yesterday that automobile insurance rates across Canada would go up after the end of the year and that the general increase might be 10 or 15 per cent.

Heavy Rains Cause The Thames River To Rise Again

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 29 — (CP Cable) —Britain's devastating autumn gales diminished today but heavy rains caused the Thames River to rise again and left a dozen main roads under water.

The worst flood was in Southwest England but pilots flying between Oxford and Windsor, Berkshire, reported large areas inundated.

The river at Windsor was 8 inches higheer than it was Thursday and houses along its bank were flooded, some to a depth of three feet.

Channel storms washed a mine close to the Folkestone, Kent, beach and it was feared heavy seas would carry it on to the harbor breakwater.

Several grass airdromes were water-logged or under water with the Cardiff, Wales, field among the worst affected. However, the storms were so widespread that even Guernsey airdrome in the Channel Islands was open oply to scheduled services.

More rain was reported on the way. Thames conservancy authorities reported the river still was rising generally throughout its course.

N.S. Premier Goes to Ottawa For Negotiations

Halifax, Nov. 29 —(CP)— Premier Angus L. Macdonald of Nova Scotia, stating that "the province is continuing negotiations with the Dominion in the hope of reaching some agreement," left by air for Ottawa today on the eve of the expiry of wartime taxation agreements between the Dominion and the province.

The agreements expire tomorrow when the province's fiscal year ends.

"The fact that the old agreement will lapse Nov. 30 will have no serious consequences to the province," Mr. Macdonald said. "We can get along, for a time at least, on the old pre-war basis and without any agreement. Even if an agreement had been reached before Nov. 30, payments made under it would not likely be made immediately but only after a lapse of some months. Should an agreement be reached later, it is quite possible that its terms could be made retroactive."

Mr. MacDonald's cabinet discussed the Dominion's peacetime financial proposals recently and announced they had reached "unanimous views" and would pass these views on to a general Liberal caucus. Following the caucus, Mr. Macdonald announced the Dominion proposals in their present form were not "wholly satisfactory" to the province.

He recalled this statment as he left here today and added: "My visit to Ottawa is being made in an endeavor to resolve the differences in the Dominion and provincial viewpoints."

DRAGS WOMAN AND BEATS HER AS SHEPROTECTS PURSE

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—Police today sought a young, well-dressed man who early today dragged Mrs. Mildred Burleigh of a street in central Toronto, dragged her to the rear of a service station and beat her when she sought to save her purse. The young mother of a small child fought back and her screams and blows finally routed her attacker.

Dogs, Airplanes Taken Aboard For Expedition

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 29—(AP)— Old and new extremes in modes of Polar transportation — sled dogs and airplines — are being loaded here aboard ships of the Byrd Expedition, which will sail Monday for the Antarctic.

Aboard the group command ship, Mt. Olympus, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's flagship, are 27 huskies, plus five pups, whelped since the sled dogs were rounded up in Labrador, Quebec, and New England. Six-foot chains permit the huskies to move about but prevent their getting close enough to each other to fight.

Supplies include enough ice cream mix to make 10,000 gallons (imagine anyone eating ice cream in the Antarctic!)

Warsaw, Nov. 29 — (AP) — The evening newspaper Weiczor Warzawy said yesterday that uranium deposits found by Polish geologists at Kryzyzatka, near Jelenia Gora in Lower Silesia, were the "richest reserves in Europe," second only to Russia's.

The paper added that research and production of the uranium deposit would be continued in 1947 but did not estimate the possible extent.

"LIKE THIS, SON . . ."—Joe Krol, Argonauts' peerless halfback, brought his son to practice yesterday afternoon, and young Dick—he'll be four years old in February—insisted on donning a helmet and Argo sweater during the practice session. His illustrious father took time out from his passing chores to show his youngster how to hold a ball to get the best possible yardage out of a kick. Young Mr. Krol maintains he's going to be a football player "just like my daddy."

HOCKEY PLAYERS NEXT IN LINE TO BE UNIONIZED

Understood Head of Baseball Guild Met Several Rangers in Boston

Boston, Nov. 29 — (CP) — The initial move to unionize professional hockey plays is underway.

First on the list of six National Hockey League clubs to be approached were the New York Rangers, the Boston Globe said yesterday. Robert Murphy, head of the American Baseball Guild who unsuccessfully attempted to make union members of the major league ball players last summer, met with several of the Rangers in Boston Wednesday night when the New Yorkers were in town to play the Bruins.

Murphy is said to have outlined his union program to the Rangers and asked them to draw up their demands. These they are to give him when next they travel to Boston — Dec. 7.

The Globe quoted an unidentified player as saying "We've played for little or nothing considering the rinks' profits all these years with the result that we've got nothing when we're through."

The newspaper added:

"Some of the reforms which the hockey players seek are higher salaries, a pension plan along the lines of that which Marty Marion of the Cardinals instituted for baseball players, an allowance of $300 or $400 to a player when traded to cover the costs of moving his family and furnishings, and a change in contracts which carry a minor-league clause calling for a substantial decrease in pay when the player is sent to the lower classification.

"This is not the first rumbling of pro hockey ranks over salaries. Several Detroit players were outspoken in their criticism of their season's remuneration a year ago and claimed they were in favor of a union. The Detroit management 'cleaned house' of as many of them as it could spare this season.

"On the Rangers' first visit Oct. 26, one of the Rangers' veterans squawked about the small contracts on the New York club and remarked: 'Wish that Murphy guy would come around to organize the hockey players.' "

UNION OFFICIALS WANT CHECKOFF SYSTEM ENDORSED

Noranda, Que., Nov. 29—(CP)—Striking members of Local 688, International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C.I.O.), today entered the eighth day of their walkout for higher wages with the smelter in Noranda mine operating at less than 50 per cent capacity.

Workers, who yesterday received a $300 cheque from the British Columbia local of the union, walked out at 7 a.m., Friday for a wage increase of 16 cents an hour, retroactive to Feb. 1, split wage differentials and a union checkoff, looming as the big stumbling block in the lockout.

Claiming a membership of 597 of the company's 1,147 employees, the union was offered a company reply of a 10 cents hourly increase retroactive to Nov. 1, but no union checkoff, a point union officials are determined to obtain.

The picket line parading in front of the company's main gate is orderly and quiet.

H. L. Roscoe, vice president and general manager of the Toronto-directed company, said the mine is willing to meet representatives of the union at any time "whenever they have something further they want to have discussed."

Previous union announcements said the local was prepared to hold out for six months if necessary.

Sports Roundup

New York, Nov. 29. (CP) — Through the portals of the American league, to paraphrase somebody or other, pass the greatest number if not the most beautiful of all hockey managers and coaches. . . If the Pacific Coast League, for instance, five years are bossed by former A.H.L. stars. . . . Bob Gracie, who tied for American League scoring honors with teammate Bobby Walton of Pittsburgh in 1944-45, is in his second season at the helm of Hollywood Wolves. . . The four-year-old lady had her first track trial Thursday after long convalescence from a leg injury. . . . She'll get to the races sometime after Santa Anita opens Dec. 28 and Mayer plans to nominate her for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap March 1.

"Lead that bird a bit more—say three feet. . . ." counselled a guide. . . .The friend missed again and the guide advised a six-foot lead. . . .This went on and on until the guide spotted a pigeon motionless on a barn roof. . . .The friend fired and moments later the unscathed pigeon soared casually away. . . Fifty-four players — including Hank Borowy, Jim Turner, Charley Ruffin, Marius Russo, Bill Dickey, Joe Gordon, Buddy Hassett, Ernie Bonham and Atley Donald—have left New York Yankees since Larry MacPhail brought the American League Baseball Club before the 1945 season started. . . ODDS WILL LIKELY SHORTEN BEFORE SATURDAY'S GAME

Experts Think if Bombers Can Stop Krol They Have Chance to Whip Argos

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 29. (CP)—"The odds are wrong, yep, I tell yah, the odds—they're just not right."

You could hear him from quite a bit away. It was none other than Lew Hayman, the Syracuse expatriate and football man.

It would be only one guess today what he's talking about-the Saturday Grey Cup Football go between Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Toronto Argonauts.

There would be few in this town who would argue that Lew does not know his football. Lew once master-minded these same Argonauts who last year turned back the bomber bid for the Dominion championship 35-0.

Says Lew:

"When Argonauts walloped Winnipeg a year ago they were favored at the same odds of 1 to 4. "This year's Winnipeg edition is a much-improved team."

That is the very stuff that greying coach Jack West, a man approaching his 50 mark, has said.

In the opinion of experienced football folk West kept his men under wraps when he worked them out at Oakwood Stadium. With loquacious Lew were Ches McCance and Lou Mogul, both ex-bombers and both, like Lew, now connected with Montreal Alouettes.

Remembering that from his performances with Alouettes and Bombers here McCance is quite some footballer, here's what he has to say:

Bombers have Chance

"I definitely think the Bombers have a chance at 3 to 1; knowing what the Bombers have done previously and knowing what they showed against the Alouettes I can't help but take the current odds."

Or Lou Mogul speaking of the bombers: "They are a well-drilled club and if Wally Dobler goes well they've got a chance, particularly if they stop Joe Krol."

The way Lou Mogul see it Bombers have a line capable of that but he admits only King Joes kicking will make a difference—that Joe can probably outkick Ddbler by 15 yards.

Here and there in Toronto you'd find sentiment that held odds would shorten possibly to 2 to 1 by game time and there was a fair share of Winnipeg money showing at 4-1.

Lew is the first to admit that his heavier Alouette team, which took a beating in its first pre-season exhibition game, gave the Bombers a physical beating they may never have recovered from in all their season of league play. When they were fresh, they were really fresh.

Winnipeg Outweighed

Added Hayman: "Winnipeg will be outweighed along the line but they will not be outcharged."

Already Bombers have determined Krol isn't to get much chance to toss his vaunted forwards. If he does get them away, Copeland won't get much chance to catch them.

"We'll be in on Krol— but not to shake hands," said West.

If you would rave a word from the East here it is, from the Argonauts' top man, Tedder Morris: "The Argos are at least two touchdowns worse than last year but we've beaten better teams this year."

Ontario Athletes Perform Well In Berwick Marathon

(By The Canadian Press)

Six Ontario athletes showed well at Berwick, Pa., yesterday in the 37th renewal of the Berwick marathon — a rugged nine-mile 200-yard grind. Winner of the race was Harris Browning Ross of Woodbury, N.J., who finished in 48 mins. and 35 secs., only 100 yards ahead of Hamilton's Walter Fedorick. In third place was Johnny Kelly of Boston, Mass., seeking his fifth straight Berwick title. Robert (Scotty) Rankin of Preston, Ab Morton of Galt and Wilmer Sheridan of Watertown, representing Ontario clubs, finished in fourth, fifth and seventh places respectively.

Two other Ontario runners finished the course. Bill Memorott of Galt was in the 14th place and Neal Farrel of Hamilton in 17th. The Ontario runners were from the Hamilton Olympic Club and the Galt Track Club.

Manager Jack Adams of the Detroit Red Wings yesterday announced a four-player swap with the Indianapolis Capitals of the American Hockey League by which forwards Lloyd (Red) Doran and Toni Licari move up to Detroit and rookies Jerry Couture and Les Douglas join the Capitals.

After two doctors gave nine Holy Spirit high school football players oxygen at Atlantic City, N.J., yesterday, they defeated Atlantic City High 18-13. The doctors said the players had heart actions after the game as if they hadn't played at all.

In Basketball Association of America games played yesterday, St. Louis Bombers won from Chicago Stags at Chicago 75-73; Pittsburgh Ironmen downed Boston Celtics at Boston 59-55; Detroit Falcons won 68-55 over Philadelphia Warriors at Philadelphia and New York Knickerbockers took Providence Steam Rollers 60-58 at Providence.

The famed touchdown twins of the United States Army football team — Felix (Doc) Blanchard and Davis, will be invited to play in the annual East-West charity football game at San Francisco New Year's Day, it was reported at San Francisco yesterday.

DEFENDING CHAMP IS FAR BEHIND

By WILLIAM GOBER, Jr.

Orlando, Fla., Nov. 29—(AP)—Defending champion Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., and other big guns of the winter golfing circuit lagged far behind today as second round play began in the $10,000 Orlando Open over the tricky Dubsdread course.

The lead was shared by Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., former P. P. A. National champion, and Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., who battled brisk crosswinds to card six under par 65's in the first round yesterday.

Trailing them with 66's were Art Doering of Chicago and Ray Hill of Shreveport, La., bunched one stroke back were chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va.; Lew Worsham of Washington, D. C., and Dutch Harrison of Little Rock, Ark.

The opening round was not so much an exhibition of dazzling golf as it was a collapse on the part of Hogan and Slammin' Sam Snead, long-driving threat from Hot Springs, Va. Hogan had 75 and Snead carded par 71.

The top-heavy field of 210 players was pared to the leading 100 and tie scorers today. The final round of the 72-hole event will be played Sunday.

NEVER CONSIDERED

Athens, Nov. 29 (Reuters) — Philip Dragoumis, Greek war minister said yesterday that British armed intervention against guerilla bands in Greece never had been considered a possibility. Dragoumis was reported on Monday to have said during a tour of Macedonia that the Allies would supply extra equipment and arms for reinforcing the Greek army.

Hamilton Tigers Still Leading Senior 'A' O.H.A.

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton's venerable Tigers, unbeaten in six starts this season, take on Hamilton Pats in an OHA senior "A" fixture tonight while Toronto Staffords travel to Stratford for a spot of Indian-fighting.

The Tigers, whose tattered uniforms and collective age earned them the fearsome nickname of "dirty old men" and the Eastern Canada title last season, wear new livery this year but their lineup and position in the standings are virtually unchanged.

Victors over their younger Hamilton rivals in both their previous meetings, the Cats are a comfortable four points ahead of Pats and Staffords with 12 points. Stratford and Owen Sound Mohawks trail the five-team loop with a single victory apiece. Staffords took the measure of the Indians by a slim 4-3 margin in their only previous meeting.

In the junior "A" loop Barrie Flyers have a chance to tie Stratford Kroehlers for second place as they entertain the winless St. Catharines Falcons in the only game scheduled.

Thoroughbreds From Ireland Flown to U.S.

Burbank, Calif., Nov. 29. (AP) A transport plane arrived from Shannon, Eire, yesterday with a load of Irish thoroughbreds which the naw owners say will be entered in the winter meeting at Santa Anita.

Charles Leavitt, trainer in charge, said the six horses of Anglo-Irish stock were in excellent shape on arrival. They travelled in individual stalls two abreast in the fuselage of a DC-4 plane.

CORNERSTONE YIELDS ONLY RUST AND MUD

St. Thomas, Nov. 29 — (CP)—Removal Thursday of a heavy tin box from the cornerstone of the original First United Church building laid nearly 75 years ago, caused deep disappointment to officials of the church.

It was anticipated the box would contain valuable old records; instead only a layer of rust and mud remained.

Moisture had seeped in to destroy the contents. The church building is being wrecked, following a fire last March.

TRUCK IN FLAMES

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—A truck driven by Kenneth Lacey burst into flames last night after it struck Bertha Palmeteer at a downtown intersection. The woman was treated in hospital for leg and forehand lacerations.

Firemen extinguished the blaze after the truck had suffered heavy damage. Lacey was not injured.

Only 50-50 Proposition Home Team Will Win Records Show; Leafs Have Best Road Average

(By The Canadian Press)

Mr. John Q. Fan who figures complacently that the odds are all in favor of his home-town National Hockey League club winning on home ice might just as well get that idea out of his head in a hurry. It's just about a 50-50 proposition, brother.

Let's examine the record. Tossing aside the eight tie games in 47 played so far, the visiting team has romped off with 17 and the home team with only 22. That is an average of .436 for the visitors. If you count the ties as distasteful as losses for the home boys, the visiting teams come out on top with a .532 average.

What does it all add up to? Here's what president Clarence Campbell of the N. H. L. has to say: "It only goes to prove that the teams are so closely balanced no club can count on victory at home or away."

At the same time, Mr. Campbell, who has just completed a swing around the circuit, freely admits that the situation is 'something pretty hard for the home-town fans to absorb.'

The best average for foreign-ice victories so far has been set by Toronto Maple Leafs with .444, four wins in nine games.

Right behind Leafs come the co-holders of the league leadership, Montreal Canadiens, with 3 wins in seven away-from-home games, an average of .429.

New York's unpredictable Rangers, with the heaviest road schedule, have won four of 11 for a .364 average. Chicago Black Hawks have won two of six foreign games for a .333 average; and Boston Bruins and Detroit Red Wings are tied with .286, two wins in seven games.

The record also shows the plight of the home clubs is fast becoming worse. In the last eight games the home-town boys have taken it on the chin six times. What's more the tie-game splurge has suddenly ended. The last deadlock was on Nov. 13, a 4-4 argument between Canadiens and Rangers at New York.

HOCKEY RULES

By BILL GRAY

"OFF-SIDES"

At Attacking Blue Line

Rule 63, Sec. (a)

The position of the player's skates and not that of his stick shall be the determining factor in all instances in deciding an "off-side." A player is "off-side" when both skates are completely over the outer edge of the line.

Rule 2, Sec. (a)

Players of an attacking team must not precede the puck into the Attacking Zone.

Rule 72, Sec. (b)

For violation of this rule, the play is stopped, and puck shall be faced in the Neutral Zone at face-off spot nearest the Attacking Zone of the offending team.

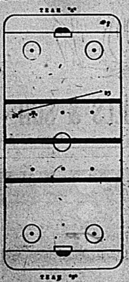

Illustration:

Player B4 passes the puck to player B3, however, if player B3 crosses the line "A" ahead of the puck, play shall be stopped and face-off shall be at the nearest spot in the Neutral Zone from where the pass was made and near the Attacking Zone of the offending team or at spot marked "X".

Note: A player actually propelling the puck who shall cross the line ahead of the puck, shall not be considered "off-side."

HERSHEY BEARS INCREASE FIRST PLACE MARGIN

(By The Canadian Press)

With a five-game winning streak, the high-flying Hershey Bears increased their first-place margin over New Haven Ramblers to four points in the Eastern Division of the American Hockey League by trouncing Providence Reds 10-2 last night.

Ramblers meanwhile battled Indianapolis Capitals to a 2-2 tie.

After Providence goal by Victor Grigg early in the first period, Bears poured seven goals into the Providence net before the session ended. Jack McGill scored three and William Thomson, Paul Ronty, Hyman Buller and Arthur Bruce the others.

Slobodian, Bruce and Rosie Rizzini made it a rout, turning in 3 more tallies for Bears in the last two stanzas. Ray LaPlante was the other Providence scorer.

Indianapolis Caps came from behind twice to tie the Ramblers with Lloyd Doran notching the tying marker for Caps.

Birm Burns of Ramblers sank a goal as the light flashed signalling the end of the game. Referee Rabbit McVeigh at first ruled the goal good, but was overruled by time-keeper Charles Glover.

Jim Conacher was the other scorer for Caps, and Mel Read and Burns tallied for Ramblers.

In the only other game, Springfield Indians and St. Louis Flyers fought to a 2-2 deadlock. Flyers took a 2-1 lead on counts by Harry Liscombe and Joe Gladu. But in the third period Harry Frost counted for Indians, knotting the score for keeps. Ray Voll accounted for the earlier India score.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

"Belleville," remarks the Peterborough scribe in his pillar, "with thoughts of reviving the old C.O.B.L. next warm April, will install floodlights for baseball at the Quinte Fair Grounds next spring, have already purchased 30-foot poles and are ordering reflectors from the C.G.E. These are to be set up in the spring. This little scoop (don't you just love this) will come as a surprise to Bella Villa ball fans, but no doubt will be a welcome one."

* * *

Tsk, tsk, tsk, and we thought it was a deep dark secret. This little scoop celebrated its eighth monthly haircut the other day and the trimmings were decidedly grey. Those poles, m'lad, have been lying around up around Cobourg way so long with a Belleville tag attached to them, that they are now part of the landscape.

* * *

M'sieu Perdue's "little scoop" is just about a year old. In fact both baseball and softball associations at their annual meetings last spring were informed by City Parks Board officials that the lights would be installed by August of this year. The execs. accordingly laid out their schedules with thoughts of floodlight playoffs in the autumn. And now an out-of-town bloke comes along and scoops us on the story. Ah, 'tis a sad life.

* * *

As a matter of fact, the situation re lights in the Fair Grounds has reached the point where a lot of sports fans in this city would adopt the attitude of Pat when he saw his first giraffe. "It's a dom lie," he shouted, looking at the strange animal. "I don't believe it."

* * *

Arena Manager Walter Gerow's "Santa Claus Night for Wrestling Fans" tonight when he throws into the ring two feature main jousts is rousing keen interest. And well it might for Gerow not only has his re-match main go between Vic Christie and Karl Davis but in the other feature slot he has one of these spectacular Tag Team bouts.

* * *

The four-man brawl matches the team of Ben and Mike Sharpe versus Strangler Bob Wagner and Olaf Olson. Just what Olson and Wagner may come up with against the mountainous young Sharpe brothers, is hard to predict but one thing is certain and that is that it won't be anything gentle. Olson likes to play rough but Wagner is way out in front of him in that regard and Strangler Bob always has something new to spring both on the opposition and the customers.

* * *

However the handsome and magnificently built Sharpe lads have been good enough to beat the Russian team in Toronto last month and their team-play is said to be terrific. Bend out the walls Walt and let 'em at it.

* * *

Pat Flanagan opens the big night in the first bout against Al Korman to start off a mat program that is unprecedented here in the list of stars that will take part.

* * *

And speaking of pachydermic activities, "Da Preem" Carnera, the Italian Alp, is continuing his merry way along the victory trail knocking off some of the best the United States has to offer. He has won well over 100 bouts and seems to be invincible. And he is packing away a lot of Uncle Sam's dinero in his size eighteen sock for future reference. The good-natured Man Mountain has a pleasing way about him—also a careful one. He learned more than one lesson in his last sojourn here and the boys won't catch him napping again.

* * *

Referee Eddie Burke of the American Hockey League names his all-time, all-star "non-back-checking" forward line. He slyly admits that he never back-checked in his life (a point any fan who saw him perform with the Boston Tigers or Cubs in the old Can-Am League, or with Syracuse in the Int-Am League, will grant) by placing himself at centre. For his wings he picks Chuck Conacher and Cecil (Babe) Dye. Here is a trio that could really whip the puck into the twine. Their shots ranked with the fastest in the game, but how they hated to dig in and back-check. If there was such a position as "standing wing" in hockey all three would play that position. Each would be in a class by himself not only in blazing the rubber into the cage but in standing at the blue line waiting for someone to dig up the disc and pass it to them.

* * *

Cliff Roach of the Providence Reds is another son of a former professional hockey star to play in monied ranks. Cliff's father is Mickey Roach, a star in the International and National Leagues. He later coached Windsor and Rochester in the former circuit. Cliff, like his father, is a centre. Up until a week ago he was playing-coach with the Truro (Nova Scotia) Bearcats in the Maritime Big Five League and at the time of his turning pro was the leading scorer in that circuit.

* * *

Eddie Shore strengthened his Springfield Indians when he secured big Jack Portland, Jack Quilty and Joe Benoit for Geo. Pargeter in a three-cornered deal which involved Springfield, Buffalo and Montreal. Quilty, a centre, won the "outstanding rookie" award in the NHL in 1940-41. Benoit, a wing, and Portland, a defenceman, both won all-star honors prior to enlisting in 1942.

* * *

Standout netminders like Nick Damore of the Philadelphia Rockets in the American Hockey League, who for over the past ten years has been one of the greatest in all hockey, some times come in for an unjustified "riding" when they would be hailed as stars if given some protection.

* * *

The player in hockey upon whose head more abuse is piled than any other is the goaltender. Some times adverse criticism is deserved. More frequently the goalie becomes a mere human target what little or no protection. Many fans fail to understand this and heap all the blame on the head of the hapless goalie, booing him for failing to make impossible stops, sarcastically applauding when he makes a simple save.

* * *

Goaltenders who were only average have been made to look like great stars as long as they had a strong defence and efficient back-checking forwards in front of them. Only last season a hockey writer asked Lester Patrick, dean of hockey managers and coaches, whether he rated a certain goaler with the best he had ever seen

"I can't tell," Lester replied. "He has such a strong team in front of him that I have never really seen him tested under fire."

* * *

Speaking of Johnny Quilty, now with the Springfield Indians reminds us of the story when Johnny wore the uniform of the RCAF and was undergoing instruction at No. 5 ITS here. The station had a pretty fair team but were being knocked off by the stronger service teams from Mountain View and Trenton. Towards the end of the season someone recognized Johnny languidly looking at his mates desperately trying to pull a game out of the fire, and let out a yelp.

* * *

"Holy Mackeral," yelled the future air marshal. "Johnny, whereinell did you come from?"

Johnny removed a toothpick from his mouth. "I.T.S." he said.

"Then why ainicha out there playin' with 'em" demanded the excited rookie.

Johnny looked up and smiled. "No one asked me to play" he drawled.

* * *

However, Johnny did go out for a couple of games after that and his playmaking from the defence sparked the squad to well-deserved victories.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 29—(CP) — If you'd seen him 18 years ago it would have been in Calgary and he'd have been the same slender, long-legged lightweight of today but with this difference — then Johnny Longden was close to broke.

He maybe didn't have quite so much iron in his hands in those days, nor so much track sense. Still young Johnny, at 18, knew he could ride and knew he wanted to ride.

As it turns out that was about all he needed, along with a break or two, and now you find Longden still booting them home today but thinking of retirement soon, his mounts having won something like $5,000,000.

That's a long haul from the Calgary day when galloping Johnny counted his silver in one hand, finally made up his mind he'd stay in the jockey business and then struck out from Calgary in a box car for the little racetracks of the Utah outlands.

And it's a still longer haul from the coal-mucking fields of Wakefield, Eng., whence came Johnny's people when he was a boy to settle near Taber, Alta. Lucky for Johnny they did, because there was another kid thereabouts whose dad had a farm and some horses. These kids learned to ride together — deep in the saddle like the cowboys, hunched up over the mane like the jocks and even standing with a leg on each horse like the old Romans.

They became jocks together, were close friends until early this year when the other kid — George (the Iceman) Woolf and one of the greatest of all jocks —died from a racetrack spill.

At 109 pounds Longden has no peer, the only jockey in United States turf history to ride more than 2,400 winners since his official record started back in 1928 and his mounts' winnings of $4,708,607 don't take in the 140-odd races won this year.

How much of his share of those purses Johnny has is his business. But he's careful with his money, has a ranch in Yerington, Nev., and hopes to retire there before long. Almost without exception his purse total has crept upward year after year from $8,282 in 1928 until 1945 when his mounts collected $981,977.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

"Les Enfants du Paradis," entitled for English-speaking audiences, "Children of Paradise," is the longest, most expensive and most ambitious film the French movie industry has turned out, and it is very good.

The troubles Pathe-Cinema had making and preserving the film during the German occupation were worse than those encountered by the famous "Couer de la Nation" ("Heart of a Nation"), the film of which was buried outside Paris to prevent its falling into enemy hands. Two years in the making, it cost 60,000,000 francs ($1,250,000 at the rate of exchange when it was completed just before the liberation of France). Its running time is just under three hours.

Jacques Chabrier, now Pathe-Cinema representative in the United States, who worked on the film in France, describes the production:

"The story of four men of different backgrounds, education and taste, who love the same woman for reasons that are peculiar to each one's character, could not be told in the 90-minute length imposed on all films. But Director Marcel Carne is not a man to compromise . . . A way had to be found to circumvent the occupation law, so Carne announced 'Children of Paradise' as two distinct films, the sequel dealing with the same character 10 years later."

The film which North American audiences will see is made of these two halves. Crowded with characters and incident, it stars three of France's movie idols: Jean-Louis Barrault, Pierre Brasseur and Arletty in a story about theatrical people in Paris in 1848.

The Queen Elizabeth can be renamed the Hollywood Ferry if she has many more passenger lists like those for her arrival and departure at New York the middle of this week.

Top on the list of arrivals was James Mason, the stormy petrel of British movies who has been reported in the past few months as (a) retiring from film acting, (b) setting up his own producing company, (c) coming to the United States to make a Hollywood movie, (d) coming to the United States for a sight-seeing holiday.

Definite information about Mr. Mason: He has bought a house in Bermuda, and the Hollywood moguls have declared an open season for catching Mason.

Among the headliners who arrived were Deborah Kerr, star of "Vacation from Marriage", on her way to play opposite Clark Gable in "The Hucksters"; Mr. and Mrs. Pat O'Brien, returning from the royal movie command performance in London and an audience with Pope Pius XII; Jack Buchanan, the British actor-producer, and Madeleine Carrol.

Off to Britain on the liner's return trip were Mrs. Rex Harrison, better known as Lilli Palmer; Ian C. Javal, managing director of Gaumont British Films, and Jack Warner, executive of Warner Bros.

New York's jadded and out-of-pocket movie goers have finally dug in their toes and collectively balked like an angry mule at regular admission prices of $2.40, even with a glittering carrot like "Best Years of Our Lives", dangling before them.

This colossal price was slapped on by the picture's producer, Samuel Goldwyn, when superb reviews showed he had a hit on his hands, but resulting business was so bad over last weekend that on Monday the top price was lowered to $1.80 and attendance boomed.

This seems to be as much as New Yorkers are willing to pay for a movie even accompanied by a stage show.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

In bridge are many rabbits who hate to change old habits. Nor will they switch positions to better their conditions. And so, what we put up with, you shouldn't stick a pup with.

Many a bridge nut has become accustomed to his own or expert's way of determining bids. Even when the method is not precise, he is cold to any suggestions that will improve his results.

Normal humans are that way, too, in some matters. Like politics and religion and the things they marry. So, there are times when I may as well be talking to the wall.

Take the jump responses to an opening bid of one. Many players do all right with their jumps. But think how much more accurate they would be if they installed the precise Horse Sense rules.

In Horse Sense an immediate jump is a gob of definite essential news to an opener. It tells him exactly how many tricks are in their hands. At the same time it tells him of sure tricks and slam chances.

Cast your optics over this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠A K	♠J 6 4
♥A Q 6 3	♥K 5
♦Q	♦K J 5
♣9 8 6 4	♣A K Q 7 5

South opens with a bid of one heart. North responds at once with a one-jump takeout to three clubs. Right then and there the partner in south knows that a slam should be probed.

An immediate one-jump takeout guarantees not less than six tricks. Among them is promised two sure tricks. With six tricks in his own hand, south already sees 12 tricks and plenty of sure tricks.

Until trump has been decided, it may take 11 tricks to make a game. An opener promises five. A jump promises tricks enough for a game. So, the jumper says he has the other six.

Other good methods will reach the same final bid. But not always with the same rigid acknowledgement of the exact number of tricks.

When you have a slight guess you are tempted to press.

Mrs. Minnie May Still Fighting Claim for Mine

Vancouver, Nov. 29 — (CP) — Into the legal arena again today goes Mrs. Minnie Meal May, still fighting her claim for the Gibson silver-lead mine near interior Kaslo, B.C., in a 30-year litigation that already has carried through British Columbia courts, the Supreme Court of Canada and the Privy Council in London.

This time Mrs. May is appealing before the B. C. Appeal Court the dismissal by Chief Justice W. B. Farris in Supreme Court last September of her action against the Daybreak Mining Company, Ltd., and Hilyard Martin of Trail, B.C.

She claims the mine, said to be worth $1,000,000 and says "Back in 1918 I sold stock myself in order to raise money for the mine wages and I still have hopes that I will get justice."

She has lived in Vancouver for the last 15 years and in her hotel room works on a pile of documents, the evidence she hopes some day will bring her the mine despite repeated legal setbacks.

Long ago she dismissed the last of her solicitors to conduct the case herself.

In court she presents her arguments with vigor and determination.

"This is terrible," she told Chief Justice Farris when he dismissed her case last September. "Where will I find a judge who will hear me?"

"You have had more consideration than any other litigant," the Chief Justice told her. "We have now reached the stage where patience is no longer a virtue."

On that occasion she said she would take the case to the Privy Council again, if necessary.

Nationalization Of Transportation Brings Protests

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 29 —(CP Cable) —The government's plan to nationalize the bulk of Britain's inland transportation precipitated a flood of editorial comment in London morning newspapers today.

A bill calling for nationalization of inland transportation now is before the House of Commons.

The Daily Herald, Labor., described the bill as "another great Socialist measure," but the Conservative Daily Mail labelled it "a cumbrous, bureaucratic measure which will further burden and restrict the free play of British life and commerce."

The Liberal News Chronicle said that the nationalization of railways in particular would bring better service. The Daily Graphic, Conservative, however, saw it as "a crazy edifice of centralization."

The Daily Herald said: "Coordination of transport long has been advocated by people who are far from Socialist in outlook," and added: "A country cannot be governed properly in Labor's way unless a united transport as a whole is merged with the general economic plan."

The Daily Mail said: "The very essence of transport is elasticity. Now it is to be confined within the hampering rigidity of state control. At the top will be the transport commission — the new all-powerful Big Five — deriving their authority from the (transport) minister who appoints them."

The News Chronicle, while approving the nationalization of railways, said that the nationalization proposal for road haulage was more controversial since "it is not in the public interest that long-distance haulers enjoying the benefit of the free public highways should compete with the railways without control."

The Daily Graphic said: "The proposed new transport octopus is so vast and with tenacles so wide-stretching that it cannot possibly operate efficiently. Even the present main-line groups are considered by many railway experts to be too large for maximum efficiency."

It added: "Even railway hotels come under the blanket of nationalization — a step hardly likely to recommend the country to tourists accustomed to personal service."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma had to make a speech at her class reunion last night on account of being Chairman of the Committy, and this morning at breakfist pop said, Now, my dear, I want to hear all about the speech.

There's plenty to hear, as you'll learn to your serprise, ma said. At the last minute of the eleventh hour I decided to forget all about my prepared address and just stand up there and improvise, she said, and pop said, Yee gods.

I had a gassly presentiment that I'd forget all my carefully remembered lines and just stand there stuttering to the embarrissment of all, ma said. So I took the bull by the 4 horns and made up my mind I'd face those women and just say whatever happened to enter my mind the way an improvising violinist lets the notes ripple from his violin as they please, and my dear, my speech was the high light and the crowning glory of the reunion, she said, and pop said, For Peet sake, you mean you got away with it?

Of course, ma said. I didn't falter once, and yet strangely enough it came out even longer than my prepared speech. I stood up there and I said, "No written werds of mine could possibly do justice to this glorious occasion, so I am going to say whatever comes into my head, and nothing more fitting could possibly come into my head than Shakesbeer's great sollilloquee, To Be or Not to Be." So with that I recited "To Be or Not to Be" just as I recited it at the graduation exercizes. I still remember it so well I can rattle it off like a salad dressing without moment's notice. Really, William, it was an inspiration. Even if the gerls didn't applaud me, it wouldn't of looked very respectfill of them not to applaud Shakesbeer, so I had everything to gain and nothing to lose, ma said.

The result being pop had to drink a exter cup of coffee.

BURNED FINGERS

CHAPTER 9.

Mollie's eyes were shining like blue stars; she seemed absent-minded and dreamy. The other two girls watched her with the vague wistfulness younger women feed for the companion whose destiny is decided, whose hand has been taken by a stronger hand for all the days of her life to come.

The younger daughter of the house, Marg'ret, was away at boarding school, but Jennifer and Ellen had had company while disrobing, for two other girls were staying in the house, all the aunts had come in for more or less yawning reviews of the party, and motherly Mrs. Evans had kissed both her small niece and Mollie's little guest good night. Jennifer was in a completely exalted state; every phase of this visit was more enchanting than the last; joy was sweeping through her mind and heart like a river in spate. This was the way people ought to live: laughing and feasting, singing and dancing, kissing each other.

"What you did to my poor brother Eugene, Jennifer!" Mollie said. "Oh, my feet—I'm ruined!" she added in a whisper, trying to draw off her slippers.

Jennifer looked like a demurely smiling child with the couch covers drawn up to her chin and her rumpled head on the pillow. She said nothing.

"I hear he was giving you the whole of the advanced catechism out on the balcony," Mollie went on. "Isn't he the crackpot? Pa says he's smart. D'you like Dan, Ellen?"

"I think he's perfect—for you," said Ellen, cold-creaming her hands as she lay in bed.

"Meaning you wouldn't have him," said Mollie amiably.

"Meaning that I'm afraid that I'm just a trifle fastidious," Ellen confessed with a sigh. Jennifer sat up with a gasp.

"Why, you couldn't want anyone more—more wonderful than Dan Moore!" she stammered indignantly. Mollie, at the dressing table, merely gave her a quiet glance over her shoulder. But later, when the lights were out and clocks were striking two, she came to kneel down and say her prayers with her elbows on Jennifer's couch. Jennifer went to sleep to the quiet clicking of rosary beads.

She went straight to the office with Mollie in the morning, not seeing any of the other members of the family except Mollie's mother. Her head was still full of the fun, excitement, glory of the visit, and when she arrived home at five o'clock that afternoon she could not be explicit enough in telling Betty and the girls about it. She sat in the kitchen with Faddy in pajamas quiet in her lap, and went into all the details with the exception of Eugene's strange and mysterious observations. Betty was deeply interested; the little girls asked questions.

Dinner was frankfurters heated up, and bakery rolls and tea; there were some lollipops in a little paper bag shoved behind the kitchen clock for the children's dessert. Faddy had had a cold; she was gentle and quiet in Jennifer's arms. Once she reproached her mildly.

"You din' come home las' night, Dennfer, and I cried, din' I, Mama?"

"I'm home tonight," said Jennifer, hugging her.

Everything seemed very flat. The day's work in the office had been long and dull, shot with dreamy recollections and cross recollections. Jennifer wanted more of the Evans atmosphere; she looked with an ache of envy at Mollie, who was going home to all that warmth and love as a matter of course.

"Will Dan be out to see you tonight, Mollie?" she had asked during the day.

"Will he be out tonight!" Mollie had answered with a cryptic laugh. "He'll have me half murdered," she had added with relish.

Jennifer, when Faddy and Elna were in bed, played solitaire, listened to the radio and, while Betty manipulated the dials, tried to imagine what Mollie and Dan would talk about. They would be sated on the big davenport in the parlor; the others would tactfully withdraw to the common sitting room next to their mother's room upstairs. Jennifer felt lonely and dull and weary, thinking about it.

And creeping in under all the other memories, insisting upon engaging her thoughts, returning again and again, was the picture of happy Mollie on her father's arm at the head of the table, of Dan's' proud smile when that father turned the loved daughter over to her new guardian. Jennifer had not at the time thought that this particular scene would impress her more than any other but she could not forget it. It would be sweet to have a father say such things of one; it would be wonderful to be so treasured, so protected....

"I have no one," Jennifer said half aloud.

Betty looked up from her puzzle.

"Won't come out?" she asked of the card game Jennifer was playing.

"Nope," Jennifer answered, letting it rest at that. "Perhaps," she mused, "if I had a father he would be proud of me—he would put his arm about me that way and they would all laugh and clap...."

When tears fell on her cards she looked up quickly to see if Betty had noticed anything. But Betty was absorbed in her crossword puzzle. Jennifer surreptitiously wiped her eyes on her knockles, went on playing.

"Betty, do you think the most important thing in the world is to be good?"

"Well, I don't know that it's the most important thing," Betty began cautiously. "Well, yes, I guess it it," she conceded. "If Clint Slade had been decent I wouldn't have had such a fight of it all these years and my children might have had a decent home out at Ingleside or somewhere," she went on grumblingly. "But no, he had to run around with that Bill Obermann gang—billiard parlors and saloons!"

"You're good, Betty," Jennifer said suddenly. Betty looked up in surprise, color spreading slowly in her common, pretty little face.

"Working the way I do, and with the kids and all, I guess I don't have much chance to be anything else."

"Oh yes, you do!" Jennifer said somberly from her own bitter knowleage. "Anyone does. Look at Seely's sister."

"What d'y'ou know about Seely's sister?" Betty asked uneasily.

"Oh, just that she—she goes off with men. I heard you and Seely talking about it years ago when I was only a kid."

"I didn't know you'd take in any of that," Betty said, somewhat dashed. "Kids are funny; they seem to take things in througn their pores! Yep," she added in a slightly resentful tone, "Mabel has it pretty soft. They give her jewelry and perfume and flowers and candy, to say nothing of money. I suppose I could have easily got into tnat kind of racket," Betty mused, turning off the radio and looking thoughtfully into space, "but excuse me; I've got the girls to think about."

"You mean Mabel takes money?" Jennifer asked, swallowing.

"Well, of course she does. What else do you think she lives on with that apartment on Ellis and all those long-legged dolls!"

"Betty, the world is awfully bad, isn't it?"

"Well, no, I wouldn't say that," Betty began, troubled. Jennifer, sorry to have distressed her, was glad when a special crime program was due on the radio and Betty became absorbed in it once more.

She sat on, idly fingering her cards, idly watching Betty, her thoughts wandering far and near. But it was the goodness rather than the badness of the world with which she had been suddenly impressed. Betty, divorced, deserted, burdened with the responsibility of two children for so many years, Betty, not bright nor educated nor privileged nor helped, was yet struggling always toward her own fragmentary ideal of a code. You must be clean and you must be honest and you must do your best for those about you. If any neighbor came to Betty with a story of near-by suffering or loss, Betty always had a quarter or an old blanket, a child's meal or the willingness to escort some poor old derelict to any destined haven, to offer.

And Betty was only one of the hundreds, the thousands of poor, simple, humble folk, Jennifer mused, who came to these rows of dreary homes every night and to millions of others in all the cities of the world, doing their best to be philosophical and honest, to avoid rough talk and cursing, to preserve girlhood pure and boyhood sober, to pay bills and discharge family obligations—guarding some beloved defective child, year after year, all their lives long. The great move was toward goodness, not badness; nobody preached badness, but at every street corner there was some reminder of the underlying eternal struggle to be good. The churches, chapels, meeting halls, the Y and the Salvation Army, the Bible quotation which ran across the editorial page of the morning paper, the radio's continual urging for better health, better home conditions, the educational advantages on all sides—yes, all this led to Eugene's dream of a good world. It only meant a world in which everyone could be good, and as anyone could be good who wanted to be that was simple.

Shame burned in Jennifer's cheeks. It wasn't so simple. Pitfalls were everywhere. How easily she had fallen into one! She had known all the way along that it was wrong, but it had been so sweet! So sweet to feel herself loved, to see the new shine in her eyes, the new transparent glow in her cheeks. to have a man's eyes continually adoring her, a man's big arm steering her across street crossings, a man's deep laugh ready to meet her most casual word—oh, it had been a happy time. But it had meant that when she was at Mollie's, when all those giddy, innocent, older girls had been chattering around her, she had felt herself strangely alien—older and disillusioned and not ready to be teased about flirtations and beaus. Never again to think flirtation a game, men stupid, undeveloped creatures helpless in the hands of women.

The days began to go by; the early Western spring came in with lingering warm twilights lighting the shabby houses on the city's hills, and lilacs white and purple filling the florists' windows. Jennifer could leave her coat at home now; the girls in the office talked of early church service and of Easter clothes. Elna had her tonsils out, and she and Faddy were asked to spend six weeks in a summer camp and began packing their clothes in April in glad anticipation.

Nothing was changed, thought Jennifer, not her clothes nor affairs at home nor the heaviness of her heart. Of Sid Borrows she heard nothing; the exciting weeks in which she had told him that she loved him and he had said that he would always love her slipped into the past. It was five months, six months, it was getting to be autumn again, and nothing was changed. Nothing, she said to herself, ever would change. Betty had had five years of struggle. What would ever make it easier? Faddy's marriage? Faddy was eight years old.

Yet there was change, and great change, had she but known it. She had been awakened like many another girl through shame and pain, and she was putting out new feelers daily toward that bettering of her life, of her mind, of her knowledge of men and women and things that would bring her nearer to the far dim goal that was goodness and wisdom like Eugene's, that was culture and luxury like those she had once dimly glimpsed in Sid Borrows' world.

Sailing under sealed orders, but yet sailing. Jennifer bought a book of familiar quotations for ten cents; bought a collection of a hundred famous poems in a stiff paper cover for fifteen cents. She liked the poem that said, "I know my own will come to me," and memorized it. If, walking to work, she kept her brain busy attempting to reconstruct it, it saved her from unwelcome memories. She liked Brooke's "When I Am Dead," and learned that by heart too. She saw the words "Ici on parle Francais" and "Se habla Espanol" in a shopwindow and committed them as well to memory. And there was a little picture-frame and post-card shop that displayed a small panel of wood with a poem burned on it, a poem beginning: "Sleep sweetly in this quiet room...."

Jennifer thought this one of the most beautiful things she had ever seen. She recited the poem to Elna when she tucked her into bed.

Wind-Swept Isle Is Doubtful Buy

John O'Groat's House, Scotland (CP)—Want to buy a 1,000-acre island, complete with church and manse, school, post office and 45 tenanted crofts— for £3,500 ($14,000)?

Stroma, 2 1-2 miles off John O'Groat's in stormy Pentland Firth between the mainland and the Orkneys is for sale.

Fisherman James Simpson thinks it might be a good place for a politician to retire to, but that's about the brightest he can say about it. He thinks the present generation will be the last on the island.

"Many young Stroma men and women were in the forces during the war," he said. "Now they're demobbed they want to live on the mainland. Even if they come back, it's becoming increasingly difficult to make a living on Stroma."

There are few children now in the little school and the church has no resident minister. The main industry is fishing for cod and lobsters. The 120 residents raise most of their own food and many also weave their own clothes.

In bad weather a fine salt spray covers the island—believed locally to be the cause of the islanders' longevity.

Modern conveniences are something Stroma doesn't know. There is one small shop but its stock is small and narrow. Peat is the usual fuel and oil lamps provide light.

Tales of pirates, smugglers and ancient Norse sea kings go with Stroma, as do stories of shipwreckers in the days before the modern lighthouse was built on the rocky point. North of the island is the Swelchie of Stroma, dangerous whirlpool into which many small vessels have been sucked and lost.

So far Stroma is still on the market.

Railway Makes $100,000 Gift To Hospital Wing

North Bay, Nov. 29 —(CP)—Construction of a new wing to Queen Victoria Memorial Hospital at North Bay moved closer to realization yesterday when Col. C. E. Reynolds, chairman of the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission, announced the Ontario Northumberland Railway will donate $100,000 to the municipality for this purpose.

The addition was approved by North Bay electors on the basis of a cost of $250,000, but plans struck a snag when it was later learned that rising costs of material and labor would result in an expenditure of $350,000 or possibly more.

The railway had planned to aid in establishing a community centre building at North Bay, but owing to the acute shortage of building material and other difficulties the donation to the hospital was decided on.

Church in Paris Sports Elevator

Paris (Reuters)—A vacuum cleaning system and an elevator are features of the newest church in Paris—the church of St. Odile de Champerret—recently consecrated.

The church, which took 11 years to build, has a tower 243 feet high —the highest in Paris. (The twin towers of Notre Dame Cathedral are 227 feet high. Westminster Cathedral, London is 283 feet high, Westminster Abbey 225 feet).

Marking its consecration a full peal of 42 bells rang from the tower.

Centrally heated by pipes running under the floor, an unusual feature on the continent, the church has modern lighting, an electric organ of the latest type, a mortuary chapel with an elevator and sculptures and stained glass windows inlaid with precious metals.

Scotland Running into Heavy Unemployment Says Government

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Glasgow, Nov. 29. (CP)—Despite Britain's over-all manpower shortage, Scotland is running into heavy unemployment and fear is expressed by government departments that 50,000 may be out of work after all new sources of employment now in prospect are developed.

"To take up the slack, still more new industrial enterprises must be obtained for Scotland," said Sir Steven Bilsland, chairman of the Scottish Development and Industry Council, at a Press Conference.

With a population of 4,500,000, Scotland has about three times more unemployed than London with its population of 7,000,000. Most of the jobless are men.

"The government are most conscious of the unemployment situation in Scotland," said George Isaacs, Labor Minister, when he visited Glasgow recently.

In mid-October, he said, there were 366,000 jobless through the country and 77,000 of them were in Scotland. But 60,000 more persons were at work in Scotland now than there were before the war.

Not Allowed to Extend

Firms in London were not being allowed to extend their premises. No further expansion of industry would be allowed there. All along the line preference was being given to the so-called "development areas" — places where unemployment was heavy between the wars. Efforts were being made to attract new factories to those districts.

Sir Steven Bilsland said that essentially Scotland's problems are long-term ones that can be solved only by a "complete refashioning of Scottish industrial life."

These are some of the difficulties he listed:

1. The Lanarkshire coalfield is declining and it is vitally necessary to develop new fields in Fifeshire, West Lothian and Ayrshire; but the new field cannot be built up until there is somewhere for the miners to live and at present there are no houses.

2. The Clyde shipyards estimate they have enough work to keep them busy until 1949 or 1950 but after that there is no certainty.

3. A survey among 25,000 unemployed men disclosed that 10,000 were unsuitable for their normal employment even if they could find it because they were psychologically sick, worn out by work in heavy industry or suffering from malnutrition in the hungry '30's.

WAGE AND SALARY CONTROLS END AT MIDNIGHT TONIGHT

Negotiations Return To Straight Collective Bargaining Between Employers, Employees

By JACK WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Nov. 30. (CP)—Wage negotiations return to straight collective bargaining between employers and employees at midnight tonight, with War Labor Boards whose approval of increases has been necessary since 1941, stepping out of the picture.

Removal of wage and salary controls was announced early today by Prime Minister Mackenzie King. Only exceptions are cases new pending which are to be disposed of as quickly as possible.

The government's action mark the end of an important part of the wartime anti-inflation program. In announcing the orders were being rescinded Mr. King made it clear that this step did not mean a change in the government's policy of controlling prices and rents.

Ending of the controls was welcomed in Ottawa by A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor which had urged their removal earlier this year. Percy R. Bengough, president of the Trades and Labor Congress which had previously sought modification of the wages order, said the complete lifting would be accepted by his organization.

During the series of Summer strikes there had been a general tendency, particularly by Unions affiliated with the C.C.L., to short-circuit War Labor Boards and deal directly with the employers, leaving the Boards to apply a formal stamp of approval when a strike settlement was reached.

Mr. King, in his prepared statement announcing the liftnig, said ment announcing the lifting, sa.d important part in the battle against inflation, wartime methods were too rigid for peacetime when the objective was expansion rather than reduction of normal peacetime production.

"The pressure for wage adjustments has grown," he said. "It was only a matter of time until there would no longer be a need for wage and salary control in the battle against inflation. The government believes that time has now arrived.

"It is the policy of the government to maintain these controls as long as they may be required to protect the people from a sudden and drastic rise in the cost of living."

Britain's Main Problem Man Power Shortage

Leeds, England, Nov. 30 (CP)—Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the council and government leader in the House of Commons, surveying British production bottlenecks, named a man power shortage today as Britain's main problem, but declared "we are not going to have in this country compulsory direction of labor."

Morrison in an address prepared for delivery before a labor party regional council, said: "as a free democracy we must in time of peace, allow the citizen to choose his job freely, although from the planning standpoint this may result in a maldistribution of labor."

He pictured production bottlenecks caused by a scarcity of men and materials in Britain as much the same as in Russia and the United States.

Mr. Morrison urged Britons not to be complacent in the face of transitions in the history of mankind."

Shortage of coal is the next worst throttle on industrial expansion in Britain, he said, declaring that lack of coal "threatens our hearths and industries this winter."

Male Residents Will Be Forced To Grow Beards

North Bay, Nov. 30 —(CP)—Male residents of North Bay don't have to grow a beard in the next two months but it will cost them money, dignity and civic displeasure to go clean-shaven.

The Esperanza Club, a women's service organization, will launch a drive shortly to license men appearing in public without a beard. No-beard permits will cost 25 cents (the money goes to charity) and will be issued only to those who show cause why they cannot grow whiskers.

More dire penalties await the wilfully beardless. They will have to carry water to flood the city rinks. They will have to shovel snow. Some may spend a night in the hoosegow and there are mutterings about erecting stocks on main street in which they may be exposed to the hoots of passers-by.

"Theshrubbery is planned as window-dressing for North Bay's second annual snow frolic to be held Jan. 29 to Feb. 1, when prizes will be awarded to the most spectacularly bearded men in North Bay, New Liskeard, Timmins, Kirkland Lake and points north.

MACKENZIE KING CALLS FOR UNITY IN LIBERAL PARTY

Will Reorganize Federal Cabinet Before House Re-assembles, Urges St. Laurent To Stay

Quebec, Nov. 30 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King, in a dinner address here last night, reaffirmed that he intended to reorganize the Federal cabinet before parliament re-assembles and strongly urged External Affairs Minister St. Laurent to remain with the government.

Mr. King, remarking that Mr. St. Laurent entered the ministry only for the duration of the war, said:

"I have already made it known that in such reorganization of the ministry as I may deem it advisable to make, and which will be made before parliament re-assembles, the Department of External Affairs will be given a minister who will be in a position to devote his time, more or less exclusively, to intra-commonwealth and international affairs.

"With the reorganization thus affected, I hope Mr. St. Laurent may find it possible yet for some time to come to continue to give our country in its parliament, and to the world in the arena of international affairs, the benefit of his exceptional talents and his very great wisdom and experience."

Stayed Through Election

Mr. King said that when the war in Europe ended Mr. St. Laurent reminded him about his tenure of office but as the Liberal party then was faced with a general election, he (Mr. St. Laurent) said he wished to remain with the party through the campaign but hoped to retire soon after.

Not only had Mr. St. Laurent agreed to carry on since the elections but he also agreed to take over temporarily the heavy responsibilities of Secretary of State for External Affairs in addition to the Portfolio of Justice.

Turning to the Liberal party itself, Mr. King said he felt there was too much being said these days about possible retirements and about who was to lead the party in the next general election.

The Prime Minister said that if the Liberal party's organization had been "what it should have been," it would not have lost by-elections in Pontiac, Portage La Prairie and Toronto Parkdale.

Pays Tribute

Paying tribute to Mr. St. Laurent as a key figure in averting the resignation of the government in the November, 1944, conscription crisis, the Prime Minister said:

"Knowing the situation as I do, knowing the exceedingly difficult position in which many members from this province, as well as many members from other parts of Canada found themselves, I am perfectly certain that had Mr. St. Laurent withdrawn his support of myself, or indeed wavered in that support, I should have had no alternat've but to tender my resignation, and with it the resignation of the ministry."

Mr. King said that the results of the 1945 general elections were "a sufficient answer" as to whether or not the government had taken the right course on the conscription issue.

Several portions of Mr. King's prepared speech, given newsmen before the Prime Minister started to speak, were not referred to by Mr. King.

Hopes for Coal Strike Settlement Lie With Truman

May Make Direct Appeal To Loyalty of the Miners

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Nov. 30 —(CP)—Hopes for an early settlement of the coal strike — slim though they be—today centred more and more on the White House and a direct appeal from President Truman to the miners to put their loyalty to their country and their fellow men ahead of their loyalty to John L. Lewis.

This came in the face of threat of fines running into millions of dollars to the United States miners as Mr. Lewis, hit by a major legal setback, dug in for a finish, of his court fight with the U. S. government.

The President has remained as silent as the United Mine Workers' leader on the country's swift descent into industrial chaos.

Even if Mr. Truman agreed to proposals already made that he attempt direct intervention by way of press and radio to the striking miners, he would have only a slim chance of success.

Nevertheless there is a growing volume of opinion that the President should attempt to use the influence of his high office and the respect due it from American citizens to wean the 400,000 striking soft coal miners from their blind allegiance to John L. Lewis in the present instance.

Meanwhile the 66-year-old Labor leader, under trial on a contempt charge to which he pleaded not guilty, calmly and silently faces an outcome which may ruin him and his mineworkers even if he wins a technical decision.

The situation in brief:

Since the soft coal strike of last spring the 3,000-odd mines have been operated by the government.

Mr. Lewis claimed that a new contract should be negotiated to replace the one in existence when the mines were taken over and which expired Nov. 20. The government did not see it that way and got a Federal district court order enjoining Mr. Lewis not to advise his followers of contract termination because that would mean a strike.

The labor leader ignored the order and the 400,000 mines had all quit work on Nov. 20. Mr. Lewis was charged with contempt and pleaded not guilty. His trial and possible appeals may take weeks.

The labor leader and his union may be fined astronomical sums if found guilty of contempt but nothing that is happening appears likely to get the miners back to work.

Blow to President

If Mr. Lewis wins in the courts it will be a terrific blow to the prestige of President Truman — a blow he and his administration can little afford to bear.

But over all is the picture of a labor defiance which many have called anarchy, a quickly disintegrating economy that may bring chaos, and suffering or discomfort which will affect virtually every person in the country and millions abroad.

Unemployed may run into the millions because of the steel, coke, gas, plastic, chemical and numerous industries dependent upon soft coal. City areas are being blacked out, schools closed and train services curtailed. Effects of the strike reach out in all directions.

Continue Trial Monday

The walkout went into the 10th day and counsel for the government and the United Mine Workers' chief charted strategy for resumption of Mr. Lewis' contempt of court trial Monday while these developments tumbled into the many-sided national crisis:

1. Soft coal operators reported that a "very considerable number" of mining companies have filed applications with the government to fine miners $1 to $2 a day for each day they stay on strike.

2. Rebuked by some of his colleagues for expressing eagerness to resume negotiations with Mr. Lewis, Edward R. Burke, President of the Southern Coal Producers Association, scheduled a meeting of his board of directors Monday to determine his group's position.

3. Senator William F. Knowland (Rep.-Calif.) urged President Truman to call for volunteers to operate the coal mines, should the miners fail to return to work after a suggested appeal by Mr. Truman.

4. As a direct result of the coal tie-up, more than 95,000 persons were out of work in related industries and an additional 167,000 have been furloughed until Monday to conserve fuel.

The prospect of fines against Mr. Lewis' 400,000 striking miners stems from terms of his contract with the government—the agreement Mr. Lewis has declared void and which the government holds is still in effect.

Russia Gives in on Reparations Issue, Giving Hope to Early Wind-up Peace Treaty Parley

By ALEX H. SINGLETON

New York, Nov. 30 — (AP) — New Soviet concessions during debate of war reparations, especially as regards Yugoslavia, heightened hopes today that the Foreign Ministers Council would hurdle soon its chief remaining obstacle in the way of peace pacts for the Axis satellites.

Foreign Minister Molotov, of Russia accepted the 50-50 formula yesterday only after a long argument that Yugoslavia, as a country twice as large as Greece, should receive double the reparations paid to Greece. Final settlement of the issue may be reached at a meeting today.

At the same time, it appeared likely M. Molotov might succeed in his quest for a substantial reduction of the reparations levy on Bulgaria. State Secretary Byrnes supported tentatively a proposal which would cut the assessment from $125,000,000, as recommended by the Paris Peace Conference, to $65,000,000.

Different Proposals

Different formulas for reparations from Italy and Bulgaria were offered as the council juggled figures for four hours last night without reaching a final settlement. All of them included $100,000,000 for Russia. They were:

The United States proposal — from Italy, $125,000,000 for Yugoslavia, $100,000,000 for Greece; from Bulgaria, $20,000,000 for Yugoslavia, $45,000,000 for Greece. This would give both countries a total of $145,000,000 each. Ethiopia would get $25,000,000 from Italy.

Britain, meanwhile, held to the recommendations of the Paris conference which awarded Greece and Yugoslavia an even $100,000,000 each from Italy and equal division of $125,000,000 reparations from Bulgaria.

The four diplomatic leaders divided on another unsettled question — how much compensation should be paid by Italy for wartime destruction of Allied property in that country.

Mr. Byrnes, who previously had advocated a 25-cents-on-the-dollar settlement, offered to compromise at the Russian figure of 50 cents on the dollar. Britain and France are holding out for 75 cents.

GOVT. MAY YIELD ON SOME TERMS TO PROVINCES

New Conferences on Tax Agreements Will Open in Ottawa

By JOHN LEBLANC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 30 —(CP)—New conferences on Dominion-Provincial taxation agreements were to open here today amid indications the Federal government might be willing to yield on some of its terms in favor of the provinces.

From opposite ends of the continent, Premier Hart of British Columbia and Premier MacDonald of Nova Scotia were here to negotiate further on federal proposals for individual agreements with provinces to supplant wartime contracts now expiring.

While the federal attitude toward the provinces remained officially the same as in Finance Minister Ilsey's budget speech of last August, authoritative sources said the dominion government had given indications it might be ready to compromise.

Just how far Ottawa might go in the restriction of the provinces' demands remained unknown. However, well-informed quarters said some of the 'hold-out" provinces at least had received the impression Ottawa now was willing to do business on somewhat altered terms.

Premier Hart and Premier MacDonald were to start their new negotiations with the cabinet over the weekend.

The British Columbia government head said that, so far as his government was concerned matters stood the same way as at the time of the last Dominion-Provincial Conference. He expressed the opinion that, unless Ottawa made concessions, the Dominion would have to cut its corporation and personal income taxes by 10 per cent at the next session of parliament to enable the provinces to step into these fields for revenues to meet their obligations.

Premier MacDonald, arriving here by air from Halifax, told the Canadian Press late last night his government's views remained unchanged. This was taken to mean the Nova Scotia government to vacate the fields of gasoline and amusement taxation, in which Ottawa will not give withdrawal guarantees.

Asked to confirm the report that he had come here on the invitation of the Federal government Premier MacDonald said this was correct. There was also the factor, he said, that his province's fiscal year ends today—the date on which the Dominion-Provincial agreement with Nova Scotia expires.

However, the Premier would not give any indication of what he expected from the conference. He said he thought his negotiations would be concluded briefly this afternoon with Finance Minister Ilsley.

WITNESS CLAIMS PUBLISHING FIRM PAID ROYALTIES

Royal Commission on Education Orders Exhaustive Inquiry Into Charges

Toronto, Nov. 30. (CP)— The Ontario Royal Commission on Education has ordered an exhaustive inquiry into charges made by a witness yesterday that a publishing firm in Toronto paid royalties to two workers in the Ontario Education Department on religious textbooks bought by the department for use in Public Schools.

The charges were made by Gus Harris, former employee of the Ryerson Press, which he said was owned by the United Church. Harris, who said he himself was a member of the United Church, could not submit proof that the Ryerson Press is owned by the United Church.

He told the Commission he had photostatic copies of cancelled cheques which he said he temporarily purloined from the Ryerson Press while in its employ, and named two members of the Provincial Department as recipients of $850 each in Royalties for the first six months of 1945.

"The Royalties being paid to these employees are included in the cost of the books to the Department of Education," he said, "and the Provincial Government pays the bill."

Owned by Church Claim

Harris added: "If the publishers did hire these men without authorization then it could be claimed that religious instruction in the Public Schools of Ontario is dominated by one religious group, because the Ryerson Press, the publishers, is owned by the United Church."

The Commission yesterday also heard a brief from the Orange Lodge of Ontario, submitted by A. H. Birmingham, Grand Master for Ontario West, who declared that existence of Separate Schools in Ontario constituted "a State within a State" and should be abolished by plebiscite. "We believe the majority of people here don't want Separate Schools," he said.

The course of religious instruction laid down in Ontario Public Schools under Provincial government regulations was criticized by W. E. Bastedo on behalf of the Public School Supporters League. He said instruction was given along such lines that "teachers must follow the course prescribed by an unknown committee. Every change of government will mean a change of religious education for our children."

Car Turns Over Eight Times After Going Out of Control

Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP)—In a spectacular accident on the Queen Elizabeth Way just west of the city early today a car driven by Paul Sullivan, 22, of Toronto, turned over eight times after going out of control when passing a big transport truck. Sullivan received leg injuries and possible head injuries. A passenger, Jean Kardash, 17, was seriously injured, and two others in the car, Miss Laurie Seguin and Peter Ames, were treated for cuts.

Toronto Woman Burns to Death In Car Crash

Toronto, Nov. 30. (CP) — Police tentatively identified as Ruth Stevens, 35, of Hensall, the woman who was burned to death in a motorcar that burst into flames after colliding with another car on Sheppard Avenue in North York township, on the northern outskirts of the city.

Driver of the car, who was extricated with difficulty and taken to Toronto General Hospital with critical burns, was believed to be Harold Hartley, 35, of Sault Ste. Marie.

An eyewitness, Norman Addison, said he saw the car travelling so fast that an accident was inevitable, the car being "obviously out of control". A few moments later he heard the crash as the car struck one in which Mr. and Mrs. Fred Perrin were driving. The Perrins were shaken up but uninjured.

The car from which the victims were taken literally exploded on the impact and North York firemen who doused the flames with chemicals found only the charred remains of the woman. The man had been pulled out with bad burns by Addison, who said that "all the time I was pulling him out and he was struggling I could hear a woman screaming inside the car."

Churchill Observes 72nd Birthday

London, Nov. 30 — (AP). — In excellent health and entertaining no ideas of retirement, Winston Churchill observed his 72nd birthday today, so busy that only modest celebrations plans were made.

The wartime prime minister, now actively leading the Conservative opposition in the House of Commons and championing a federated Europe and world collaboration within the framework of the United Nations, will be feted tonight at a family dinner to be attended by a few intimate friends.

Associates said Mr. Churchill entertained no ideas of retirement.

Claims Prof. Laski Said Labor Would Use Violence to Get What It Wanted

New York, Nov. 30 (CP)—The New York Times reported in a London dispatch today that three defence witnesses testified Friday that they had heard Prof. Harold J. Laski, chairman of the Labor Party in 1945, declare that "if labor cannot get what it needs by consent, we must use violence, even if it means revolution," or words to that effect.

The witnesses were appearing for the Newark, (Nottinghamshire) Weekly Advertiser which Prof. Laski is suing for libel. Prof. Laski charges that the Advertiser published a report of a speech he made at a meeting in Newark which contained false imputations that he advocated seizing power by violence.

Maj. R. A. S. Breene, acting British Consul in Trebizond, Turkey, testified in a deposition that his view was that Prof. Laski "had been trapped into doing something silly by a deliberate and careful bit of heckling."

Henry C. Conyers Carlton, a justice of the peace, insisted under cross-examination that he had heard the plaintiff say: "If labor cannot get power by consent we must use violence even if it means, revolution."

James Wentworth Day, who had heckled Pof. Laski at the meeting denied suggestions that he had deliberately tried to lay a trap for the plaintiff.

The Times said Lord Hinchingbrooke, Conservative member of parliament, testified for the defence that he had asked Prof. Laski during a radio broadcast whether he seriously envisaged the use of force to introduce Socialism into Britain.

He was quoted by the Times as saying Prof. Laski had answered: "Let's be realists. I have never known a case in which a governing class had surrendered ultimate possession of power without fighting for it."

The trial is expected to end Monday.

Torrential Rain Floods Thousands Of Acres in Thames River Area

By JOHN DAUPHINEE

London, Nov. 30 (CP Cable)—Torrential rains falling on southern England during the night caused rapid spreading of Thames River floods and thousands of new acres were inundated with the stream still rising.

The main London-Windsor doar was closed to traffic with several major bus routes affected. Housewives were paddling in skiffs from their homes to do their weekend shoping in several areas including Wargrave, Berkshire.

Eton, Buckinghamshire, now is practically surrounded by water and riverside houses have water on the ground floors. Many families were evacuated from flooded houses at Wraybury Bucks.

At Oxford, the flood was reported much worse. Villagers at Wolvercote, near Oxford, have been forced to live upstairs because water is inside their homes.

With more rain forecast today this has been the wetest November for six years with rainfall almost double London's November average.

At Windsor, Berkshire, the Thames is three feet above normal and the flood was spreading across the Eton Public School playing fields and the low-flying land between Windsor and Staines Middlesex.

Heavy seas prevented an attempt to get a relief crew to the Royal Sovereign Lightship seven miles off Eastbourne, Sussex. The crew now is five days overdue for relief.

That municipality gives a bounty of $50 for each bona fide wolf pelt and the government and county bounties amount to $35 per pelt.

Other officers named included Harry Grills, Belleville, R. R. 6 as Hon. President; Sherman Lazier, Corbyville, Vice President and Fred Mitchell, Belleville R.R. 6 as Secretary Treasurer.

Directors are Bruce Martin, Corbyville; Gordon Woods, Trenton R.R. 5; Clare Carter, Thomasburg, and J. V. Hanley, Shannonville. Auditors are Fred Haight, and Doug. Atkins, Belleville R.R. 6.

Lowe Butler, B.S.A., Vineland Experimental Station, and fieldman for the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Marketing Board, gave a detailed report of the marketing board during the year. There was a general discussion on problems confronting cash crop growers at the present time and a number of resolutions were passed drawing attention of the marketing board to these problems and recommending the views of the meeting on how they could be remedied.

Col. Vanderwater, Sherman Lazier and Bruce Martin were appointed representatives to the District Tomato, Pea and Corn Growers' Committee. This committee will meet with the committee from Lennox and Addington county at an early date and appoint the director for this district to the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Marketing Board. The director on this board for the past two years has been Mr. Clare Carter of Thomasburg.

Making Plans For New Division

Formation of a retail merchants' division of the local Chamber of Commerce was further discussed by members of the retail merchants' committee at their regular meeting Friday morning when plans were outlined for a campaign to commence shortly after the new year.

Members expressed the hope of developing an organization having its own by-laws, the members of which elect their own governing board and through which, in co-operation with the Chamber, retail projects will be undertaken.

It was pointed out that when merchants of a community co-operate in utilizing effective ideas and such plans that have been successful in other communities, the general retail business of the community is developed. Plans of the Chamber of Commerce must embrace the community as a whole, while only a retail merchants' division could appreciate the problems pertaining to the retail business.

The location of new industries, the development of better roads are important matters in any Chamber of Commerce program, while they are matters which would be outside the interest of a retail merchants' division.

Cheesemaker Honored on Eve Of Retirement

Cheesemaker in the Thomasburg district for the past 23 years, Mr. John Dudgeon, maker for the Moira Valley Cheese Company will retire this year, it has been learned. With Mrs. Dudgeon he will take up residence in the 6th concession of Sidney Township, near Frankford.

A frequent winner in county and district classes in the British Empire Dairy Show held annually at Belleville, Mr. Dudgeon has been eminently successful as a cheesemaker with grade of cheese manufactured being among the highest in the county. His retirement will be a distinct loss to the cheese industry.

A son, John Dudgeon, Jr., has followed in his father's footsteps as cheesemaker.

Friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Dudgeon last week gathered at the I.O.O.F. hall at Thomasburg to honor their retiring cheesemaker and indicative of the high esteem in which the departing couple are held were presented with two occasional chairs.

Five Stitches Required to Close Wound on Head

Trenton — John Patterson, 61, of Bay Shore district, Trenton, was walking through the Canadian National Railroad yards in downtown Trenton on Thursday evening at 5:45 when an unknown assailant stepped out from behind a box car and struck him over the head with a club which was found later by police when they searched the vicinity. Mr. Patterson was dazed from the blow and required medical attention. Five stitches were required to close the wound in his head. No trace has been found of his assailant. Police believe robbery may have been the motive.

Officers Elected.

At the semi-monthly luncheon of the Trenton Kinsmen Club at the New St. James Hotel on Monday evening last, officers for the year were elected and plans made for community welfare activities. The following officers were elected:

President — Lloyd Weese
Vice-President — Mickey Walt
Secretary — R. Park
Registrar — Frank Lozo
Treasurer — R. Cretney
Directors — H. Foster, G. Roberts, Ross Long.

It was decided that the Trenton Kinsmen Club would stage a Christmas party at the Century Theatre for needy children. A committee was appointed to take care of the arrangements.

The sum of $100 was voted to the Trenton and District Memorial Hospital Fund and a recommendation made that a similar amount be given for the next two years.

An encouraging report was presented on the recent Hallowe'en "Shell-Out" to raise money for the Children's Fresh Air Camp. The evening was a big success and one of the best so far staged by the club.

An increase in the assessment of the town of Trenton which will form the basis of 1947 taxation, of $176,488, is reported by Assessor Charles E. York in his returns recently made to W. J. Potts, town clerk and treasurer. If the current tax rate remains the same in 1947, the increase represents about $8,000 in actual cash for the civic treasury. Total taxable assessment is $3,938,992, as against $3,762,504 in 1945. Total assessment including exemptions for schools, churches, town property and government buildings is $4,794,332.

Bro. F. T. McKend welcomed the visitors on behalf of Trenton Lodge.

On the completion of the degree work appreciation for the reception of the visitors was expressed by Bro. Percy Bullied, N.G., of Peterborough Lodge, Degree Master Joe Lancashire, and Bro. Bill Petrie, P.D.D.G.P. of District No. 19 of the Grand En-

Australia Operates Big Sugar Industry

Brisbane, Australia (CP) — Australia, producer of 800,000 tons of sugar a year, claims to be the only country to operate a cane sugar industry entirely with white labor.

The Australian cane belt, stretching 1,300 miles along the eastern coast from New South Wales state to tropical northern Queensland, has a population of about 250,000 of whom the sugar industry supports about 80,000.

The industry is worth $60,000,000 a year and output is more than enough to supply Australia's sugar needs. The surplus is exported and at present domestic supplies are rationed to maintain exports to Britain.

Exports are fixed by the International Sugar Council, of which Australia is a member, on the basis of world demand and total world production. The Australian export quota has averaged 400,000 tons annually for the last few years.

The industry is protected in this country by an embargo on sugar imports and price-fixing for domestic wholesale and retail distribution to guarantee profitable return to growers.

The present home wholesale price is $132 a ton, nearly three times more than the price obtained for exports. The retail price is 5 1-3 cents a pound which hasn't changed since 1933. The return to growers and millers is 3 1-3 cents a pound.

NEW ALUMINUM ROOFING

Melbourne Australia —(CP)— Corrugated aluminum roofing, claimed to be rustless, non-toxic and requiring no painting or maintenance, now is being sold on the Australian market. Initial cost of the product is about double that of iron roofing, but it is more durable and can be carried by lighter roof frames.

PRICKLY THISTLE IS UNDER ATTACK ON WESTERN FARM

Winnipeg (CP) — The sow thistle, prickly, yellow-blossomed weed described as Canada's most serious agricultural menace, is under attack by the Manitoba Weeds Commission.

Virtually eliminated in the drought years of the 1930s, provincial agriculture department officials say it has returned with successive seasons of good rainfall and shortages of labor and machinery with which to combat it.

The weed, whose long, running roots push through the soil to kill thousands of dollars worth of grain annually, flowers late in June and soon afterward spreads its seeds—as many as 19,000 from a single plant.

H. E. Wood, supervisor of the government's program, said the chief object was to make farmers aware of the menace and to impress upon them that destruction would have to be on a province-wide basis.

According to government files, the first sow thistle was recorded on a farm near Cartright, 95 miles southwest of Winnipeg, in 1896. Little attention was paid to the weed at that time and it spread northwest into the Red River valley region. By he 1920s the blight was killing a considerable portion of the Manitoba crop annually.

Drought, aided by grasshoppers and the increasing availability of cultivating machinery, pretty well destroyed the thistle in the prewar years. Byt last season, however, it had returned after several summers of good moisture, labor shortages and scarcity of new machinery.

Combat Measures

Principal recommendation to farmers, Mr. Wood said, was to encourage regular post-harvest fall plowing, often delayed until spring during the war. Other measures, more effective in the long run, were to cultivat frequently during summer-fallow and to seed all road allowances where the sow thistle prospers unhindered by plows. Careful summer-fallow plowing could eradicate it in a single season.

It was true, he said, that the thistle's roots, when broken up by a plow, were capable of growing again into separate plants, but frequent plowing kept the soil loose enough to prevent roots taking hold.

Asked if the commission anticipated further spread of the thistle from neighboring Saskatchewan, he said it was less extensive there due to drier soil.

In addition to its publicity program, the government is experimenting with newly-developed weed killers, including the much-touted 24D.

Results of tests on 840 plots last summer will be discussed in December at the North-Central States weeds conference in Des Moines, Iowa, attended by seven Manitoba specialists.

Ministry Extends Boarding Schools

London —(CP)— Hitherto in England boarding schools have been mainly only available to the comparatively few children whose parents could afford the fees involved. A recent announcement by the ministry of education marks an important step in making boarding education available to all classes.

Under the Education Act of 1944 the duty is laid on local education authorities of seeing that boarding education is available to all children for whom, in the opinion of the parents and the authorities, it is desirable. The ministry, in a recent circular, says that as building facilities and other circumstances allow, boarding education will be greatly extended.

Archeologists Busy

One of the mysteries which intrigues science is the problem of man's appearance on earth and the rise of civilization. Evacation and exploration have brought a great many facts to life. One of the quests which which intrigues scientists in the New World is the relationschip of the Indian people to the history of the American and to earlier civilizations which have been shown to have existed long ages ago.

This week there was news of the hurried race of archeologists to gather data on prehistoric man in the Mississippi Valley, where extensive work on dam construction is planned for next spring, the results of which would be to hide perhaps forever any possibility of discoveries in that area. So the scientists are embarked on the inquiry which they hope will bridge a gap of seven thousand years, that is, between the time of the period of the Folsam man supposed to have lived at the end of the ice age, about ten thousand years ago, and the ancestors of the modern Indians about thirty centuries ago.

In parts of Asia and Europe archeology has had an immense opportunity and the results have been a whole world of information about the lives of peoples who were the ancestors of peoples living today. Industry has thrown a bright light on the course of religion and civilization. What has been revealed of Hebrew, Greek and Roman early civilizations has been of the greatest importance to the people of this time, especially of course to the western nations, who owe so much to the civilizations that were ancient Palestine, Greece and the Roman world.

In the Mississippi Valley the quest is one that is not so familiar to the people. Knowledge of discoveries in the Old World by archeologists is fairly well known whereas that of the earliest days of the life of the Indian inhabitants of America and of their predecessors is less familiar, People in the New World will watch interestedly for reports of any findings in the American research during the next few months.

Weather Conditions

Facts on the weather conditions for the year 1945 are contained in the annual report of the Statistics Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The annual records for Belleville show that 35.07 inches of rain fell on 131 days and 57.9 inches of snow on 47 days.

The annual mean temperature for the year in the province was 43.3 degrees and the mean for the six months from April to September was 57.8 inches, which is slightly below the sixty-four year average, which was 43.5 inches and for the five-year period, 1941-1945, which was 43.7 inches. The mean temperature for the six growing months in Ontario in 1945 was 57.8 or 1.9 degrees below the preceding year. March showed the greatest departure above normal with 12.1 degrees and January the greatest below with 7.5 degrees.

Last year there was an average of 1846 hours of sunlight in the Province, which was 89.5 hours below the sixty-four year average, according to weather stations at Woodstock, Toronto, Lindsay and Ottawa. The six growing months had 1201.8 hours or 132.8 below normal. December was the greatest departure above with 34.2 hours and May the greatest below with 48.9 hours.

Rainfall for the six months of growing last year totalled 2.73 inches or 4.85 above that of the preceding year. Fall of snow and rain in the five winter months, November 1945 to and March 1946 totalled 66.2 inches and rainfall in that period was 4.25 inches.

Seeking Tourist Visitors

Tourist trade is being sought not only in America but in Europe as the following from London, England, indicates. Britain has plans for her overseas visitors next year. Secretary for Overseas Trade Marquand stated recently that priority was being given to the release of hotels for accommodation of government departments. Out of 4,190 hotels, boarding houses and restaurants held under requisition the first of this year, all but 558 had been freed by October first of this year. This is not to be the end of reduction for the aim of the government is to cut this to 300 by the first of April next.

The British government is aiming to begin the traffic in overseas visitors in 1947 but the number that year will necessarily be limited. They will find a standard of feeding and accommodation which is less than Britain would like to provide but any hardships or shortages will be due to damage and injury sustained during the war, they are assured.

The flow of visitors to England will not be for one season but will continue to grow, there can be no doubt of that. Other countries in time as conditions admit after the destruction and upset of the war will be bidding for tourists.

So, when the importance of touring visitors to Canada is impressed upon the Canadian people, the efforts to build up the visiting public from other lands are founded on a deep-rooted impulse in human nature, that of travel. To this inclination the automobile has given an impetus which can never be lost because as the world more and more becomes a unity, more and more people will desire to travel.

Canada has attractions in plenty as a young country being one of the most extensive lands on the face of the globe, a land that can offer to people of every race an opportunity for touring and enjoyment, whose freshness and beauty will never pall on any visitor.

Defies Law of Averages

There is a man in London who can toss a coin and make it come down tails or heads almost as he chooses. He is Mr. J. Horzelski, a Polish mechanical engineer who came to England after his country was invaded. At his home at Greenford, Middlesex, he explained that he used to get irritated because textbooks always cited the results of tossing a coin as one of the proofs of "the theory of probability," says Tidbits (London, Eng.)

According to this theory, if a coin is tossed often enough, "there is a statistical regularity in the records." In other words, the number of times the coin comes down heads or tails is about equal.

Mr. Hrozelski thought it over and came to the conclusion that this only happens because the conditions under which the coin is tossed are not controlled.

He made a simple device with springs and metal parts so that he could stoss a coin always with the same pressure, the same length of time, and in the same place. A new sixpenny piece machine tossed 100 times came to rest head upward 98 times. The lever was readjusted and then it was tails 99 times of 100.

U. K. Railway to be All Electric

The Southern Railway has announced a £15,000,000 ($60,000,000) scheme to electrify 284 miles of track within the next five years. Visitors to Britain will be among the first to benefit as the "Golden Arrow" boat-train line between London and Dover will be electrified first. The London-Ramsgate, Hastings and Folkestone lines will follow. Work in the Southeast corner of Britain is expected to be completed by 1955—perhaps earlier—and then the track between London and Cornwall will be electrified too, over 2,000 route miles in all.

The Standard of Power

When James Watt developed his steam engine he found they had to be sold to do the work of horses, so he had to rate his engines in terms of work performed. • To make practical comparison he found that a good dray horse could raise a quarter of an English ton, of 550 pounds, about 60 feet in a minute or one foot a second. So he called this rate of doing work, that is, lifting a weight of 550 pounds one foot in a second, "the power of a horse" or "one ard for measuring and comparing power.—C. F. Kettering in Christian Science Monitor.

CAN'T

"I can't do it!" Willie said.
"Four and seven are hard to add.
I can't do it in my head!"
Answered Grandpa: "That's too bad.

"Can't a very foolish word,
Which nobody wise employs,
And it never should be heard
From the lips of little boys.

"Lads who say it, more and more
Will repeat it when they're men.
Now, then, what are seven and four?
Come, let's try it once again."

Now that boy is old, and he
In the self-same, gentle way,
Tells the granchild on his knee:
"Can't's" a word he shouldn't say.

Negro Woman Launches Action Against Theatre

Halifax, Nov. 30 —(CP)—A 32-year-old Negro hairdresser, Mrs. Viola Desmond, who was fined $20 for sitting downstairs in a New Glasgow, N. S. theatre when she held a balcony ticket today was involved in a legal action against the theatre manager.

The action launched by Mrs. Desmond, whose case has been supported by the Nova Scotia Asociation for the advancement of colored people with the asserted aim of preventing a spread of color-bar tactics in Nova Scotia, arose from an incident in the Picton County town Nov. 7.

The Halifax hairdresser said in an interview last night that she had been removed bodily from the New Glasgow Roseland theatre, held all night in jail and was fined next day for "defrauding the Federal Government of one cent, the difference in the amusement tax on an upstair ticket of two cents and a downstairs ticket of three cents."

She said she had been refused a downstairs ticket by the theatre cashier whom she quoted a saying "I'm not permitted to sell downstairs tickets to you people."

"I can't understand why such measures should have been taken I have travelled a great deal throughout Canada and parts of the United Sttes and nothing like this ever happened to me before," Mrs. Desmond said.

"I was born in Halifax and lived here most of my life and I've found relations between Negroes and whites very unpleasant. I didn't realize a thing like this could happen in Nova Scotia."

The theatre manager, Henry McNeil, said there was no discrimination and no instructions had been issued against the sale of downstairs tickets to Negroes.

The writ, which Mrs. Desmond's counsel, F. W. Bissett of Halifax, said he had filed and served against Mr. McNeil, charged false arrest, false imprisonment, assault and malicious prosecution.

Murder Career Of "Bluebeard" Depicted in Files

Berlin, Nov. 30 (AP). — The murder career of a German "bluebeard" who confessed to killing 53 persons, including 49 women, is depicted in German police files revealed Friday. Over a period of 20 years he killed with club, knife and noose.

The Nazis hushed up the story — including the death of the rapist-murderer in a prison in Vienna April 8, 1944, after he had been subjected to experiments by German doctors.

A file which fills a bookcase two yards high and one and a half yards wide in police headquarters yielded the story of Bruno Luedtke, laborer, who committed his first murder at the age of 16.

Luedtke, a tall, low-browed man, was arrested in 1943 as a suspect in the murder of a Berlin widow, Frieda Roesner, who was beaten to death and raped in her lodgings. Luedfke had been seen entering the house to deliver laundry.

The police records state that Luedtke confessed he killed Mrs. Roesner and when he was confronted with a list of unsolved slayings, blandly said:

"Yes, I not only committed this murder but many of them—about 50. Practically all were women. Only when forced to do so did I also kill their husbands."

Sometimes he fell upon his victims in woods or fields, but more frequently trapped them in their homes. Sometimes he broke in at night and if he encountered the husband, he slew him too. There were four such double murders.

Police said he never used a gun but usually a club or knife, and sometimes an electric cord for a noose.

Luedtke's arrest and confinement were never made public for reasons undetermined.

December 10, 1943, he was removed to Vienna because it was feared that, during the increasingly violent allied bombings of Berlin, he might break out of prison.

In Vienna, the police records said, he was sterilized and made the subject of further medical experiments, which may have caused his death.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

FROM EIGHT TO EIGHTEEN

Young persons who get insufficient vitamins and minerals to meet the nutritional requirements — to promote normal growth and maintain functional health— I call it Vite are bound to be defectives. If they subsist on this refined starch-sugar food throughout childhood and early youth—the growing, developing period—they acquire the physical characteristics of some of the vitamin-deficient rats pictured in "The Foundations of Nutrition," famous textbook by the late Mary Swartz Rose (Macmillan Company)—look at the book in your school library some time, kids. You'd find it interesting as well as instructive.

Clothes cover many physical defects, but even the casual observer of school children eight to eighteen must notice how many spinal curvature (low shoulder, high hip), lordosis (round back or round shoulders and ptosis or sagging of abdominal organs), and pronated feet—weak ankles, out-turned toes, functional flat feet. These are some of the more manifest signs of nutritional deficiency.

If there were two or three pages of this paper available we might go on to discuss such other features of malnutrition as cachexia Americana, chronic fatigue, juvinile anemia, exposure and vitamin D, soft teeth and dental decay. These subjects are dealt with in the booklet V-I-T-E Spells Youth—for a copy write me, ask for it by name—do not use a clipping—and inclose ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

It is never too late to correct nutritional deficiencies at any time in life, although it is in the period of growth and development, from eight to eighteen years of age, that the prevention or correction of these faults is most important. For instance the Medical Research Council of Great Britain found that prevention of tooth decay requires several times more sunshine vitamin D than the daily minimum amount of vitamin D nutritional authorities consider necessary to prevent rickets. The Council found further that the amount of vitamin D needed to insure optimal nutrition (again I call it V-I-T-E) at any age is parallel with the amount of calcium required to maintain vigorous health at that age, and the calcium requirement is greater between the ages of ten and eighteen years than at any other time of life.

What was the tune the old cow died of?

People often say of a song or piece of music that they do not like, that it is "the tune the old cow died of."

The expression itself, although it sounds American, is believed to be of Irish origin. It has not been found earlier than the 18th century, but some authorities suppose that it originated in connection with a 17th or perhaps 16th century Irish story of a farmer who had no provender for his cow and who tried to appease her hunger by playing her a tune on his fiddle. An old ballad, said to date back at least as far as Shakespeare's time, runs like this:

There was an old man and he had an old cow,
But he had no fodder to give her,
So he took up his fiddle and played her the tune:
"Consider, good cow, consider,
This isn't the time for the grass to grow,
Consider, good cow, consider."

Actually, it seems, it wasn't the tune but the lack of fodder that caused the old cow's demise. In other words, she died from starvation coupled with an overdose of advice.

Do fish drink water?

Fish drink little if any water. Many people suppose that the constant and regular opening and closing of a fish's mouth indicates that it is drinking and hence we have "to drink like a fish," which is based on a misconception.

A fish opens and closes its mouth to pass water through the gills to obtain oxygen. The action is part of the breathing operation. Apparently enough moisture is taken into the system of a fish in its food and through its skin to supply it with virtually all the water it requires. During the process of breathing the gullet of a fish is constricted so tightly behind the last pair of pharyngeal clefts that very little if any water passes into the stomach.

"This closing of the gullet," asserts J. B. Norman, British ichthyologist, "is brought about by the action of special muscles encircling the throat, which functions in exactly the same way as does a double string running around the neck of a bag. The pressure of any food against the closed gullet, however, causes these muscles to relax somewhat, and the solid nourishment is pressed down into the stomach without the entrance of any water."

William Lama Goes On Trial On Murder Count

Cornwall, Nov. 30 — (CP) — Forty-nine-year-old William Earl (Bowser) Lama was committed for trial yesterday on a charge of murdering his 39-year-old wife, Mary Jane, with the knife he used in his part-time occupation of pig-killing.

Lama, the 120-pound farmer from nearby Harrison's Corners, who eluded search parties for 71 days in the Eastern Ontario bush, was committed by Magistrate P. C. Bergeron following a one-day preliminary hearing during which a crowded courtroom heard Lama's two sons testify that their father had "threatened to kill mother and burn her out."

Lama is also charged with the murder of his nine-year-old daughter, Mary Elizabeth. The two bodies were found at Lama's lonely farm home Aug. 16, but it was not until Oct. 26 that a part-time police constable spotted Lama foraging for food in the cellar of a vacant house in nearby Moulinette village.

Sons Testify

Shorn of the heavy moustache he grew in the bush, Lama listened intently while his 16-year-old son, Frederick, told the court of constant quarrels between his parents.

"He threatened to kill her and I heard it several times. He'd pick up dishes and throw them on the floor, and he wouldn't do any work."

Twelve-year-old Daniel Lama confirmed his brother's evidence of the threats. Dr. J. C. Cameron of Cornwall, who performed a post-mortem, said in his opinion the wounds on Mrs. Lama's body could have been made by a pig-sticking knife.

Inspector W. J. Franks of the Criminal Investigation branch of the Ontario Provincial Police identified a knife turned over to him by Cornwall Police Chief R. H. Hawkshaw. There were no fingerprints on the knife which bore traces of human blood, but not enough to enable an analysis to determine to which blood group it belonged.

Murder Charge Laid Against John Boyko, 52

Montreal, Nov. 30 (CP). — A murder charge was laid yesterday against John Boyko, 52-year-old Ukrainian, shortly after a coroner's jury held him criminally responsible for the death of Mrs. Tessy Olyanski, 41.

Judge Omer Legrand set preliminary hearing for Dec. 6.

The woman's blood-spattered body was found last night by her 17-year-old son lying on an axe in the cellar of her east-end Rachel street home. A hammer and broken jug were found nearby.

Boyko surrendered to police less than an hour after the body was discovered and a statement, allegedly made by him and read at the inquest, said he killed Mrs. Olyanski because she refused to turn over to him his share of $16,000 they saved by operating a fried potato wagon business.

The slaying of Mrs. Olyanski, found with her head crushed to a pulp, was the third violent death in Montreal this week. Yesterday, George Mester, 43, committed suicide after firing three shots at a woman he was courting and on Wednesday Mrs. Stella Bean was charged with murder after telling police she stabbed her husband when he attempted to beat her.

Marmora

W. J. Cottrell Heads Hastings Deanery Laymen's Association

Marmora. (Special.)—At the annual banquet and meeting held in St. Paul's Parish Hall, Marmora, on Wednesday evening, the presidency of the Hastings Deanery Laymen's Association for the ensuing year went to W. J. Cottrell, past president of St. Paul's Laymen's Association, Marmora. Laymen and clergy to the number of about ninety were present from Trenton, Stirling, Tweed, Roslin, Madoc and Marmora and greatly enjoyed the appetizing repast served by St. Paul's Ladies' Guild.

The retiring president, H. B. Smith, of Trenton, handled the program up to the election of officers. Following the submitting of the Royal Toast, community singing was enjoyed under leadership of Past President, J. F. Baker, of Bonarlaw. Past President Chester Lott of Trenton, then accorded a hearty vote of thanks to the ladies for the excellency of the meal and its service. This was followed by an instrumental duet by J. F. Baker and Delbert McComb.

Presidential Address

In his presidential address H. B. Smith mentioned that the Lord Bishop of the diocese, who was to have been present, was prevented from attending at the last moment. He also drew attention to the gratification which was felt over reaching the Anglican Advance Appeal objective in the Deanery. He stated that an active laymen's association in each parish was most desirable and he hoped that the laymen's service to the church would be extended, now that the World War was over. Robert and John Blakely, of Trenton, received much applause for an instrumental duet in which the trombone and cornet were used and responded with an encore. Reg. Armstrong, of Trenton, past secretary-treasurer of the Association, introduced the guest speaker of the evening, Squadron Leader Reverend J. Minto Swan, R.C.A.F., Trenton.

Striking Address

The gathering was treated to a very striking address, based on the words "Stir Up" which are the opening words of the Collect for the Sunday next before Advent. The speaker declared it was a good thing for each one of us to be stirred up once a year in our Christian efforts. It was also a good policy for every day of the year. However, he wanted to use the words as it related to the Advent season. He felt that people were not using Christian faith in life with a "stirup" sense. In the Air Force he had been asked to autograph New Testaments presented to the men. At such times he endeavored to find out what the individual thought of the clergyman in the parish he had come from before enlistment.

Does Not Feel That Way

As a result he had been given the impression that many of these men felt that their clergyman did not have the full picture of life, and that he did not understand them. He did not feel this was altogether true, but it led him to state that if any had not made their Christian experience a living thing with a thrill something was wrong. People needed stirring up until it touched the whole of their life. Our worship should be our constant living, and real. There were those who arranged their religion to allow God to be part of it in one place and not part of it in another. So many have done wrong in accepting a humanistic philosophy of life. He wondered how many thought about the Divine appreciation of the sense of the Fatherhood of God. "God is interested," he said, "in all of you at all times and in all places. We need to be stirred up to pass it on. We have not been doing much for evangelization. There is some field in which the individual can be more expressive in missionary work.

Humorous Stories

The address was interspersed with some humorous stories out of the speaker's own experiences. A vote of thanks was accorded him on behalf of all present by J. F. Baker. A vocal duet followed, Rev. J. M. Brownlie and J. F. Baker rendering "Dear Land of Home". In a short but apt speech, Rev. J. M. Brownlie said how highly pleased and honored the Marmora Association was in being privileged to be host to the gathering.

Rural Dean W. J. Robinson, of Tweed, was next asked to address the meeting.

He said: "We don't have to frighten people into religion, we have to attract them." He said he was thinking of the churches which needed to have more men in them. If we thought with a personality of the great personality as we should, we would be concerned with the personality of the fellow next door. He extended good wishes for the welfare of the Laymen's Association. The minutes of the last annual meeting, a special meeting held in May of this year were then confirmed, after which the Rural Dean was asked to preside for the election of officers.

Officers Elected

The following executive was chosen:

Honorary President, H. B. Smith, Trenton.

President, W. J. Cottrell, Marmora.

Vice President, Glen Morrow, Stirling.

Secretary-Treasurer, C. R. Whittemore, Deloro.

The new president was called to occupy the chair, immediately following his election and after thanking his fellow laymen the honor accorded him, said he would try to follow in the good steps of his predecessors in that office. He also expressed optimism for the future prosperity of the Association. Messrs. H. B. Smith and C. R. Whittemore were elected representatives to the Diocesan Laymen's Association.

A motion was passed fixing the third Sunday in Advent, December 15th., as Laymen's Sunday in the Deanery, when it is hoped that laymen in each parish will attend the service in their church of a special character, in which the work of the laity will be stressed.

The meeting closed with a verse of the hymn "Fight the Good Fight" and the benediction being pronounced by Rural Dean W. J. Robinson.

Aussies Snap Up Silk From China

Sydney, Australia —(CP)— Chinese silk now being sold here is being flown from Hong Kong to Sydney in 42 hours. Manufactured in Chinese factories by Chinese labor, the silk is being snapped up from samples even before it passes the customs.

The factories are only now getting into full production, as many looms were destroyed by the Japanese. Prices, now prohibitive, should start to fall as production rises.

Nylons stacked 10 feet high at a Sydney store will be sold shortly—but they are parachutes, not stockings. Designers consider them suitable for modern swimsuits and evening dresses. About 250 nylon 'chutes will be sold and as many fine woven silk ones.

Woman Asks Attlee Aid 10-Year Fight

London —(CP)— Among lesser decisions to be made by the Labor government is whether Margaret Self, Norfolk school teacher and Red Cross nurse, can continue with some hopes of success her 10-year campaign against a conviction for alleged dangerous driving.

Miss Self claims she was not the driver of a car when the alleged offence occurred and that the conviction was obtained by mistaken evidence. Now she has written Prime Minister Attlee, Home Secretary Chuter Ede and other members of parliament asking permission to make a further appeal beyond the courts which have heard her case.

She cited the recent decisions that there had been some irregularities in the trial of 243 paratroopers in Malaya and the subsequent quashing of their conviction for refusing to obey orders

"The irregularities to which I have put my signature are as serious as those in the paratroop case and in the interests of justice the right of appeal is due to all citizens and the law should be revised," Miss Self wrote.

Specialist Dr. L. L. Larson said the new fibre should have a "fundamental influence" on the textile industry. Now produced experimentally, the fibre combines dimensional stability with durability, and is both light and warm.

Reclaim Coastlands Of British Guiana

By BURCHELL O. WILLS
Canadian Press Correspondent

Georgetown, British Guiana —(CP)—First of eight major drainage and irrigation schemes planned to be completed in 20 years Corentyne and Boniska-Boerasirie projects, now well under way, will reclaim 253,761 acres of British Guiana coastland for agriculture.

Drainage and irrigation in this South American British colony, a problem of considerable magnitude because so much of the coastal area, like Holland, is below sea level, is being tackled on a scale never before attempted. Almost all the cultivated land lies within a narrow strip along the Atlantic seaboard, although it extends in some cases along the banks of rivers, notably the Essequibo, Demerara and Berbico.

About three-quarters of this land in the coastal area, which has a depth of between five and 10 miles, consists of heavy acid silts and clays traversed at irregular intervals by narrow belts of sandy soil. The remainder consists of acid, peaty soils in which organic matter has a high carbon nitrogen ratio.

Serve Dual Purpose

Dikes are as important to this area as are those of The Netherlands. Not only must they be employed to keep back the sea but also as protection from inundation by flood waters from the near interior. Property adequately protected by dikes is said to be empoldered.

No crops can be grown successfully unless the land is intersected by a complicated network of open ditches for drainage and larger ones for navigation. The maze of ditches and lack of roads render mechanization difficult and the "farm" as visualized by those familiar with North American agriculture does not exist.

In general, agriculture here, whose main crops are sugar and rice, is carried out either on a large capitalistic basis employing thousands of hand laborers or by peasants working their small holdings of a few acres each.

The two present schemes, which will cover about half of the 503,377 acres due for reclamation at an estimated cost of $6,000,000, are positive steps toward British Guiana's goal of making itself the granary of the British west Indies.

Beavers go by Air To South America

The Pas, Man. (CP)—Thomas Lamb, veteran northern Manitoba fur rancher who last month took 20 Canadian beaver by air to the Argentine, has completed arrangements to ship 30 more next summer and is considering an Argentine government request that he take a dozen cariboo from South Indian Lake near here, it was learned in a letter from Buenos Aires.

A bush pilot in the north for many years, Mr. Lamb was provided with a government flying boat and Spanish crew to make a 1,500-mile survey of the lower Andes to locate a home for the beaver. The project is part of an Argentine plan to develop fur ranching in that country.

Mr. Lamb said he found suitable cold water and trees in an area near Cape Horn.

Describing the plane trip to South America, he said he kept the beaver in large Pan American Airways' refrigerators at stopping off points. Some of the animals got out of their cages and chewed a hole through a foot-thick oak door.

"Crossing Brazil and Venezuela it was terribly hot, and at 12,000 feet the beaver all went to sleep because we did not have oxygen masks to fit them."

The best beaver country he had seen was near the Chilean border, but the Argentine government would not "let me liberate the beavers there," and asked him not to negotiate a sale with Chile.

In addition to 30 beaver and possibly the baby cariboo, Mr. Lamb plans to take 100 muskrat south of the equator next year.

Swedish Tars Aided Allies Locate V2s

Regina (CP)— Sweden did many things for the Allies which could not be published during the war, Dr. K. G. Bolander, a senior editor of the Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dugbladet, said in an interview here during a Canadian tour.

Dr. Bolander said the elertness of Swedish sailors led directly to the bombing of Peenemunde where the destructive V2s were being developed. The bombing has been credited with delaying the V2 attacks by several months and shortening the war.

Swedish sailors had noticed that vast amounts of concrete were being taken to Peenemunde and reported these and other activities to the British.

The Swedish people were interested in Canada but had no inkling of the vast industrial strides taken by the Dominion during and since the war.

Dr. Bolander said that much had been made of Sweden delivering ball bearings to Germany for manufacture of fighter planes to "shoot down American boys." The fact was that a much greater quantity of bearings were delivered to Britain by British speedboats from the port of Lysekil.

When allied planes flew over Sweden they were met by a mighty barrage but none were shot down because gunners had been instructed not to shoot at the planes. The display was merely for Germany's benefit. On the other hand 40 German planes had been shot down, Dr. Bolander said.

CHILLY HOUSES AFFECTS STYLES IN OLD LONDON

By DENISE DALTROFF
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London —(CP)— The post-war fuel shortage has its repercussions all along the line — in industry, in homes and even on fashions.

Dress designers, knowing that restaurants, theatres and private houses are likely to be chilly this winter, include in their new collections dinner dresses with long sleeves.

Some of these dresses were shown at mannequin parades held during London's autumn Fashion Week. The nightly parades, augmented by daytime displays of shoes, fabrics and dresses, were the start of a new plan to make fashion shows embrace every aspect of clothing.

The promoters say that "fashion co-relation" is becoming increasingly important. Answering the problem of what to wear with what, and shop-to-shop pilgrimages to match up this with what will soon be a thing of the past, they contend. In future, designers will create entire ensembles, including accessories, so that each item complements the others in color, texture and design.

Importance of shoes in this new "co-related fashion" plan was marked by a footwear display—first of its kind. Many of the shoes were made especially to go with gowns and costumes shown at the parades.

Lightweight Shoes.

Most of the lightweight shoes were toeless and backless, with the front decorated with leather rosettes or bows. Variety of colored leathers was used — including green, red, royal blue, yellow and purple.

Manufacturers said that high wedges are going out in favor of front platforms in a contrasting color. Most startling of the new designs was a cocktail shoe in black suede trimmed with diacente and held in position with a broad strap and back-bow fastening worn high on the ankle.

Lined winter bootees, some of them lacing up the back, and summer play sandals are fashions which have come to stay, said one shoe designer.

Men were not forgotten at the exhibition and among the new ideas was a shoe modelled on the chukkas worn by the British troops in the Far East.

Propose Greyhound Research Station

London —(CP)— A greyhound research station at which health problems of dogs in general will be studied is to be set up by the Veterinary Education Trust.

The Duke of Norfolk, president of the Trust, said they were actively engaged in laying plans for early establishment of the station.

The modern veterinarian, he said, was equal to the modern doctor both in scientific attainment and skill though "the fact does not yet appear to be appreciated by all."

V.O.N. News

Every week there is a splendid attendance at the Child Health Conference at the Kiwanis Centre where the Victorian Order of Nurses now have their headquarters. Child health education is one of the most important phases of V.O.N. services, since it is the foundation of future community health. By giving the child the earliest start possible in good health habits and care, mothers are providing it with a priceless possession.

The services available at the Child Health Conferences are many. First the child is registered and all records concerning its health and development are kept very carefully. The child is weighed each week and the mother is advised concerning its diet, and if there is evidence that the family physician should be consulted the nurse recommends this to the mother. Dental and immunization clinics offer further means of mothers keeping a constant watch over the health needs of their children. For this reason regular attendance of infants and pre-school age children at the Child Health Conferences is recognized as of vital importance, by mothers in the community.

Greenwich to Lose Royal Observatory

London —(CP)— Transfer of the Royal Observatory from Greenwich to a new home at Herstmonceux Castle, Sussex, has been decided upon, but the job will take several years.

The move, scheduled to begin next year, will be done piecemeal and during most of the period meteorological and astronomical study will go on at both places.

A minimum of equipment will be moved into the historic castle. Instead, domes and out-buildings to house the instruments are to be built in the grounds. The observatory will preserve intact the exterior of the castle and only minor alterations will be made inside.

Married Couples Asked to Take Another Squint at Tax Regulations

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 30 —(CP)— While protests flow to the revenue department against the decrease next year in the tax exemption for married women, officials of the Canadian Welfare Council and National Employment Service Counsel asks married couples—both working—to take another squint at the new tax regulations.

The nurse and teacher for instance, who have considered tossing aside starched apron and white chalk for a printed pinny and pan in the kitchen may discover it still pays to work—even if a husband must start digging down where it hurts after his wife makes more than $250.

It's the concensus of people who go into such things with pencil, pad and a flare for figures that it willl cost the working couple approximately $100 extra in taxes if the wife keeps her job.

Examples Given

Asked for an opinion on the new regulations, officials of the Canadian Welfare Council referred to recent survey by the Toronto welfare council.

The survey, made available to similar organizations in other parts of Canada, carries examples of tax calculations illustrating the net position of husband and wife in 1946 and 1947.

Under 1946 taxation plans a married woman could receive an income $660 before her husband's exemption of $1,500 was affected. The provision reducing the $660 to $250 becomes effective Jan. 1.

"While the husband pays more tax in 1947, he does pay so little more than the total net position (amount left after tax payment) of his wife and himself taken together, is not very much less than the situation in 1946," the report said.

The examples showed that "with a wife earning $1,200 and the husband $2,500, the total amount which they will have left in 1947 will be only $94.50 less than in 1946." Another example of a wife earning $1,700, with a husband earning $3,000, showed that in 1947 the pair would have only $68.50 less than it received for this year.

The report concluded: "The total amount of net loss in a typical case will be something of the order of $60 to $90."

Dependent Child

It added that "if there is a dependent child in the family the additional exemption of $100 for the husband plus the family allowances will just about make up the moderate loss which the new tax situation involves."

The report shows that a husband in the $2,000-$4,000-a-year income class will benefit by a $200 drop in his tax if his wife stops working. On the other hand "this $200 must be balanced against the $1,100 to $1,700 which will be lost if the wife leaves employment."

Nevertheless fear has been expressed in some areas that the new tax exemption will mean a wholesale withdrawal of married women essential in many industries where there are not sufficient unmarried women and where the jobs cannot be done by men.

The Registered Nurses Association of Ontario has appealed to its members to take immediate action. It claims that nurses' incomes, even when additional income taxes were considered, still left them a considerable financial reward.

In the rural areas the farmer's wife isn't paying much attention to this urban fracas. Officials of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture says the new exemption is approximately what a farmer's wife is permitted on the money she makes from the sale of produce grown in her garden of eggs from the hens she has raised, or of dairy products from the cows she milks daily.

The Experts Say

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 30—(CP)—Rosy harvest apples by the bushel, by the basket, or in smaller quantities, line the market-stalls these days, and if mother keeps an eye on her purse strings as well as on her family's health she'll be taking advantage of this year's apple crop to turn the fruit into tasty dishes for the dinner-table.

While apple-sauce heads the list of favorite apple desserts, there are two schools of thought in regard to its preparation. The real sauce, which is fluffy and smooth, is best sweetened after cooking as it requires less sugar that way. The other type has the transparent slices in a clear syrup. For this the syrup is made first and the pieces of apple added and cooked until tender. The syrup prevents the breaking up of the pieces.

Home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, have found that one teaspoon of sugar to one medium raw apple comes out about right in sweetening the sauce, unless the apples are extremely tart.

With a supply of apple-sauce on hand, it is an easy matter to make desserts such as Apple Snow for which one cup of smooth sauce is folded into the stiffly beaten white of one egg. the egg yolk may be used to make a custard sauce to serve with the snow.

Nothing can beat the old-fashioned apple pie, and in these days of fat shortages, deep apple pie, with plenty of apples and a single crust, will be easy on the pastry.

A pastry shell, made with oatmeal, filled with apple-sauce, then sprinkled with grated cheese, is the pie in a new form. It should be popped in the oven just long enough to melt the cheese, and served hot. For a party a touch of maringue may replace the cheese.

Cheese is one of our most valuable foods and should have a prominent place in meals of both adults and children. It contains nearly all the proteins of milk, which are body-builders; a large percentage of fat which makes it a valuable source of energy; a good supply of minerals, all of which are essential to good health. Since it requires approximately 11 pounds, or a little more than one gallon of milk to make one pound of cheese, about four ounces of cheese is equivalent to one quart of milk in total caloric value. So if desired cheese can take the place of part of the daily milk requirement.

Auto Travel in Gulf Coast Area Described as Delightful

(By Harry W. Smith in Cleveland Plain Dealer)

Tampa, Fla., —At the completion of a tour of virtually all of the American gulf coast, several generalizations may be reached.

From Brownsville Tex., to Tampa Bay, Fla., commercial fishing probably ranks first in economic importance throughout this 1,500 miles of driving; the coast line is much longer. Travel including places to stop, meal and refreshment facilities, resort improvements and shopping, vie with fishing and packing as a source of gulf revenue. Cattle raising, too, is a major industry. Citrus production is largely inland.

The above order of industrial precedence may not square with statistics. It is merely the unescapable impression of a passerby, based on a long succession of fishing and packing activities, one never-ending avenue of tourist attractions and, on every hand and on the roadway, countless cattle.

Historical Places

Antiquity, if one can call anything in the New World antique, is common to all segments of the arc of land bordering the Gulf of Mexico. You encounter it along the Texas coast, intermingled with the events in Mexico and the buccaneers of the Spanish Main.

Lower Louisiana has its Acadian vestiges, living as well as dead, while New Orleans has so much of the very old along side the new that tourists from everywhere come to see and learn.

Closely linked with the history of New Orleans is that of the Mississippi and Alabama gulf coast, although most of the landmarks there move up a century to include antebellum and Civil War memories. The Jefferson Davis home between Gulfport and Biloxi is just one reminder of the proud Confederacy.

Climate Stumps Writer

The Florida west coast may not have as many memorials to the past as are encountered on the swing eastward around the perimeter of the gulf, but the 17th and 18th centuries blink at the tourist from bayou and village, be it no more than the ruin of a stone sugar mill used before the United States was a nation. You see little of this from the main highways, but when you do venture by side road to the gulf edge even the customs of the villagers there hark back to forgotten times.

When it comes to vacationing, the climate usually is the determining factor. In that respect the entire gulf coast has this writer stumped. Where you expect, by reason of latitude, to find an area set up for the winter season you learn that summer is its dish. Galveston is a case in point where everything is closed now except the two big hotels which stay open for conventions.

Fishing, Hunting Are Sure

Along the Mississippi gulf coast you'll hear said, "it's a little too early in the season for the tourists to be coming down in big numbers." But the climate there is about the same as at Galveston or Corpus Christi. The upper Florida gulf coast to Apalachacola is preparing for the winter season. Yet in all this long stretch more than 1,000 miles, from Brownsville, only the hardy swim in winter.

So the climate along the American gulf coast isn't the mainspring of the desire to visit its resorts in the cold months after all. It's the fishing and hunting, plus a predilection for June weather interspersed with a December frost, the former regular, the latter occasional. November and December are the best deep sea fishing months; then there is always prime fresh water angling in the Florida spring-fed rivers. Hunting is prominently mentioned in all resort folders from the Mexican border to Key West.

Cheap Stands Hit

Common to all gulf coast resort spots and stretches are bound to be some unpleasant obtrusions and one of these is the uncontrolled growth of avenues of cheap stands, repair hacks and souvenir shops; and alongside, the more ornate and less objectionable gasoline station and motor court. This curse is not peculiar to the gulf coast. One encounters it in any state.

It seems a shame that the approach along any main highway to a resort village which in itself may be beautiful should be cluttered with low-slung hurriedly built construction inlaid and escalloped with bewildered lines of neon and painted signs. Often these commercial avenues extend for a mile or two before you get into the resort or town.

The time has passed when the commercialization of a strictly resort community or area can be corrected. It might be halted by zoning ordinances or state laws, but obliteration is impossible. The damage has been done.

Zoning Laws Needed

Gov. Millard Caldwell of Florida says that for 20 years, long before he was governor, he has been crying for zoning regulations along his beloved west coast. He had in mind the newest development which is along the gulf from Pensacola to Panama City. Now, he says, that stretch is being improved helter-skelter and the opportunity for integral development with regard for the beauty of the waterside has passed.

With all its common characteristics, the writer knows of no stretch of equal length that surpasses the gulf coast of the United States in variety of scene and experience. The crossing of the plains of Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, The Texas panhandle and eastern New Mexico becomes monotonous; not so the water route, from Norfolk, if you please to the Rio Grande, including all of the gulf coast except west Florida.

Strangely enough our neighbor, Mexico, may have more to do with popularizing this water route than will the delightful havens throughout its length. Mexican road completion is expected to pull from the east via the Brownsville and McAllen gateways and the route thither is the gulf coast.

BROADCASTS PUT LIFE INTO DULL SCHOOL STUDIES

Poetry, History and Other Subjects Dramatized by CBC to Stimulate Pupil Interest

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Appointment of Dr. W. P. Percival, director of Protestant education for the province of Quebec, as chairman of the National Advisory Council on School Broadcasting coincides with the beginning of the fifth season of CBC National School Broadcasts, a series of programs for the class room prepared by the CBC in co-operation with the Advisory Council.

An adjunct to the regular school curriculum, the programs —each 30 minutes in length and zoned for schools in every province—thus far have achieved wide popularity as stimulants to the interest and imagination of pupils. Carefully selected subjects in four general courses are aimed at all school age levels and give life to many, otherwise lifeless school subjects. Thus, a highlight in the series is Shakespeare's "Macbeth," a dramatization of the play in five instalments, with well-known radio actors in the cast and accompanied by supporting music.

Additional subjects, all in dramatized forms, are the series "They Build a Nation," dealing with the lives of famous Canadian explorers; "Four Canadian Potes," the lives of outstanding Canadian poets, including readings from their works; "Animals and Birds of Canada," in which a pair of youngsters go on a series of imaginary field trips to explore animal and bird life in the main geographic regions of Canada, and "The Adventure of Canadian Painting," five programs dramatizing the lives of well-known Canadian arttists.

To assist the young at school in following and understanding current developments throughout the world, a special review of significant news of the week prefaces the regular Friday broadcast. This section of the program is prepared in CBC's central news room at Toronto. Here, a mass of world-wide information is carefully examined, edited and analyzed for student listeners so that they may obtain a comprehensive picture of events.

Program producers maintain close co-operation with the provincial departments of education, the Conference of Canadian Universities, Canadian Teachers' Federation, Home and School Federation and the Canadian Trustees' Association. In addition, school teachers are briefed on methods for organizing classrooms, both before and after the broadcasts, so that the greatest possible benefit may be derived by the pupils.

As a further aid to the teacher, CBC has prepared a handbook "Young Canada Listens," which includes full details of the programs offered nationally and regionally during the 1946-47 school term.

An unusual response to a program was experienced recently by CKOC, Hamilton. Hal Francis, Treasure Chest's master of ceremonies, tossed off a recipe for butterless cheese popovers. No sooner had he finished revealing the popovers' ingredients when the reception desk was swamped by telephone requests for a repeat.

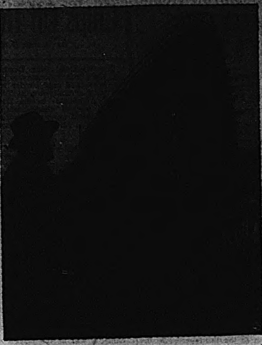
The recipe was broadcast at 10:25 a.m. and at 11:30 a loyal fan telephoned to say she had just whipped up a batch of popovers....that they were "simply delicious," and that the station's staff must try them. Shortly afterwards she delivered the delicacies in person.

Rapid Delivery For Food Gifts

Melbourne, Australia (Reuters) —Senator Donald Cameron, the Australian postmaster-general in a letter to the Lord Mayor of Melbourne, said only 125 of 10,000,000 food parcels reaching the United Kingdom from Australia in the first five months of 1946, were held up by customs.

"Most parcels are now delivered within a week of arrival."

THE END OF THE MIGHTY "NORMANDIE"



Morris E. Lipsett, of Jamestown, N.Y., is shown looking over the huge charred hull of the former French luxury liner, S. S. Normandie, which he purchased for $161,680 from the U. S. Marine commission. Lipsett said the deal was a gamble because of the high cost of labor in turning the massive steel hull into scrap. The vessel, which cost $65,000,000 to build, was gutted by fire four years ago as it was being converted into a troop transport.

Tour Italy in Comfort? You Can —at $50 a Day

Rome if you are willing to fork out 10,000 lire or up to $50 a day; you can tour Italy, one of the world's tourist meccas, with considerable pleasure and comfort.

If you are an ordinary tourist, you will have to put up with low class hotels, where you will be lucky to get a room; with third-rate railroad coaches crowded to the window sills and with prices that will remind you painfully of home.

In fact, an innocent abroad will find everything at sixes and sevens but food, which is plentiful on the black market and of better quality than before the war.

Americans Want Comfort

British French and Swiss tourists, particularly British, are returning to Italy in increasing numbers, but they are sophisticated tourists. Americans, it must be said, usually expect all the comforts of home and simply do not have the know-how to get on quickly, cheaply and comfortably in a strange country.

It might be added that the foreign tourists are also sticking to the north of Italy, the lakes region in the Alpine foothills and to the Italian Riviera, where accomodations can be had more easily. Thus, if your ship landed at Genoa, you would find it easier to get along than at Naples.

In Naples and Rome, not to mention Venice, Capri and Sorrento, the other great tourist attractions virtually every major hotel of decent standards is under requisition by either the British or American military.

Transportation a Headache

If however you figured on paying 3,000 lire or about $14 a day for room and board, you could find a tolerable pension or boarding house. The same prices hold good on the Riviera for modest quarters. If you ate out, a meal would cost about 1,000 lire or about $5 a person. The official exchange rate is 225 lire to the dollar.

Transportation will be your chief headache. If you take the best type of bus available, you can travel between Naples, Rome Florence and Milan safely but with tight baggage restrictions for obvious reasons of space. For railroad space, you must stand in line for hours and hours.

But if you really want to ride securely to your next stop, you can always hire a private car at a charge of 50-80 lire (25 to 40 cents) a kilometre, which is five-eighths of a mile. Black market gasoline costs 180 lire a liter or 80 cents for one and three-quarters pints.

And The Tips

Also be prepared to shell out 50 cents or $1 tax for permission to stop overnight in most towns. And oh yes, the tips. Italian service charges, amounting now to 20 per cent of any costs, are added to your bill. But be ready to pass out another 5 per cent in free largesse.

Tourist travel used to be one of Italy's greatest prewar sources of foreign exchange, 200,000 visiting the country every year. Everybody talks of making Italy a tourists' paradise and a cultural centre for students, artists and writers. With the lire to be devalued again soon, it is proposed to give France a real run for this trade.

Unfortunately, today there are pressing problems of hand-to-mouth existence continued Allied occupation and international uncertainties of the peace treaty. So no one in the Italian government has yet taken the tourist matter in hand.

State Department makes some fuss about issuing passports to travellers other than business-men, student, the press and persons having family affairs to attend in Italy.

Tourists agencies here hope the United States passport situation will ease by next spring when it is also hoped the Italians may have got around to making arrangements attractive for tourists.

But whenever you do come be resigned to getting hooked with great regularity and with extreme courtesy. For this you may thank three years of free-spending habits of thousands of American soldiers.

Eire to Foster Tourist Trade

Dublin (CP)—Sean Lemass, minister for industry and commerce, said foreign visitors are being encouraged to come to Eire despite shortages of some foods and other goods, because "the sale of holiday facilities is export business of the highest value."

"It is my firm conviction," he told the Irish Tourist Association, "that, given the right conditions, which are within our power to create, we can build this industry to one of major and permanent economic significance.

"The proportion of the total world tourist trade which we can attract may be comparatively small, but it will still be big business for us—equivalent to an expansion of production of visible goods and visible exports to a value of several million pounds a year."

To attempt to restrict visitors would "create ill-will in a world where we want all the goodwill we can earn."

Discover Ancient Buddhist Monument

New Delhi—(CP)—An ancient Buddhist monument, believed to belong to the first century B.C., has recently been discovered in South India in the East Godavari district.

Dr. M. Rama Rao, who is investigating the discovery, describes the monument as a wheel-shaped, brick structure with a diameter of some 200 feet. It was buried in a mound from which it was unearthed by the people of the district.

SAYS 17 CHILDREN LIVE IN ONE HOVEL

N. Z. Doctor Describes Condition of Maoris on Bleak Chatham Islands

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

Christchurch, N.Z. (CP) — A startling account of conditions in the Chathams, a small group of islands which lie about 500 miles to the east of the South Island of New Zealand, and which are an integral part of the Dominion, was given recently by Dr. G. T. Davies, who has spent the past year as resident medical officer there. The islands, which are cold and bleak, are inhabited by a few hundred residents, mostly Maoris.

Housing in the Chathams, Dr. Davies said, is the poorest he has ever seen. The native houses, in most cases, are hovels, small and over-crowded, with a few sticks of furniture. Candles are used for lighting and the houses are badly ventilated, sometimes leaky and without baths or latrines.

He had encountered evidence of sexual and other anti-social tendencies which wree disquieting. The rate of illegitimacy was high. Such things appeared to be known and generally accepted by the people. Wife-beating was apparently frequent.

Families were usually large. In one family there were 17 children in one house. Six of them slept in three single beds in a room eight feet square without window ventilation.

Interbreeding was astonishing, Dr. Davies said. In one school of 39 children, one girl was related to 37 of the others as aunt or first or second cousin. If this were at all representative of conditions in the last 100 years it must be a big factor in the feeble-mindedness of which there appeared to be undue incidence.

The main foods are meat and potatoes, augmented sometimes by swan eggs and fish. In spite of pleadings by successive medical officers few families had made any effort to grow other vegetables or fruit. Even potatoes once planted were ignored until they were cropped. The land was highly fertile, yet a big family would do without milk all winter through sheer laziness.

Through the introduction of the New Zealand social security payments, some breadwinners had ceased work altogether and lived on unemployment and family benefit payments. The cost of living was not high and much of the money went into hotels.

As there was virtually no social life or recreation the islanders had developed a penchant for parties lasting all night. A wedding or a funeral had become an excuse for at least three days' debauchery in the small crowded shacks. Small children were brought into an atmosphere of drunkenness and immorality.

ROCK THROW FATAL

Mombasa May Become British Naval Base

Mombasa, Kenya —(Reuters)— Mombasa, small island off the Kenya coast and likely to become a British naval base, already faces the most critical housing shortage in its history. Scarcity of building materials, high price of land and increase in civilian population are responsible.

At a meeting of the Mombasa European Civilian Residents' Association a heavier tax on undeveloped land was advocated to encourage building.

W. Cunningham Wilson, managing director of the only European construction company on the coast, said that given the material he could erect 100 houses and sell them immediately. Residential sites were being sold for up to £500 ($2,000) an acre compared with £130 pre-war.

Olson And Wagner in Tag Wrestling Match at Arena

Christie Beats Davis and Meets Primo Carnera Here Next Week

There were sounds of mad revelry by night at the Hume Arena. A shouting, yelling crowd of the faithful surged ringwards, their faces white in the bright lights as they urged their favorites the Sharpe Brothers, Michael and Benjamin to the kill.

And that is what the streamlined glamorous lads of the squared wrestling circle did to those villainous toughies Olaf Olsen and Strangler Bob Wagner last night in one of the wildest, fightingest team matches ever seen in a ring here.

It was a cross between the Donnybrook Fair, Napoleon's retreat from Moscow and the Nuernberg hangings. The boys, after paying more or less strict attention, to the Australian tag rules, went more or less berserk when they saw a partner in difficulties and tore into the opposition with all the abandon of a starved jaguar into a fat juicy rabbit.

They used everything but the police station, the girders and the proverbial kitchen sink in their respective efforts to dunk the foe.

Hangman Tactics

They tore the ropes loose from the ring posts and used them in a gang hanging act that had the pewholders hanging on to their hair, their teeth and their seats. Olsen and Mike Sharpe started the fiesta with some neat slugging and it wasn't long before the boys forgot the rules (what are they) that govern this type of mat wrangling and they were all in there willy-nilly throwing punches in all directions.

Referee Ernie Powers was in a tough spot. The big gent from Hamilton did a swell job refereeing but he caught more punches from any direction last night than Billy Conn did in his vandeville act with Joe Louis. In fact the four wrestlers had a field day at the expense of the luckless "His Nibs". Sneaking up behind him any of them would let go a haymaker in the general direction of the foe but it usually landed somewhere in the vicinity of the Power's beak.

Then someone conceived the bright idea of tearing one of the ring ropes loose from its moorings. It looked from here as though it was the strangler and then everything broke loose. They had Ben Sharpes tonsils all wrapped up nicely in a rope package with Olsen and the Strangler doing a skipping act with the hemp.

Then brother Mike entered the fray. He unleashed a savage two-fisted attack that sent Olsen soaring into the first row of ringside seats, and using the rope method and brother Ben effectively trussed the Strangler like a cowboy would a wandering maverick. Then each used the Wagner puss as a punching bag until one of them looked down and noticed that Referee Powers was included in the package of squirming pachydermity.

There wasn't a dull moment. The four lads lashed one another with solid smashes and lightening punches. There was no living on the mat with a beseeching look on the various pusses seeking help. It was action, all through and easily one of the most exciting shows ever seen in a Belleville ring. It ended when big Mike Sharpe finally flattened the dangerous Strangler with a body spread and the howls of the faithful could be heard in Shannonville.

Christie Beat Davis

And the second main bout between Vic Christie and Karl Davis wasn't much less exciting. Remembering the solid going-over given him last week by the Krippler, Christie unleashed a savage attack from the opening gong to the end of the bout which he won in two straight falls. Christie gave Davis no chance to exercise his favorite holds. The glamorous kid from Hollywood tore into his opponent and had him reeling scarcely two minutes after the gong opened the bout. And by virtue of his fine performance Christie will meet the famous Prima Carnera, former heavyweight boxing champion in the 1st wrestling show of the season here next Saturday night.

Pat Flanagn defeated Al Korman in a rousing preliminary.

VARSITY DEFEATS QUEENS BY 7-1

Toronto, Nov. 30. (CP)—University of Toronto's Senior Hockey team had a 7-1 victory over Queen's University in the opener last night of the Intercollegiate hockey league, played before 2,300 fans at Varsity Arena.

Both clubs appeared lacking in timing for the opening game but the play turned up several promising prospects, notably Kryzanowski of Toronto and Davidson and Smith of Queens.

Queen's—Goal, Wood; defence, Smith, Moffat; Centre, Davidson; wings, Ohkle, Lefebvre. Subs—Hamilton, Davis, Wagar, Cameron, Kerr, Heww.

THE "LORD'S" FISH

Douglas, Isle of Man —(CP)—The first royal sturgeon caught off the Isle of Man for many years was given to the lieutenant governor under a 1422 law stating "any porpoise, sturgeon or whale" caught between the headlands of Man is "the Lord's by his prerogative."

DEFEAT PATS BY 9 TO 3 COUNT

Toronto Staffords Obligingly Drop Contest to Stratford by Same Score

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton's ageless Tigers continued to make the O.H.A. senior "A" race a runaway last night by bowling over the second - place Hamilton Pats 9-3 while Toronto Staffords, tied with Pats for second, obligingly dropped a decision to Stratford Indians by the same score.

The tireless tabbies, Allan Cup finalists last season and unbeaten in seven starts this year, toyed with their younger intra-city rivals, running up a five-goal lead in the first frame and then letting the Pats skate themselves into exhaustion trying to catch up.

Veteran defenceman Bobby Laurent spearheaded the Tiger attack, picking up three goals and two assists. Brady, Shillington, Peer, Liscombe, Miochnovich and Liscombe fired the other goals. Gluck, Tom Smelle and Grosser counted for the Pats.

Staffords made a game of it in Stratford until the roof fell in on them in the third period as the Indians took time out from fisticuffs to pour four goals past Gilson in the Toronto nets.

Long Gets Four

Pete Long led the scoring parade with four goals, followed by Wally Zuke with two. Robinson, Auger and Phillips were the other Stratford scorers. Pat McKeown, Don Willson and Roy Hawkey were the Toronto scorers.

The win lifted Stratford out of a last-place tie in the five-team loop and left Staffords and Pats tied six points behind the Tigers.

In the only junior "A" game, Barrie Flyers took over sole possession of third place behind Toronto St. Michael's and Stratford Kroehlers by tieing St. Catharines Falcons 2-2 at Barrie. Unger and Frick tallied for the Falcons and Favero and Meger got the Barrie goals.

The entire junior loop swings into action today, Hamilton Szabos play St. Michael's and Galt Red Wings meet Toronto Young Rangers in an afternoon doubleheader at Maple Leaf Gardens, the Flyers and Falcons meet again in St. Catharines, Stratford visit Oshawa and Toronto Marlboros play the Spitfires at Windsor in a four-point encounter.

U.S. Tennis Stars Now in Australia For Cup Matches

(By The Canadian Press)

With the United States tennis stars already at Melbourne in preparation for the Davis Cup tennis matches a month from now, there is widespread speculation that the Australian tennis chiefs are either (1) giving the Americans a delicate run around or (2) definitely uncertain as to who will pair with Jack Bromwich in the doubles match.

With observers predicting outcome of the world's tennis championship will hinge on the doubles, Adrian Quist, 33-year-old veteran who would normally team up with Bromwich, is said to be in the selector's dog house with a "frantic" search under way for a substitute.

Quist has failed to reach top form since return from Army Service and one school of thought has the Australians pinning their hopes on two men, Bromwich and the youthful star, Dinny Pails.

A soccer team from the visiting Canadian Aircraft Carrier Warrior went down to defeat before a Mexican naval base team 1-0 at Acapulco yesterday but the Mexicans presented the cup they had won to the visitors in a goodwill gesture.

Hamilton's Jackie Cullura, at 125 3-4 pounds, lost out to Jackie Graves, at 129 1-2 by a seventh round knockout in their scheduled 10-round boxing bout at Minneapolis yesterday.

The stage is all set for the annual Army - Navy football classic today at Philadelphia with Army and Notre Dame crowding each other for the mythical United States championship. The Irish meet Southern California at South Bend and if both Army and Notre Dame win their games they will probably be recognized as college co-champions for 1946.

At New York yesterday ,Yankee Stadium officials, claimed the all-time record attendance with a total of 3,302,535 spectators watching 1946 sports events in "The House That Ruth Built".

A Joints Rules Committee announced yesterday at Philadelphia that Softball rules for 1947 will be the same as this year, which saw several drastic changes in effect.

WHOLESALE PRICES UP

Washington, Nov. 30 — (AP)—Wholesale prices in the United States have soared to the highest level in 26 years and are 21.8 per cent steeper than at the end of last June, the latest index from the Bureau of Labor statistics shows. The index is based on 900 commodities.

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

The Winnipeg Blue Bombers, the gridiron Lochinvars of the West, and only barrier in the path of the powerful Toronto Argonauts to the Dominion football championship, are all tuned up ready for the final fray in Toronto this afternoon.

• • •

By the time you read this, Wally Dobler, 165 pound "quintuple threat" of the westerners, will be matching his ability against that of peerless Joe "King" Krol, dynamic Argonauts' star who is rated the best pigskinner in Canada at the present time.

• • •

Pre-game odds were 1-4 for Argos and that ratio will likely match that of the final score. However as Coach Ted Morris of the Double-Blue remarks before the game "Anything can happen before that final whistle blows", and there was no strange swelling on the side of his face when he said it.

• • •

....If the Bombers blast the Argo smooth-working machine, it will be the biggest upset of the year, second only to that of Navy torpedoing the Army Mule down in the good old USA. But that is not likely and we'll take Argonauts by three touchdowns.

• • •

Softball officials and fans in Trenton, the up-and-coming village to the west, are not letting any alfalfa sprout under their spikes. Already they have organized for 1947 with a new slate of officers and making plans for a bigger and better season next year. The president is Oscar Pierce; vice-prexy, Allan LaMorre; secretary, Garnet Bowden and treasurer, Don Hooey.

• • •

The Trenton lads have been assured that their games will be played under floodlights next year as the Trenton Public Utilities have entered in contract with the town softball association to install the necessary equipment. The loop will pay the shot by yearly instalments. That is community spirit of the right kind.

• • •

The junior hockey set-up in the district doesn't look any too bright, according to reports from outside sources. Tweed is definitely out of the picture, while Stirling hasn't got much hope of fielding a beardless squad. Trenton will put a team on the ice, but strange silence holds forth over around Picton way. At present it looks like Belleville and Trenton for junior shinny this year unless other squads can be induced to come into the fold.

• • •

A new hockey league has been formed to the west of us, dubbed the Canadian Legion Loop and which will embrace teams from Trenton, Brighton, Frankford and Campbellford. The prexy of the new set-up is Howard Wilson, Campbellford, and the secretary, George Field of the same town.

• • •

Looks as though the Trent Valley League will form the chief hockey attraction in outside districts this year. Campbellford has already organized with Mayor Ayrhart, sponsoring the show, while strong squads are being formed in Norwood, Marmora, Madoc, Tweed, Batawa and Stirling.

• • •

Ed Shortt's Junior Girls Basketball Team will journey to Picton tonight to play their first out of town game for the season. Several players will be unable to make the trip, as they have to work and the game is not of sufficient importance to take time off. However, ten girls will make the trip to play against the Picton ladies team in a game preliminary to the game between Picton intermediate men and Queen's University intermediates. The local team will be made up of Shirley Bunnett, June Matthews, Mary Tomaso, Dorothy Bishop, Joan Wright, Donna Davidson, Victoria Ketcheson, Clara Kikes, and Betty Zebedee.

• • •

Confidence, someone wrote is something everyone especially athletes should have. Just as an automobile won't run without tires, an athlete won't win championships without confidence. All the great ones had it. Maybe they weren't as flamboyant as the great John L. Sullivan use to be when he shouted: "I can lick any man in the world," but they have the same feeling.

• • •

Walter Hagen, the grand golfer had plenty of it, according to this story which we dug up the other day. Touring the southland with Joe Kirkwood a number of years ago, the Haig tried to drum up some bets with the people at one course they visited. "What's the course record here?" Hagen asked. Someone answered, "sixty-eight."

• • •

Hagen announced, "I'll bet $1,000 I'll break or tie the record. Any takers?"

A group of his new acquaintances got together and covered the bet. Then they set out to watch Hagen's assult upon their course. On the eighteenth green, Walter needed a twelve-foot putt for a sixty-eight.

• • •

The home club boys huddled in a group and held their breath. Hagen grinned at them and calmly stroked the ball. The ball was still rolling when Walter turned and said "Me miss a twelve-foot putt for a thousand dollars? Come across." And the ball rolled in the cup.

"Y" Basketball

Two games were played Thursday night in the Y Girls' House League. Some of the younger players were not able to turn out due to the play at the Collegiate and other reasons prevented some players from being on hand, leaving the teams without subs, but some good, basketball was played. In the opening game the Queens, minus their two strongest attacking players, Betty Holway and Ev Allison, had the tough luck to stack up against the Aces whose combination was clicking, and whose captain Arlie Gilbert had her shooting eye on better than at any time this past two seasons. Arlie ran in 26 points, with her team mates feeding the payoff passes to her as she worked clear of her check. Peewee Lepore collected ten points while setting up a lot of Arlie's baskets for her. Two Juniors, Agnes and Joan Wright, led the Queens with 8 and 6 points, while a girl who is a newcomer to the Junior squad, playing her first game under men's rules, Betty Zebedee, got 8 points for the winners as well as playing a good game at guard. Play was closer than the score indicates, and both teams turned in a good game.

Second game was more closely fought. The Royals trimmed the Jokers by 32-28 in a dilly of a game which saw better passing than usual in this class of basketball. Trailing by 8 points at the half, the Jokers staged a second half rally which at one time had them within 2 points of their opponents, but a breakaway in the last moments gave the winners a 4 point lead at the final whistle. Shirley Bunnett and Shirley Marinoff led the winners with 12 points each, while Doris Mansfield and Barbara Kyle each collected 10 for the losers. There was never much to choose between these teams, and interest ran high throughout, both teams doing nice passing and setting up scoring plays regularly.

The teams.

Aces—A. Gilbert 26, A. Lepore 10, J. Newman, C. Kikes, 4, B. Zebedee, 8, D. Cooke 2, M. Tomaso 6. Total 56.

Queen's—D. Wonnacott, J. Wright 6, Davidson 2, A. Wright 8, C. Grant 2. Total 18.

Royals—J. Lepore 4, S. Bunnett 12, M. Tomaso 2, S. Marinoff 12, L. Burkholder 2. Total 32.

Jokers—D. Mansfield 10, B. Kyle, 10, D. Cooke, 4, D. Pappas, J. Newman 2, Total 28.

Referee—Ed Shortt. Scorers—S. Marinoff, D. Wonnacott. Timers—S. Bunnett, D. Davidson.

Next week's games—Thursday night. 7.30—Royalt vs Aces; 8.15 Jokers vs Queen's.

102,000 FANS WILL WATCH ARMY AND NAVY CLASH

Many of the Experts Are Wondering Why the Middies Show Up

By SID FEDER

Philadelphia, Nov. 30 (AP).—Army and Navy gridders tangle today for the 47th time in 56 years and practically every one of the 102,000 customers who will sit in on the party in Municipal Stadium are wondering why the Middies are even bothering to show up.

Of course, there'll be the opportunity for the future admirals to see President and Mrs. Truman and Navy Secretary Forrestal and War Secretary Patterson, who are turning football fans for this one. But aside from that, this meek middle machine, boasting the worst record in Navy's history and nursing an out-sized hospital list, figures to be just a set of stooges again for Army's greatest gridiron outfit in a generation.

There is no doubt that Army will be hot for this one.

It is well known that such wrecking specialists as Glenn Davis and Doc Blanchard don't need any particular excuse to win ball games. They've only spearheaded the army to a string of 27 straight victories without a loss since Navy won 13-0 in the 1943 service scramble.

As a result, the local gambling gentlemen, taking the usual careless chances with their bankrolls, even boosted the odds against Navy overnight and established the whiz-bangs from West Point as 32-point favorites today as game-time neared.

HEAVY GRIDIRON, EXPECTED FOR BOMBERS, ARGOS

Toronto Team Made 4 to 1 Favorites to Retain the Grey Cup

Toronto, Nov. 30 — (CP)—On a gridiron that should be heavy underfoot by official forecast, the best in the east meets the best in the west today and the football men are more cautious than the betting boys in picking a winner for this Dominion senior final.

The odds have gone as high as 4-1 that Toronto Argonauts will repeat their victory of last year over Winnipeg Blue Bombers, a smashing 35-0 triumph. Here's how Ted Morris, the Argos' little coach, viewed it on the eve of the game:

"We expect a tough ball game," said Ted. "We're going to play it just like any other game. We're not fooled any by the propaganda about the west being weak. So many things can happen in football for any team to be rated the way we're supposed to be rated over Winnipeg."

While the weather forecast was not for snow or rain, it did predict cloudy and milder weather and that meant the Varsity Stadium Field would probably remain muddy from a layer of wet snow scraped off it.

Both teams feature a wide-open attack and that meant both had their orders in for a fast, dry gridiron. But it seems as if a wet ball would enhance the western champions' chances, if anything, because a fumble never cares who makes it.

It seemed almost certain the aerial offensive would pay the big dividend in this 20th clash between east and west.

West was non-commital on his Bombers' chances on the eve of the game, merely repeating as he has from the start: "We'll give them lots of trouble."

FIRE TRACER BULLETS

San Mateo, Calif., Nov. 30 — (AP) — Police searched the countryside last night for a roving band which motorists complained, was firing tracer bullets at passing automobiles. Five different drivers reported within one hour that three men in a blue two-door sedan sent bullets whizzing by them.

CHAPTER 18

Betty saw the change in her, commented upon it.

"What's got into you, all this hair brushing and baths and all that, and keeping the kitchen so neat?" Betty demanded.

"I don't know. I just—took a notion," Jennifer explained it lamely. She really did not know.

One September night was sticky and warm. It was unwonted weather for San Francisco, whose nights are always crisp and cool, and as it followed several humid days there was great complaint in the office, a run on the soda counters, and a general tendency to revived interest in iced tea.

The little girls and Betty enjoyed their usual supper of bread and chocolate milk and jam, peaches and doughnuts, with a wary sampling of salami that Betty explained had been in the icebox a week and didn't smell any toe good. But Jennifer dined on cool sliced tomatoes and lettuce with buttered crackers for supplement and a long clinking lemonade, and after dinner when the dishes were done she sat idle at the open dining-room window, looking out at a vista of back yards, lighted hot kitchens, silhouetted cats flashing mysteriously over fences in the heavy dusk. There was no air to breathe. Betty was to take the girls to a movie, but Jennifer was not in the mood to close herself for two hours in the warm dark, and preferred home and solitude.

"Maybe I'll walk around the block later." Jennifer pulled the sleazy voile of her blouse loose from her damp breasts, panted as she followed Faddy to the bathroom to comb her dark straight hair.

"Who's beautiful?" she said, kissing her. Faddy looked at her tolerantly. Nonsense like that made no impression on Faddy.

"Betty, if she gets too bored bring her back. I'll be here," she suggested.

"I won't get bored," said Faddy stanchly.

When they were gone the house was very still. Jennifer drank in the peace and solitude gratefully. To be sure, the neighboring flats were contributing their usual quota of noises: victrolas were blaring, Amos and Andy discussing their interminable troubles, children were wailing at being sent to bed while the world was still so hot and bright, kitchen poetry was clanging and rattling. Somewhere a woman was talking shrilly: "I don't care what you thought. Don't tell me what you thought...."

Suddenly the bell rang, and Jennifer gave a nervous jump and got to her feet. The dining room was dark, and for a moment or two as she turned on the hall and stair lights she felt her eyes blurred and bewildered. Then she saw that it was Eugene Evans who was coming up the stairs.

He smiled at her gravely and formally as they shook hands; Jennifer led the way back to the dining room, explaining that the windows there seemed to admit more air than the parlor windows. She realized when they were seated that such air as there was was heavily scented with French dressing, chocolate, tea. But there was no help for it now; Eugene had gotten the first impression and it would not be obliterated by moving. The room was lighted by a hanging lamp with four heavy tent-shaped slides in a mosaic of green, brown, and amber glass for a shade. From its edges hung fringes of straggling and uneven colored beads that had too often tempted the fingers of the little Slades.

"I was sitting here in the dark looking out," Jennifer said, uncomfortably anxious to get the conversation started.

"What do you see when you look out?" Eugene rose, went to the window, seriously studied for a moment the view of lighted kitchen windows and shadowy back yards.

"Well, not much!" Jennifer laughed apologetically, came to stand beside him. "But there are stars," she added hopefully.

"Yes, I see." He spoke in so strained a tone as they turned back to their chairs that the girl looked at him curiously. She saw toat the muscles of his temples were visible, like cords, and that his upper lip was beaded with sweat.

"You are thinking that this is a very extraordinary thing for me to do," he said.

"No, I'm not," Jennifer answered, gaining courage. "I'm awfully glad to see you, Eugene. I want to hear about Mollie's wedding and everything. Dan's mother died, didn't she?"

"Yes, just after Mollie gave up her job. They were planning for bridesmaids—big reception—that sort of thing. But as it was, it was very quiet, just about thirty of us—all family."

"And did Mollie look lovely?" Jennifer asked wistfully. She had been asked to the wedding as it had been originally planned, but when respect for Dan's loss had caused Mollie to change all her arrangements Jennifer's name with two hundred others had naturally been omitted from the list.

Eugene seemed to bring himself back to a realization of his surroundings with some effort.

"Yes, I believe she did," he said in his usual academic accents. Small, fair, slight, and extraordinarily young-looking for his twenty-eight years, he nevertheless had an impressive voice and manner. "I came here—" he began again, and stopped. Jennifer eyed him respectfully. "You are a woman who has an extraordinary attraction for men; you are, of course, aware of that," he said.

"Well, no—I wasn't," Jennifer stammered, startled.

Eugene got to his feet, walked to the window again, and addressed her with his face slightly turned toward his shoulder.

"I've felt very strongly," he said, "the—the danger that you are in in that office with that particular set of men and women. I didn't like it for Mollie and my father didn't like it for Mollie, but Mollie is older and she has been more or less engaged for two years to Dan. I ask you to be my wife."

The last phrase came so quietly and so unexpectedly that Jennifer could only stare at him blankly, her lips parted, her eyes wide.

"Believe me," Eugene said, his eyes blinking rapidly behind his glasses, coming over to sit opposite her at the round table, reaching across to lay a nervous, veined hand on hers, "believe me, there is nothing selfish—nothing of passion—nothing, I might almost say, personal in this. It is simply something that I have seen—that I see must be done—something predestined. Do you feel that? I've frightened you. I'"m so unutterably stupid about things like this! I have never talked to any woman in this way before."

He sat bcak, folding his arms on his chest, looking at her steadily, almost defiantly. Jennifer, her eyes stars and her cheeks scarlet, her loosened waves of hair aureouled by the lamp just above her head, looked back at him silently and was unable to say a word. Under her loose thin blouse her white soft breast rose and fell on a quickened breathing; she gave no other sign of the stupefaction that possessed her.

"Let us look at it this way," Eugene said, himself breathing more rapidly. "You are not yet nineteen. You have no father, no mother. Daily, hourly, you are exposed to the temptations that come to a beautiful girl thrown out, innocent and unprepared, into the world. I am not offering you love, although I can assure you of a deep respect and affection, which will last as long as we both live. I will—cherish you!" He broke off on a sort of cry, put his elbows on the table and his fingers over his eyes.

"I would regard your youth and innocence," he began again after a moment's silence in a quieter tone, "as a sacred trust, as something unutterably precious. You know nothing of the wickedness of the world; your eyes tell me that. May you never know it! I have never thought of myself as a husband, but I think of myself so now. Life has been different since I first saw you, Jennifer. Watching you, day after day——"

"Day after day?" she echoed faintly.

"I often have to be in the neighborhood of Tyrell's," he said in a sharp, forbidding voice, "and I see you coming out with some of the girls—no, I will not lie to you," Eugene went on sternly. "I have walked over that way—it is but a few blocks from my office—and waited to see you."

"You have!" Jennifer ejaculated in a shadow of her own voice.

"Those are not the women with whom you should be associating now," Eugene said. "You must know that. And young as you are, you need a home of your own, protected, private."

He was silent, and they looked steadily at each other in the cone of light falling from the heavy lead-veined glass shade.

Jennifer's' breath was coming fast and shallow. She did not move her eyes from Eugene's eyes. Once she swallowed with a dry throat. The temptation to confess, as old as the human heart itself, was strong upon her. Just to get rid of some of the doubt and shame by sharing it, by saying, "I was a fool. I am sorry...."

If she could have asked him: "Was it so serious? Is it a thing—as Betty says—that will mark me all my life? Might he still care for me, might he be planning to come for me someday and make it all right and cure this constant ache in my heart?"

But even while she considered it he spoke and she knew that the luxury of confession was not for her.

"You are young," he said; "you are innocence itself. You don't know the dangers of this world. There is no man who looks at you without—you are always in danger. If I thought that anyone—when I think that some man may someday destroy that innocence—may awaken you to the filth, the utter rottenness of life," Eugene went on, speaking with sudden passion, "I know that this is the course for us both to take. I ask you again to let me make you my wife."

Jennifer stood up and the man rose too. She looked at him, quite unable to find words. Eugene seized her hands; he and she were almost of a height; their eyes were level.

"You don't want to answer me now, do you? I'll see you shortly. Tomorrow night? Perhaps you would let me take you to dinner tomorrow night?"

"No. No, it's not any use," Jennifer said, suddenly finding her voice. "I can't tell you—but it wouldn't be any use! There is another man We're not engaged—nothing like that. But I couldn't let you come and take me to dinner and be kind to me . Your mother—they were all so wonderful to me—it wouldn't be fair! I wouldn't want you to think..not ever.."

"Who is this man?" Eugene asked harshly as she paused.

"You wouldn't know him. He—he comes of a very fine family; I mean they're rich—I think they are. At least," Jennifer floundered on, wondering why she had started out on this dangerous ice, "his aunt's name and his cousin's name are always in the papers—that sort of a family.."

Eugene was regarding her steadily.

"You don't want to tell me his name?" he said.

"No; because—because," she answered, jumbling her words together like a confused child, "then you'd think—and there isn't anything between us. I mean— I haven't seen him for a long time, not since the twentieth of January."

"You have the date very pat," Eugene commented dryly. Jennifer's color rushed up; she said nothing. "I want to ask you," he went on, "to put him out of your mind completely, never to see him again."

"Yes, I know," she agreed quickly and nervously. "I never will, Eugene. I haven't. I mean—I feel that way too. I only spoke of him because—because I wanted you to understand—"

"But you'll not see him again?"

If she ever had a chance to see him again, Jennifers thoughts sprang instantly into life, how she would rush into his arms! But she was a little frightened by Eugene's manner, by the painful effort with which he spoke, the sense she had that he was putting a powerful constraint upon himself.

"No, no. I never will!" she assured him nervously.

"I wish you would promise me that," Eugene said, still unsmiling and tense.

"Yes, I do promise, Eugene. And thank you for liking me," Jennifer said, looking small and young and tired at the top of the long hall stairs. He was going now; he did not touch her hand nor make any special gesture of farewell.

"You will send for me if you ever need me. I shall always feel the keenest interest in your welfare," he said. "May I see you again? I could hardly hope," he added, his manner growing more stiff and stilted with every word, "to rival in your friendship this rich young man. But perhaps you will count me as one of your most earnest well-wishers."

He was gone. Jennifer heard the door close far downstairs. She went back to the dining room and stood perfectly still in the center of the floor.

"He..That was funny," she said aloud. "How funny he is. Eugene Evans."

She put out the lights again and took up her old post on the window sill and looked out at the back yards and the fire escapes and the cindery roofs. She looked up at the stars.

"I wonder what he would think if I had lost my head over a man? A man I hardly knew. I wonder if he would ever like me again if he knew? He thinks I am innocent. But I know all about danger now and how easy life is for men and how hard for girls. I know more than you do, Eugene, for all your books and your smartness.

"He's strange," she mused on. Eugene's call had shaken her without her knowing just why. She was conscious of feeling nervous, of being glad that he had gone, of wanting to be all alone in the dark for a while. "But he's good. The only thing he wants is for everyone to be good. It would be a funny world—his kind of a world, with exeryone being good.

"I'd be Mollie's sister if I married Eugene. It would be wonderful to belong to them all, to go in and out of that house and have his father and mother learn to love me. I'd be good then too. I know just how good and generous and gentle I could be. I suppose any girl could be that way if she was happy, if she had someone loving her—someone she loved, if she had a lovely little apartment....and dates for parties and things. Christmas. giving each other presents and maybe going over to the big house for dinner. And children someday...."

She was down on her knees, her forehead against the window sill, he hands pressing her wet cheeks, her whole body shaken with the violence of sudden crying.

Certain girls plodded away in offices year after year. They grew bored with office confinement, with the forced propinquity of uncongenial persons; they wearied of lunches packed in bags, of wet feet and cold fingers, of dry warm summery streets where chaff and papers and dust held a dance every afternoon.

Yet they went on and on. Why? Why, just to earn the little money that enabled them to go on and on. The absurdity of it began to impress Jennifer strongly; her spirit rose against it. All the young women she knew were in the same position; they did work they actively disliked for endless hours to win just food and bed and clothing with an occasional Saturday-night party or Sunday expedition for reward.

Desperately determined not to be cheated of their birthright, the office girls were eternally planning festivities. They were like life-term prisoners with nothing to lose in plotting escape. Jennifer heard of dances that were gayer than they were safe, of hikes, starting on Sunday morning, that lasted well into Monday morning, of affairs at night clubs and roadhouses down the Peninsula that ended with the boys angry and frustrated, and the outraged girls returning by bus. Sometimes there had been an accident on Sunday night—fenders bumped, glass smashed, somebody's arm broken or somebody's nose cut. And always the girls were buying apparel; if only a new bra or a pair of stockings, every girl went shopping and added something to her wardrobe every week.

Jennifer shared none of this. She had entered the office young and shy, and while liked and laughed at and quite at home with them all there now, she was not included in the other girls' amusements. They felt that she was just a little superior to them all, without her ever betraying any consciousness of it herself. After all, her home was as poor as the poorest of their homes could be, her pay was the lowest in the scale, her clothes were the cheapest. Yet there was something innately fine about her, a gentleness, a niceness that checked them when they might have told certain stories or discussed certain topics before her, and Jennifer's simple answer, "My father was an inventor," when they asked her about her family, impressed them more than she knew.

"Carol," she said one day, "how do people get rich?"

Carol was a blowsy, emotional, oversized girl who had taken Mollie's place. She laughed.

"Oh Lord," she said, "ask me! How do I know? There are rich people and there are poor people and there always will be, and that's all I know about it."

"But poor people do get rich, Carol?" Jennifer ventured.

Leaders Entertain Chicago, Detroit in Saturday Frays

Red Wings Travel to Boston Sunday and Hawks Take on Rangers

By HARRY ECCLES

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The two Canadian teams who share the National Hockey League leadership as of this reading will both be in action tonight, and they're both idle Sunday night—an unusual feature of the schedule which could easily see both of them deposed.

Tonight the Toronto Maple Leafs entertain the Chicago Black Hawks and the Montreal Canadiens are at home to the Detroit Red Wings. Chicago and Detroit both have another weekend game — Chicago taking on the New York Rangers and Detroit travelling to Boston.

Probably with an eye on today's Grey Cup rugby final between Winnipeg Blue Bombers and the Argonauts at Toronto, the N.H.L. coaches have been very chary of speeches about the weekend games, and it's just as start, Toronto and Montreal are tied with 19 points. Boston is third with 17, Detroit fourth with 16, New York has 12, Chicago holds the cellar with 11.

The standings mean very little in this closest of early-season N.H.L. races. Chicago for instance walloped the Leafs 5-2 in Chicago Wednesday night, and the Leafs are leaving no stone unturned to make sure it doesn't happen again right on their own ice tonight at Maple Leaf Gardens.

The Leaf board of strategy has concentrated on strengthening the attack. The idea is as old as the hills but it still works, they hope. That is, attack, and attack, and attack.

Happy Day entrains tonight for Boston to see the Bruins-Wings encounter there Sunday night. The Leafs' board of strategy take things very seriously at this stage and Day will also scout the Tuesday game between Hawks and Canadiens at Montreal before returning to the bench for Leafs' Wednesday game in Boston.

Sports Roundup

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 30 —(CP)— Sigh for the good old days when all a sport writer needed to hit the bigtime was a suitcase full of snappy similes..offhand, television doesn't sound like much of a threat to the press pews, but take it from Frank (N.Y. Journal-American) Coniff, a romantic profile soon will be more marketable than facile fingers on a typewriter..for, as Frank points out, television brings the ringside scribes "right into your living room along with the prize fight." ..Writers no longer will be able to snooze blithely through the lazy stretches of an obvious "turkey" the Journal-American columnist notes with alarm, and the "won't be able to tell the ever-loving wife that they're embrolled at the big fight while really promoting woo with the change pace."

Oh Fudge

Pie Taylor, one of baseball's greatest third sackers with Pittsburgh Pirates, was a classic example of the performer who seldom resorted to profanity..he was thrown out of a ball game only once, and umpire Bill Klem who pulled the watch on him, insists he did it for therapeutic refsons..."I had to do it to let him recover from his illness," says Klem roguishly.. "pie came up to me one day and in a very polite voice he said, 'I'm geeting sick and tired of your silly decisions.'"

Around The Circuit

Few United States football players ever exercised the combined hold on the public fancy that Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis enjoyed during the last three years with Army..assault will be a better horse next year than he was in 1946.."Given his chance to run down the stretch, he can run over anything I've seen around," says trainer Max Hirsch. "He might slip past the $650,000 or the $700,000 mark next year with any luck."..Whirlaways all-time mark is a little more than $5..,000.

STOP COACHING

Pacific Mentor Says He Has 15 to 20 Years More of Active Service

Hykkon, Calif., Nov. 30 (AP)—The college of the Pacific suggested today that it might be better for Amos Alonzo Stagg, 84-year-old dean of United States football coaches, to step down after more than half a century of active coaching but left the decision up to him.

Taking official notice of recurrent reports that the veteran coach was nearing the end of his active work on the gridiron, James H. Corsom, the college's dean of personnel, said:

"We feel that it would possibly be better for him, the boys, and the school if he let someone else take over the active coaching of the team, but that decision has to come from M . Stagg."

Corson said Stagg and Dr. Tully C. Knoles, chancellor of the college, had been negotiating regarding the coach's activities with the team next year.

"Any statement in this matter must come from Chancellor Knoles." Knoles was away from the college today.

Stagg came to the college of the Pacific in 1933 under a verbal contract. He was 70 then, the retirement age at the University of Chicago, where he spent more than 40 years as coach and physical director.

"I feel good for 15 to 20 years more of active service," he said then. "I am not content to step out."

Oil Switch Fails, Employees Use Long Flights Stairs

Toronto, Nov. 30 —(CP)— Early arrivals in some downtown buildings and night employees had to walk up and down long flights of stairs today after an oil switch failed in a 550-volt feeder line of the Toronto Hydro System. Out-of-shape editors of The Canadian Press puffed their way up 11 flights in the Metropolitan Building at Adelaide and Victoria streets.

The trouble was corrected for one section of buildings using the feeder line just before the heavy 9 a.m. influx of office workers. Another section, south of King Street, was expected to be cleared of trouble later in the morning.

DOUBLE-DECK BUSES QUIT

New York, Nov. 30 (AP).—Fifth avenue's open-top, double-deck buses soon will take their place with the memories of the "used-to-be" New York. Beginning tomorrow, the ancient buses, as much a symbol of this city as the Manhattan skyline and the subway, will give way to the first of the new single-deck buses with semi-individual, plush-covered seats, indirect lighting and ventilating systems.

LEGION BY 6-5

Chapple Young, Defenceman of Winners, Receives Broken Nose

Brantford, Nov. 30 (CP) — Brantford Redmen last night outlasted the Oshawa Legion to win 6-5 when the players of both teams were worn out after fast game. The Brants lost their defence man Chapple Young, who received a broken nose and went to hospital for treatment.

The Oshawans sparked by former General juniors won the first period 4-3, the Brants evening up in the second by outscoring the Oshawa brood 2-1. They scored the only goal of the third period to take the lead and then fended off the desperate sallies of the Oshawans led by White who was the outstanding player on the ice.

Oshawa—Goal, Barriage; defence, Hinton and Murphy; centre, White; wings, Furey and Peters. Subs, Jackson, J McMullen, Tisdale, A. McMullen, Barker, Awyer.

Brantford—Goal, Cockburn; defence, Smith and Young; centre, Barisky; wings, Wiacek and Hewson; alternatives, Pidgeon, Linn, Campbell, Wilson, Esto, Caddy, Torti.

Referees: Dunn, Hamilton, Riley, Brantford.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 30 (CP)—Spare a thought for the steeplechase riders. Their business is risky.

Ian Coster, sports columnist for the London Evening Standard, says that for sheer pluck these "jumping jockeys" make ice-hockey players look almost effeminate."

"It isn't the prominent riders who take most of the risks, but the boys in the ruck who cannot select their mounts but are willing to ride anything on four legs —even though it will probably fall at the first fence," Coster wrote.

He instanced the case of Jim Brogan, Irishman who rode recently at Liverpool Brogan has broken his collar-bone 16 times yet comes back for more.

Three men, all winners of the Grand National over the treacherous Aintree course, joined the R.A.F. at the outbreak of the war and all lost their lives. They were Mervyn Jones, who rode Bogskar; R. Everett, who piloted Gregalach home in 1929 and Frank Furlong, who won on Reynoldstown in 1935 and shouted merrily "who says a black horse can't win!"

"Danger was the spice of life to them and it is no wonder they took to flying," Coster said.

Flat racing in England next year will be back to pre-war volume with five tracks—Sandown Park, Kempton Park, Alexandra Park, Bogside and Chepstow—back in operation.

The season opens March 24 at Lincoln and ends Nov. 22 at Manchester and Lingfield. Ascot will have three two-day meetings in addition to the three-day Royal meeting in June.

It is estimated 140,000 visitors, nearly the population of Ottawa, will invade London for the 1948 Olympic Games. Swedish tourists plan to live on their ships in the Thames and two prefabricated "villages" for the 5,000 athletics and officials are projected for the area around Wembley Stadium, scene of the Games.

The government has already assured the organizing committee these buildings will be available.

Sixteen events open to British professional golfers, including the Open and Irish championships, will make the 1947 calendar the biggest in the game's history.

The Open will be held at Hoylake June 30-July 4 and the Irish Open at Portrush July 14. Bobby Locke of South Africa, most successful tournament player this season, has promised to return.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 30 — (CP) — Kingarvie, the big chestnut winner of the King's Plate last May, is going campaigning in Florida again, to run on the tracks where last year he did his training for the Plate race.

Just when he goes depends on the United States coal strike and how it affects rail transportation but Arthur Brent, trainer for owner R. S. McLaughlin of Oshawa, is all set with Kingarvie and several other Parkwood stable horses including Moldy, a King's Plate candidate who will have a chance to duplicate Kingarvie's feat.

Brent figures Kingarvie's southern preparation for the plate was perfect and after winning the Canadian championship this fall the chestnut son of Teddy Wrack is due for competition among racing's older boys.

Here and there:

Bill Cook, the ex-New York Ranger great, picks Chuck Conacher, Aurel Joliat and Howie Morenz as the forward line for his all-time all-star team. Back of them he puts Eddie Shore, Ching Johnson and George Hainsworth. In Office Sunday

Mexico City, Nov. 30 — (AP) —Miguel Aleman, whose platform stresses industrialization based mainly on private initiative, will become the first civilian president in Mexico's history tomorrow.

The 43-year-old former lawyer, the country's second youngest president, will be inaugurated at noon in Mexico's cultural centre, the white marble Palacia de Bellas Artes, in the presence of outgoing President Manuel Avila Camacho and some 3,000 other persons.

Aleman, in politics only sixteen years, defeated three opponents last July 7 in what Mexicans termed the first national election in which votes really were counted. Backed by Gen. Avila Camacho and the powerful government party (Institutional Revolutionary Party — P.R.I.), he outpolled Azequiel Padilla of the New Democratic Party, four to one. Aleman had been secretary of the interior, and Padilla secretary of foreign affairs in Avila Camacho's cabinet.

The Mexican president serves six years at a yearly salary and expenses totalling $24,216.

Canada will be represented at the inauguration audience by Hugh I. Keenleyside, the Dominion's Ambassador to Mexico, who
